Engineers Return To Work Today

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Canadian National Railway engineers in Belleville returned to their jobs this morning, ending a wildcat strike which has crippled CN service since last Thursday.

Engineers also returned to work in Toronto, Ottawa and Niagara Falls, the only other centres at which they were still idle.

Ian Brady, acting on behalf of the Belleville local of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE), said members were prepared to return to their jobs at midnight.

"However there were some assignment problems to be worked out," stalling the return until 7 a.m., he said.

A CN official said today traffic controllers are now sorting out the priorities of which trains must move first. In Toronto, CN officials are "hopeful" normal service will be resumed by Sunday. Passenger service — particularly between Montreal and Toronto — is a "priority" said one official.

In a written release the local union said today communication between the members and management was damaged by union negotiators.

"We attribute part of the problem between the company and BLE members in Belleville, Toronto, Ottawa and Niagara Falls to the inadequate and deceptive representation of those members by the union negotiating committee", said Mr. Brady.

"Under the present union rules . . . the members do not have a vote in ratifying their collective bargaining agreements", he said. "We are taking steps to right the situation".

The central issue of the walkout was a 15 percent cost of living raise that members thought they would receive Jan. 1. They were subsequently told the raise would not take effect until May 1.

The Friday midnight vote here to return to work followed a dismissal Friday by the Canada Labor Relations Board for an application to invalidate the contract of which the May 1 cost of living is one clause.

After hearing arguments from lawyers representing the railway, the national leaders of the union and the local chairmen who submitted the application, board chairman Marc Lapointe ruled that the bid had no merit and substance.

Earlier, the board's jurisdiction in the case had been challenged by Maurice Wright, lawyer for the union's national leaders. His argument was supported by the railway.

The application was brought to the board by six local chairmen of the union who say they were misled into believing that on Jan. 1 their members would receive full terms of a new contract negotiated for 100,000 workers.

"We have been assured by the company that meaningful negotiations will take place immediately", said Mr. Brady.

The events of the last week have created an upheaval in union ranks and "re-alignment and revision of the union powers and regulations is now being considered", he said.

Canadians Warned This Is Tough Year

MONTREAL (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau warned Friday night that 1975 is going to be a tough year as Canadians face rising inflation and social unrest.

"Though we know Canada is growing faster than every industrialized country, we're still way below capacity. This means we won't continue to become as rich as quickly as before.

"This will create tensions in our society, and already we are seeing these tensions at work," Mr. Trudeau told 3,000 Liberal party supporters at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner.

The tensions created by inflation and the changing social order are causing insecurity as people become worried about law and order, looking to government for solutions, he said.

"But there are no easy solutions," he added and "nobody trusts anybody anymore in government. The atmosphere of Watergate has polluted the atmosphere of all democratic governments."

Five Held For Deaths In Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — Five persons were arrested Friday in connection with the Jan. 21 deaths of 13 persons at a north-east-district night club, a police spokesman said.

"I won't talk about it," the spokesman said. "The five have been caught. The case is closed. The killings have been resolved and you will learn all about it at the inquest."

The spokesman was referring to an inquest, headed by Cyrille Delage, Quebec fire commissioner, to begin Wednesday.

The police spokesman said four men and one woman, all described as middle-aged, were arrested in raids Friday afternoon and evening.

U.S. Oil Tariff Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the first part of President Ford's energy program already in effect, congressional Democrats continue to criticize his policy and suggest alternative proposals.

Import tariffs on crude oil went up today by $1 a barrel. This move, which Democrats in Congress are working to overturn, is the first step in Ford's plan to discourage petroleum demand by raising the price.

Picked Fights, Got Beatings

TORONTO (CP) — Two former Toronto jail prisoners, who apparently picked fights with fellow prisoners, have told a royal commission studying allegations of guard brutality that they were beaten by guards and placed in solitary confinement.

Roderick Southam, 21, testified Friday he was punched by guards and put in segregation last April 30 after a fellow prisoner, Bruce Conway, 20, punched him in a dispute over cards.

Earlier evidence given by former guard Gary Dassy showed that after Conway and Southam were taken to solitary confinement, Daniel Charette, 19, a friend of Conway, kicked another prisoner in the face so he would be placed in the segregation area with Conway.

Although Charette disagreed with the former guard's testimony, he agreed that guards picked him out of the corridor after the kicking incident and guard Charles Casey took him to solitary in an armlock.

He said Mr. Casey held him in a headlock while six other guards punched him, including Mr. Dassy—the "biggest sadist of them all at the time"—who used large jail keys as brass knuckles.

Report Tabled

Second Toronto Airport Essential

OTTAWA (CP) — A second international airport at Toronto is required to give Ontario an air transport system "essential" to the province's strong economic base, a federal report says.

The report, tabled in the Commons Friday by Transport Minister Jean Marchand, calls for a quick start on the proposed Pickering airport planned for a location northeast of Metropolitan Toronto.

The cabinet met for 50 minutes prior to the tabling to consider the report and Mr. Marchand told reporters afterward that more study is needed before the government makes a final decision on whether to go ahead with the project.

The inquiry, under Mr. Justice Hugh F. Gibson of the Federal Court of Canada, said the Pickering airport "will assist in implementing the design of the province of Ontario for the Toronto centred region" and would have "a beneficial economic impact on the region."

It concluded that a 1973 decision to build a second international airport at Toronto "was the correct decision," and rejected arguments from citizens' groups in the Pickering region who say the proposed airport location is badly chosen.

10 Aldermen Voice Objection

TORONTO (CP) — Ten city aldermen sent a telegram to the federal cabinet Friday, urging it to scrap plans for construction of an international airport at nearby Pickering.

The aldermen said the new airport would lead to the "permanent distortion of growth toward simultaneous sprawl and centralization" in the Toronto region.

Final Decision On Algonquin Not Made Yet

PETAWAWA, Ont. (CP) A final decision on the Ontario government's master plan for Algonquin Park has not yet been reached, says a spokesman for Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier.

"Our idea is to make Algonquin the average man's wilderness, so we don't want to keep people out," Mr. Maeck (PC—Parry Sound) told a Renfrew North Progressive Conservative luncheon.

Transport Board May Review Rates

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission decided Friday to plunge on with the complicated freight rate case even though the railways are taking the rate issue to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The commission reserved decision late Friday on what action it will take on a Federal Court of Approval recommendation to review the freight rate case which affects about 52,000 shippers.

David Jones, chairman of the railway transport committee, said the commission will make a decision within a few days despite a railway request to postpone the issue until after the Supreme Court hearing.

Earlier Friday, the Supreme Court informed the railways their bid for leave to appeal a portion of the Federal Court ruling will be heard Feb. 17.

The railways are seeking permission to appeal the Federal Court recommendation that the commission look again at the freight rate case.

The Federal Court said in the same decision last Saturday that the commission did not have the power to postpone the effective date of half the 25-percent rail freight increase to March 1 from Jan. 1.

Mohawk Dissidents Seek New Election

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TYENDINAGA — Dissident Mohawks here say they will approach Ottawa officials in their fight for a new election.

Meetings are currently being arranged with Ottawa officials, "to apply pressure on minister of Indian Affairs Judd Buchanan to grant Tyendinaga an election by custom," said Brant Maracle, speaking for the dissidents.

Tyendinaga has been embroiled in controversy since last September with the announcement of a firm locating on the reserve. Chief William Brant made the announcement and since then has defended the corporation. He has been continually criticized by a group to 120 dissidents for allowing the intrusion of a business onto the reserve.

Because of this reaction to the firm, which currently is producing shoe parts for Bata Footwear, minister Judd Buchanan came to Kingston and told reserve residents how to apply for election by custom.

Mr. Maracle said Friday, the minister's requirements for an election by custom had been met and that the response to a referendum showed Tyendinaga residents in favor of the new election.

According to Mr. Maracle's figures, 116 were in favor of an election while 11 were opposed.

Mr. Buchanan has been notified of the referendum results but has not yet replied, said Mr. Maracle.

"Mr. Buchanan lacks sensitivity to the native problem," said Mr. Maracle.

Thursday night a general meeting called by council to giving council regulatory powers over the use of public and private building, added fuel to the protest.

The bylaw resembles a municipal zoning and minimum maintenance bylaw, Mr. Maracle said: "We don't want to give coming generations, lands that are laden with taxes and encumbered with provincial and municipal regulations. We don't want a municipality on the reserve."

At that meeting Thursday, Chief Brant said dissidents represent only 25 percent of the reserve population and that he has the support of the majority.

"I defy him (chief Brant) to take his case to the people because he knows he will lose," said Mr. Maracle.

Mr. Maracle said the bylaw "violates that Canadian Bill of Rights and the Mohawk's personal dignity."

"The bylaw will be tested whenever council tries to enforce it," said Mr. Maracle.

Alberta and Shell Oil Ltd. Will Join Syncrude Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Talks to determine the future of the troubled Syncrude oil stands project in Alberta are to continue in Winnipeg Monday, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Friday.

After a three-hour meeting here with top executives of the consortium — Imperial Oil Ltd., Gulf Canada Ltd. and Canada Cities Service Ltd. — Mr. Macdonald said the Winnipeg meeting would also include Alberta government and Shell Canada Ltd. representatives.

The announcement from Mr. Macdonald came only six hours before the midnight deadline set by the Syncrude consortium to cancel the project unless they obtained additional financing of $1 billion.

"While no final conclusions were reached at the meeting, participants were sufficiently encouraged by progress to agree to a further meeting," Mr. Macdonald said in a one-paragraph statement following the talks.

The consortium's chief spokesman, Jack Armstrong of Imperial Oil Ltd., refused to add anything to the statement read by Mr. Macdonald.

B.C. Police to Think More of Aiding People

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the British Columbia Police Commission says police officers should think of themselves more as peace officers trying to help people in trouble and less as crime fighters intent on arresting lawbreakers.

"I want the policeman to really feel that he's a worthy professional, doing a positive job in the community," said John Hogarth, who was asked to head the commission after he guided the writing of a new B.C. Police Act.

Mr. Hogarth, a former university law professor, is trying to persuade municipal and provincial governments to hire more policemen.

We hove to have enough policemen to do the traditional work before we can get them to do the crime prevention," he said in an interview.

Policemen in the province number 4,300 at present. Of these, 2,900 are RCMP officers—700 under the direction of the federal government, 1,100 hired by municipalities too small to form their own forces and 1,100 hired by the provincial government to cover unorganized territory.

The other 1,400 police officers are in 12 municipal forces, of which Vancouver has the largest with 850.

"We could justify asking for 1,758 to bring us up to the national average," Mr. Hogarth said, but the commission wants only 800 more, half of them for municipal forces.

The commission does not control the administration of forces in B.C.—that job is left either to the municipal police commissions in the 12 municipalities that have their own forces, or the RCMP.

Rather, the commssion has power to set standards, do research, recruit and train policemen for the municipal forces and act as an appeal board in discipline matters.

It will be able to draw on provincial funds for municipal police training. The commission's police college will begin operating with a class of 100 in March, with new classes to follow every 10 weeks.

Within two years, the college is scheduled to move from temporary quarters to a new $14-million criminal justice centre in Vancouver's West End.

Recruits will be given 10 weeks of training, followed by 10 weeks with a police force under the supervision of a field instructor. After another 10 weeks at school, they will work for about 1½ years in the field, finishing off with 10 more weeks at the college.

The commission is sponsoring retraining programs for supervisors, sergeants and the present constables.

"All this training of new recruits won't work, if at the end of it all, a hard-bitten old sergeant says, 'look sonny, I don't care what you were taught, this is the way we're doing it around here.' "

Mr. Hogarth is one of two commissioners named thus far (Rev. Robert Burrows, a United Church minister, is the other). A third person will be named to replace RCMP Assistant Commissioner Gordon Cunningham who declined the appointment by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald in April.

Fears were expressed in the legislature during the debate on the police act that the commission would be one of "bleeding hearts."

TAKES TOUGH LINE

But Mr. Hogarth has turned out to be somewhat of a hard-liner. As well as calling for more policemen, he has asked for strict enforcement of drug laws and proposed a plan to detain dangerous juveniles.

Tax Tips

The Family Allowance cheques received for our children are made out to my wife. Does this mean she must report the payments as income?

ANSWER:

Not necessarily. The law requires that the individual who claims a personal exemption on behalf of a child for whom the payments are received must report the payments as income. If neither parent claims an exemption, the person to whom the cheques are made out must report the income. For further information, refer to Item 7 of the Income Tax Guide provided with your income tax return.

QUESTION:

When filing my tax return, should interest be declared in the year it is earned or the year it is received?

ANSWER:

You may report interest as income either when you become entitled to receive it, or when you actually receive it, but you must follow the same method regularly from year to year.

QUESTION:

My employer pays me an allowance to cover my board and room while I am working at distant work sites away from my ordinary place of residence where I support my wife and family. Previously, I was told that this had to be included in income for income tax purposes because I was not a construction worker. I understand that this no longer applies. Is this correct?

ANSWER:

Yes. This exempting provision now applies to all workers employed at a distant work site providing they meet the other necessary conditions.

tax tips take two ok

QUESTION:

I understand that I am no longer required to report interest income unless the total amount I receive in the year is in excess of $1,000. Is this correct?

ANSWER:

No. All interest income received must be reported as in prior years. However, you may be entitled to an offsetting deduction equal to the amount of certain types of interest income reported up to a maximum deduction of $1,000. To determine the amount which you may deduct and the type of interest income eligible for this deduction, please refer to Item 35 of the Income Tax Guide provided with your income tax return and Schedule 4 or the return package.

QUESTION:

Can a father deduct babysitting fees from his income?

ANSWER:

Child care expense can be deducted by the father if, during the year, he was single, widowed, divorced or separated by Court Order. He may also make the deduction if the mother is incapable of caring for herself or the children or if she is confined for 14 days or more to bed, hospital, wheelchair, mental hospital or prison. The father's deduction is limited to $15 per week for each child up to $60 per week. The same limitations of $500 per child or $2,000 per year for the whole family also apply in this case.

tax tips take four ok

QUESTION:

I received interest income from several sources in 1974, however, the total amount which was received was less than $1,000. May I claim a deduction equal to my total interest income?

ANSWER:

Possibly. However, interest income from certain specific sources does not qualify for this deduction. Before making any deduction, please review Schedule 4 of your income tax return which should answer any question you may have in connection with eligible or ineligible sources of interest income.

Lucas Trial Continues

Police Recount Details of Brawl

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

Belleville City police Constable Gerry Bull testified in county court Friday that he was at the scene of a street fight last summer in the Hillcrest area for only about forty seconds before being knocked unconscious. He added he was off work for two weeks as a result.

Evidence disclosed that the blow was caused by a 20-inch pipe wrench striking him in the back of the head.

Constable Bull was appearing to give evidence in the case of the five Lucas Brothers charged individually and separately with a number of charges relating to assault causing bodily harm, possession of a dangerous weapon and assault causing bodily harm with intent to wound. All five have pleaded not guilty.

Friday's all-day session was the second day of the trial before a jury and Judge Russell C. Honey. Crown-attorney is Ken Stubbington of Cobourg while Malcolm Robb is defence counsel representing the brothers.

The brothers and their charges are: Eric, 22, Gordon, 33, and Claude Lucas, 36, all charged with assault causing bodily harm; Leonard, 37, assault causing bodily harm and possession of a dangerous weapon and Larry, 25, assault causing bodily harm, possession of a dangerous weapon and assault causing bodily harm with intent to wound.

Constable Bull told the court Friday that he and officer Constable Joseph Meldrum, arrived at a McFarlane St. residence about 5:30 p.m. Aug. 17.

Constable Bull said that when they arrived he noticed a police cruiser and half-ton pickup truck already at the scene and a fight in progress.

He said he saw Constable Paul Smith, who along with Constable Ken Gutoskie were first on the scene, in a fight with two of the Lucas brothers. Constable Bull added that he got out of the cruiser before it had even stopped and went to Smith's assistance.

He said he was fighting with Claude Lucas and that at one point he pushed Claude backwards to get him off him. The next thing he remembered he testified was being on his back, facing backwaards unable to move.

Constable Bull said he was taken to hospital by ambulance and stayed there until 11 a.m. the next day. He said he was off duty for two weeks as a result of his injuries.

Also testifying Friday was Constable Joseph Meldrum, who said that Constable Bull got out of the car before it had even stopped and ran or walked quickly to give assistance to Constable Smith who was fighting with two Lucas brothers.

Also testifying were the other constable who arrived later at the scene, Constables Murrille Roy, George Archer, and Garnet Goodwin. City police Sergeant William Armstrong also testified.

The dispatcher in the police station at the time of the occurrence, James Thomas testified that he received a call at 5.11 p.m. Saturday Aug. 17 by an unidentified person to check on some unknown trouble at a McFarlane Dr. residence. Earlier evidence revealed that Constables Smith and Gutoskie were first on the scene.

The trial continues.

Education Beat

Health Care Major Issue

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The question of who should be responsible for health care in the schools has vexed boards of education for years.

Boards believe it is the responsibility of the ministry of health. The ministry of health has been quite content to leave it with the ministry of education, from which the funds to pay school nurses come.

Hastings county board of education moved recently to force the issue. It terminated the employment of four nurses who work in the county high schools. They will be finished at the end of the school year in June.

Discussions and negotiations on the subject of turning school health care over to the ministry of health have gone on for years. Six years ago the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit took over the contract for elementary school nurses. But the board was still paying for nurses in the high schools until the decision to end their employment in June.

High schools will not be without the services of school nurses next year. The health unit is seeking permission to include their salaries in its budget. If it is received, and it appears likely to, the health unit will staff the secondary schools with nurses.

Each school nurse served several high schools, and so was not in any one school at all times. This created problems when students became ill at school and couldn't go home until the buses left. One superintendent estimated that there are three or four students in any school's sick room daily, with no adult attendant to look after them.

The board is considering hiring health attendants for high schools on a paraprofessional basis. These would be mature women, not nurses or nursing assistants. The decision to hire a paraprofessional as sick room attendant will probably become the responsibility of individual principals.

County Students Off to Quebec

BLOOMFIELD — French culture in Canada will gain new meaning for students of Kente and Queen Elizabeth elementary schools this year through an exchange program with pupils from Quebec says Suzanne Pryde, a teacher st Queen Elizabeth school, Picton.

Mrs. Pryde says preparations for the exchange program began last year under the co-ordination of she and Carl Wood, vice-principal of Kente School in Ameliasburg.

Sixteen students from each school will visit Quebec but all pupils will benefit from the expereince of their classmates she predicts.

In the spring, 32 students from Quebec will visit Prince Edward County.

With the active support of the staffs of Kente and Queen Elizabeth schools students are organizing various fund-raising projects to cover transportation costs. During their three-day visit to Quebec they will be billetted with their French speaking hosts.

"The experience of living with a French-speaking family for a weekend, sharing in the household activities and life should be truly enriching," says Mrs. Pryde.

"As well as visiting and exploring some of the historical and geographical sites of Quebec the students will develop socially from the interaction of an exchange and will have a unique opportunity to develop friendships which may last a lifetime", she observed in a recent publication of The Forum, a board of education news release.

Manger Robbed

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Gerrit van Til, manager of a Milk store, was robbed at gun-point on his way to a bank to make a night deposit. Mr. van Til left the store for the bank two doors away. As he reached for the keys to the night safe a red half-ton pickup truck stopped beside him. The passenger aimed what appeared to be a gun and motioned toward the deposit bag. He threw the bag containing $601 into the cab and ran back to the store.

University Offers Course To Prospective Farmers

HALIFAX (CP) — If you listen to Dr. William Carson, head of the agricultural engineering department at Nova Scotia Technical College, (NSTC) the golden age of agriculture is just around the corner.

Dr. Carson, who began his department with no students five years ago, says there soon will be a big demand throughout North America for students of agriculture.

In his opinion, "agriculture will become an even more important industry as Canadian farmers work to fill our national commitment and our commitments abroad."

Dr. Carson's students all have completed three-year courses at the Nova Scotia Agricultural College in Truro, N.S., and spend two years at NSTC before graduating with a bachelor's degree of science (engineering). Two more years of practical work will qualify each as a professional engineer in the field."

Dr. Carson is a former dairy farmer who came to Halifax following research work at the University of Idaho. He said he believes students learn by doing and he has research trial projects on several large farms in the province.

They learn soil and water conservation, which means designing drainage systems, irrigation systems, small dams and erosion control systems on farms.

They learn the present designs of many pumps, conveyors, electrical plants and other systems which are in use and seek ways to improve them to make farming more efficient.

Dr. Carson said there is always a high demand for innovations in the design of new farm machinery.

The students and their professors are well under way in the design of a new machine which will be used to plant cereal grains such as wheat, oats and barley early enough so they can be harvested before the usual fall rains.

It is a device on three wheels that literally punches the seed into the ground and will be used in seeding trials in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick soon.

Council Change Welcome Move

By AL ZABAS
Staff Preporter

Starting in February, the mayor's gavel will usher all council meetings into ppen session and thereby signal the end to an existing policy of holding purportedly closed committee of the whole sessions.

To date, discussions during committee sessions fell only on the ears of the press and not of the general public over radio airwaves.

From Feb. 10 and every two weeks thereafter, all council business will be open to the public, provided a still imprecisely defined council policy permits the broadcasting of the one-hour committee of the whole meetings that will be held prior to the regular sessions.

If this shift in policy concerning procedures is intended to make council accessible to public ears, a step has been taken in the right direction.

However, judging by recent talk over the changes, one must wonder whether this will indeed be the case.

Over the past weeks, councillors spent more time in considering not the change that will be made in aid of more efficient proceedings, but in the implications of airing their views more publicly.

The distinction is significant. One can only infer that council would rather continue with a former policy.

As late as last year, council indicated its preference for cloaking its business in "confidentiality". It ineffectually barred the press from reported committee of the whole discussion.

Given this tendency, its move this week would then be interpreted as radical shift in policy. Council's thoughts will now be public.

What is worrisome is that more than one council member has indicated that frank discussions will proportionally decline as public disclosure of discussion increases.

Councillors will become timorous if their actions are better known, they say.

It will be more difficult to tread the thin line of non-offensiveness to as many pressure groups as can be identified, they say.

One gets the impression that council feels the public is waiting and watching, like a buzzard circling high in the mists, ready to swoop down to tear at any decision.

If this is the case, and barring the usual number of exceptions, it's plainly a sad state of affairs.

Although it may be damnably difficult, Trenton citizens must now indicate their interest and concern over what occurs in council chambers. Some pressure must be applied to get council to continue this recently instituted practice past the three-month trial period.

Meetings, now further opened, should remain open.

Lots to Learn About Light

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

The most important single element in indoor light gardening is also the most misunderstood and burgeoned with contradictions. In other words, in spite of all that's been researched and written, the more you get into the study of light the more you're going to discover conflict and confusion, especially if you compare the contents of the catalogues of competitive fluorescent tube manufacturers.

They'll provide you with such seemingly appropos information as spectral charts comparing their products with sunlights, with statistics on lumens, footcandles and wave lengths. All of which is interesting background information to what you really need to know: the specific effects of specific flourecent tubes of a certain length, and incandescent bulbs of specific wattages, on what you are trying to grow in your light gardening set-up. And there's only one way you're going to gather such information. By finding out for yourself, by experimenting in your light garden with your seeds, seedlings and plants.

I'll be happy to provide you with certain data I've learned from my indoor light gardening activities. But in the long run, you and only you can determine your personal light requirements according to what you are planning to grow, where and when. And each time you change either the plant material, the location, or the timing, your requirements will change accordingly.

For example, I've been involved in indoor light gardening for about 10 years. But this year I'm into something new; a germination and growth chamber that will support about 10,000 plants under a combination of 104, cool white, and "growth" fluorescents" and incandescents. And I'll be experimenting with light like crazy. Which incidentally, brings me to one tip I can pass on to you. Don't get all excited every time a new, so-called "growth" tube comes on the market, with reports of remarkable results generated by its use. It's true that one type of "growth" tube may affect one type of plant material more than another. But then again, an inexpensive cool-white may be all you need for another type of plant. And still another may prefer a fair proportion of the spectrum provided by incandescent or ordinary light bulbs.

So if you're just starting out in indoor light gardening, why not make this a learning year. Start with only one or two types of seed or plant material and grow some under cool-white tubes, others under tubes. Try and keep all other conditions — temperature, moisture and humidity the same — and see what you come up with, particularly in terms of results. It could be interesting.

Farm Law Bulletin Issued

EDMONTON (CP) — The University of Alberta has published a new extension bulletin, Principles of Farm Law for Alberta Farmers.

Edited by Professors M. J. Sychuk of the faculty of law and T. A. Petersen of the department of agriculture economics and rural sociology, the publication provides general legal principles to help farmers decide on the kind and amount of special legal advice and service they can profitably use.

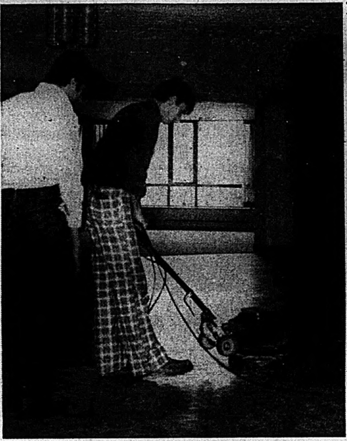
Dr. Petersen said the growing complexity of the farm business has created a need for farm managers to understand the basic principles of law which may affect their business.

The trend toward larger farms suggests the need for a general knowledge of real property law, perhaps partnership and incorporation law and contract law to cover the possibilities of legal problems in land leasing, purchase or other forms of business arrangements involving land assembly and consolidation. There is also the matter of a farmer's legal rights when oil-well drilling or right of way for highways, power lines and pipelines is considered.

"Increasing dependence on non-family employees for farm labor also increases the probability of legal responsibilities arising out of negligence on the part of the employees as the farmer's agents in farm business activities."

Modern farmers purchase an increasing proportion of their inputs outside the farm and Dr. Petersen said "this calls for farmers' broader comprehension of the legal aspects of contractual arrangements in the purchase of equipment and supplies, especially when credit is involved."

Growing farm units tended to lead to larger estates, resulting in estate planning and asset transfer problems from one generation to the next and finally, "there are the legal aspects of increasingly complex income tax legislation."



The Finishing Touch

Workers put the finishing touches on auditorium floor of the new Prince Edward County home for the aged in Picton. Local residents will have an opportunity to tour the facility during an open house this weekend.

Local Talent Needs Boost

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Clogged with craft shops and boutiques Prince Edward County tempts the tourist with a suitcase full of unique souvenirs.

The summer visitor to Little Spain can buy a hand-made patchwork quilt, oil lamps, chinaware and crocks rescued from Prince Edward attics or a rope of sleigh bells discovered in a drive shed.

When a retail outlet, County Crafts, was operated in Picton through an Opportunities for Youth grant many Prince Edward residents contributed a wide range of original items for sale. Community response to this program seemed to indicate enthusiasm for obtaining a modest profit on hand-crafted items.

The County Crafts project has been discontinued, however, and local initiative toward promotion of Prince Edward handicrafts is lagging.

Most of the shops offering "made in Prince Edward" souvenirs are operated by former city residents who have escaped the rat race in favor of the county's relaxed pace.

These enterprising businessmen should be complimented for accomplishing what natives of the county basically have failed to do.

Unfortunately, a number of local residents skilled in quilting, sewing, painting or crocheting make little effort to establish a retail outlet for their hobbies.

Some do rely on the established boutiques as middlemen for their crafts, but this seems a timid approach when the potential of these hobbyists is considered.

The success of County Crafts during its three years of operation in Picton suggests there is a market for the handiwork of Prince Edward residents.

This year there is no OFY grant to open such a shop but a number of county craftsmen might consider promotion of their work through a retail outlet of their own.

Such an approach to county crafts should develop them even further and boost tourism by providing an additional something to see in Prince Edward County.

Affluent Lifestyle

So you think food is expensive . . . but think little of buying a new car or making routine purchases of tobacco and liquor.

And you like the availability of a wide range of goods in the supermarket, besides food; nor do you object to the latter being attractively packaged.

Ameliasburg farmer and 4-H club leader Lyle Vanclief had some interesting thoughts along these lines in a recent address to Kiwanians.

Words like overindulgence . . . affluence, which appeared in the account of Mr. Vanclief's address in our news columns, have rather a familiar ring. Yet we fail to recognize their significance, or the fact that they sum up in large part our modern lifestyle.

Americans lately have taken to studying just how much is wasted by the general public. Some schools have been doing the same. The wastage, as observed in a study of garbage, is incredible. Where the schools are concerned, the kids eat the candy first then find they have no appetite left for the food they ought to be eating.

Mr. Vanclief likes to think of food costs not so much as high today, but simply higher. There's a difference.

Then there is the eating out — at restaurants and quick-service establishments — and we complain about food costs!

As Mr. Vanclief points out, some of it is "service" costs, brought on by our own expansive and extravagant ways.

Eliminate some of that waste though, and it would be surprising how much would be saved all round.

Carnival Scene

It's too bad the Winter Carnival scene in Belleville has fallen into disarray, what with the weather failing to cooperate and, as a result, community reluctance to try and keep the thing going.

This year too things could have been favorable weatherwise. Instead Trenton is stealing the thunder, with a week-long carnival opening with a parade on Sunday.

Palmer Rapids, up Algonquin way, is having one this weekend too, and we have been reading of Pembroke's lively effort which included dips through the Muskrat River ice by some of the hardy souls who indulge in that sort of thing. The temperature? 12 above.

They included a 29-year old man from Fort Lauderdale of all places. He said he wanted to see what it was like, compared with sunny Florida. Another was Mrs. Georgette Bouvier, 51, an attractive mother of seven who also has five grandchildren.

Pembroke calls it the "Polar Dip," and down here in Belleville, sometimes called the "banana belt," we can only look on with admiration and not a little awe.

Ties Renewed

Lord Tweedsmuir, wartime commander of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has concluded another visit to Belleville.

Son of a former Governor-General who also wrote novels under the name of John Buchan, Lord Tweedsmuir has been assiduous in maintaining his personal ties with the regiment here.

Eating spaghetti and meatballs from mess tins, at a dinner honoring the visitor, was symbolic of those stirring days in Italy more than 30 years ago.

In these fast-paced times there is still a need to reflect on the sacrifices that were made then, and at the same time to help maintain a stable society in the very different world of today.

Lord Tweedsmuir is a link with wartime comrades near and afar who are still active in the world of the seventies.

Young Entrepreneurs

The Rotary-sponsored Junior Achievement program has been gathering momentum in Belleville, as witness various events this week.

There are about 85 Junior Achievers in the city, organized into eight companies and Garth Stephanson of Rotary is the man in charge.

Monday's club meeting featured some of the young people's work, which was again on display at an open house at St. Thomas parish hall that evening.

It's for sale too — everything from a change purse to a desk set — which gives the young people that much added incentive.

Taking A Strong Stand Against Inflation

Communist China Appoints Veteran Party Man to Defence Ministry

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The mysteries of Chinese leadership continued during the first meeting of the National People's Congress last week since 1965. It was an ever-present reminder that the world's largest nation of 800 million people is the one we know least about when it comes to who holds the power at the top.

Even the leaders' names, when they are released by the Chinese government are totally strange to us, totally unfamiliar, instantly forgotten unless we happen to have some personal rapport with the Chinese language, a background very few Canadians possess.

The two names we do know, Premier Chou En-lai and Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, are clear enough. We are told an ailing Premier Chou was re-elected as premier, a position he has held since the formation of the People's Republic of China in 1949 and that Mao at 82 is still in charge.

For anyone with even a remote understanding of the influence of this vast nation on world affairs, it should come as a surprise that China has been without a defence minister for nearly four years.

The last one was the ill-fated Lin Piao who died, or was wiped out, under still mysterious circumstances in 1971 for his alleged plot against the life of Chairman Mao.

The new defence minister is another old politician, one Yeh Chien-ying, a member like Premier Chou of the Communist party since the mid-1920s, one of the truly old professionals of China and a major negotiator with U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

You might say Mr. Yeh belongs to the tough, old warrior group of the Chinese Communists and adheres strongly, without doubt to Mao's famous expression that "the revolution comes from the barrel of a gun."

China-watchers say that the leaders of the National People's Congress represent the moderating influence which Chinese leadership has shown since the disruptive Cultural Revolution of 1967-68. This will undoubtedly mean more Chinese detente with powerful Western nations whose technology China will continue to need.

So-called "radicals," (yes, even the Chinese Communists apparently have "conservatives" and "radicals"), appear to have lost out in the election of new leaders, including Madame Chianh Ching, Mao's wife who was expected to be made minister of culture.

In a way, it's amazing how little leadership patterns have changed in China under communism compared to the era of the emperors. Great age is still held in high regard, all major appointments in the People's Republic of China still being held by old men and women.

There are some members of the Politburo, military heroes of the now-distant Korean War who are nudging their early nineties and still sit in seats of influence.

One can say the "radicals," mainly much younger Chinese leaders in the system, will not want old men to rule forever, a new China form of historic mandarin survival to rule.

But who can say about China whether the old, the veterans of the founding years of Communist China will eke out power into their 80s, or whether some kind of "palace revolution" will supercede them.

A close and more familiar parallel to the "who comes after Mao" syndrome is Spain where Francisco Franco, a year younger than Mao, still all-powerful though ailing, holds on.

In both countries there will be no radical change until the leader who has held power since the 1930s has gone, or as the Spanish say, with almost characteristic Chinese reticence, "has disappeared."

Language Competence Down In Great Britain as Well

The Montreal Star

One of Britain's largest school examination boards reports that the spelling and punctuation of teenagers have grown worse. In the United States scores on standardized college entrance examinations are declining. In Canada professors are complaining that more and more students lack the fundamentals of good written expression. Some universities which abolished grading in favor of pass-fail courses have had student demands for a return to grades.

Already in the U.S. a small but growing number of school districts is offering alternative schools for those parents who want their children to have a more traditional education with an emphasis on the three R's. That means arithmetic in place of the once-new maths, phonics instead of "look-see" reading, a rebirth of grammar, courses in penmanship and good citizenship, more imposed discipline and even dress codes.

Before smug traditionalists say "I told you so," let it be noted that a reaction against many of the progressive trends of just a decade ago was not unexpected. A swinging pendulum has long characterized education on this continent. This does not mean that all of the innovations of the 1960s have been proved worthless and fit only to be discarded. It means, rather, that different approaches to learning work for different children.

When the educators of 10 years ago were proclaiming the individuality of each child, they often made the mistake of trying to impose the same approach on all pupils. Truly individualized education ought to mean that for some children traditional techniques are more effective, while for others, a liberal approach is more successful in enabling them to achieve potential.

The unenviable task of responsible educators and policy-setting school boards is to take a balanced perspective and keep their heads while extremists around them, on all sides, are losing theirs and to remember that the acquisition of basic skills is only one goal — albeit an important one — of a good education.

Ex-Montrealer Sees Changes

Letter in
The Montreal Gazette

Having lived in another large North American city for almost a year, I recently returned to Montreal for a short vacation. I was delighted to find the spirit of this city unchanged, despite the many strikes, etc. of the past months

I am, however, saddened by the wanton destruction of the Drummond Street properties and other such buildings. The ruin of these stately nineteenth century mansions represents a disregard for the heritage of this beautiful city that is difficult, almost impossible, to comprehend. If such a situation is allowed to go unchecked by the city fathers, citizens and taxpayers, the very charm that has made Montreal what it is will ultimately be destroyed.

The deplorable decline in the driving habits of Montrealers is also very noticeable. Courtesy is non-existent and as for safe driving — it's every person to himself.

Bank's Prediction

Stocks Picking Up but Growth Below Average in Months Ahead

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The Canadian and U.S. economies are in a slump. So why have Bay Street and Wall Street suddenly come alive with heavy buying of stocks?

If history is repeating itself, it market is again signalling a turning-point in the economy—as it has done so often in the past.

The historic pattern is for stock prices to fall before a recession sets in, and then to start their up-swing in anticipation of an economic recovery that may be several months away.

If historyis repeating itself, it means that we have the classic combination of good news and bad—good news in the form of a healthy pick-up in stocks that have been falling for much of the past two years, and bad news in the form of another six to nine months of below-average economic growth and rising unemployment.

That bleak prospect is also seen in the latest reading of the Royal Bank Trendicator, a sophisticated composite index of leading economic indicators.

The performance of Trendicator, measured against the movement of the Canadian economy during the past quarter-century, indicates that it is a reliable guide to economic turning-points. It has anticipated upturns by six to nine months, and downturns by three to six months.

Trendicator is made up of the performance of 11 key sectors of the economy—and in fourth-quarter 1974, eight of them were declining.

The worse declines were in urban house-construction starts, industrial stock prices and price-earnings multiples, corporate pre-tax profits and the issuance of building permits.

The index fell 3.6 per cent in the last three months of 1971, and suggests that economic troubles will continue at least into second-half 1975 and perhaps beyond.

According to Royal Bank senior economist Robert Baguley, however, an up-turn in Trendicator could be in evidence by mid-1975.

"Such an up-turn would signal the approach of the trough in economic activity by year-end, and a much healthier economy in 1976," he said.

Last year's drop in the average of 11 leading indicators was sharper than in any other post-war slowdown except one—the recession between second-quarter 1953 and third-quarter 1954, when real gross national product fell 2.6 per cent and unemployment doubled, to 5.2 per cent.

The current slump is more severe than those of 1957-58, 1960-61, 1966-67 and 1969-70.

From the latest reading of the leading indicators, there is no clear signal that the current economic slowdown may be ending—but only that it is not growing any worse.

There could be a sharp increase in unemployment in Canada this year, the bank's economist warns, before the economy begins to benefit from the current decline in Canadian interest rates and from the expansionary monetary and fiscal policies that have been proposed in the United States by President Gerald Ford.

Stock-market speculators, less cautious than economists, are clearly betting that those policies will take hold and put the economy back on the rails.

Canada 6th in Jail Population

Peterborough Examiner

So Canadians aren't the most jailed people on earth. Another myth shattered; for most of the population, that is.

Two criminologists from the University of Toronto have presented research showing Canada in sixth place on a list of 15 countries, based on the number of people behind bars in proportion to the population.

The latest figures, which are for 1972, show that 90 Canadians per 100,000 are imprisoned on an average day.

That puts us well behind the United States, which locks up 200 citizens per 100,000, and leads the list of 15 countries. Also ahead of us are Poland, Australia, Finland, and New Zealand.

It is worth noting that figures for the Soviet Union are not included in the study. Nor for states such as Greece, Brazil, South Vietnam, or South Korea, notorious for imprisoning and torturing citizens.

Getting back to Canada, the report breaks down the figures by province for 1971, and Newfoundland emerges on the slight end of the scale with 44.1 per 100,000 people. Ontario is bang on the national average of 90, and the Quebec figure is 75.

The startling figures for Canada are in the Yukon, with 327.8, and the Northwest Territories, with 454.

Not too startling for leaders of Canada's native peoples, though, who have been claiming for years that their people are routinely imprisoned all out of proportion to the number of white people incarcerated for the same crimes, misdemeanors or disturbances.

While the criminologists' figures suffer through omissions on the international scene, they point a stark finger at one of our most serious social inequities.

The 'Why Not' of Women's Lib Scene

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

We have all heard about the Philosophy student who received the highest mark ever given on a paper when she responded most wisely to the very human and tragic question "Why"? This was the only question on the exam.

A time limit was set and all the other students began to write furiously. Why, why, why — they all had answers. The one exceptional student however sat there and thought — she did not write — but thought about this profound question. Naturally, her answer was equally profound and professor recognized her insight. What was the clever statement, the only answer to the one and only "Why"? — "Why Not!"

Therefore, in International Women's Year, the best answer for women when they are asked why — Why do they want to study literature? Why do they want to be doctors? Why do they want to learn how to fix a car, a stove, a faucet? Why do they want to do or be anything? — is Why Not. Robert Kennedy was a person who adhered to this philosophy. "Some men," he said, "look at things the way they are and ask "Why?" I look at things the way they could be and ask "Why Not?" In this sense then, the slogan for International Women's Year is apt. However, it should not just be flaunted on lapels as if it were the latest "with it" button. "Why Not" will only be successful when it is asked intellectually and rationally, when women confront prospective employers with a Why Not attitude and when women ask themselves — "Darn it! Why Not?"

It will be asked most frequently by those who believe in the advancement of the human cause, by those who are hopeful and optimistic that prejudice and discrimination can be mitigated successfully by a democratic government and significantly by individual persons.

DONNA WHALEN.

Growing Incidence of Violence

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

After the recent series of tragic events in New Brunswick, while the caskets of the two police officers who had been so brutally done to death were still laying in his church, the priest said, "We are a sick society."

Today, in the news, 13 bodies are found in Montreal. A gangland crime we are told. A thug holds four children hostage somewhere else. He is using their innocent lives as a lever with which to enforce his demands for money.

Today it is somebody else whose husband is shot. Today the kids belong to someone else. Today the store that is robbed, belongs to someone else. Tomorrow it will still be somebody else's too. Maybe yours, maybe mine.

We are a sick society all right. What do we do when we are sick? Do we just feel sorry for ourselves, until we are more sick?

Or, do we bestir ourselves to do something about it? Are we going to allow ourselves to be further victimized?

Should we change our attitude towards these criminals? Should we begin to worry about their victims too?

Should we change a few laws?

Should we change our attitude towards the police? Should we begin to think of them as law enforcement officers? Should we change the attitude summed up in the word "Cop".

These are pertinent questions. I believe that our future, nothing less, depends on the answers we find.

Educational Costs Today

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Some say there are things wrong with our education system. Others say we have the best in the world. One thing for sure, we certainly have one of the most expensive systems in the world.

In the light of the prevailing shortage of money it is understandable that authorities think very carefully before granting raises in pay to their employees. However, this does not seem to trouble the Hastings Board of Education.

We heard a lot about belt-tightening and a lot about considering the solution of financial problems in relation to education in the course of the recent election. Perhaps someone on the school board will now tell me why and where they found the money to grant the director, Mr. Eric Runacres a raise of $5000.

In relation to recent comment on the quality of our education system, I recently had first-hand information given to me by my son's principal.

When I expressed alarm at colleges having to teach high school students the three Rs, his reply was "So What?" They should not have hired them in the first place." He then went on to explain of the caution he must use to hire teachers that are capable of teaching.

I cannot help but think of the terrible mess our educational system is now in, from kindergarten to the principals.

A Look at Financing of Y

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

About this time of the year one starts to read almost daily of the activities of the YMCA. The tempo usually increases and culminates on municipal budget day when the Y arrives with hands outstretched.

However, there is hope that this year they may be in a somewhat better position than previous years. Their physical training director has departed and will not be replaced so there is a saving there of around $9,500 per year. And, yet further good news for the taxpayers — Alderman Een Corke is rounding up the outstanding $40,000 needed to retire the Y's mortgage.

Alderman Corke is to be commended on his dedication. Let us hope that his activities in this direction will not prevent his voting at budget time on any request for grants etc., by the Y. Some people might feel there is a conflict of interest and we all know how the alderman feels about such things.

If the Y decides to go ahead and build a gym they should first tell the public exactly what they propose and then invite them to partake in raising the money in their proposals meet with approval. We should not again become the victim of poor planning and indifference on the part of the Y as some of us are fed up with having to bail them out annually.

If, in these tight money times the taxpayer is going to be hit again the Y should change its name to You Must Contribute Again.

Edmonton Archbishop Fights Administration Entanglement

EDMONTON (CP — The desk in Archbishop Joseph MacNeil's office was covered with letters that needed answers and administrative paper work that needed his attention.

The archbishop would answer the letters and complete the work, but first there were other things to do—like talking to Roman Catholic students.

"It's the easiest thing in the world to get tied up in administrative work," said Archbishop MacNeil, a 50-year-old native of Sydney, N.S., who has headed the Edmonton archdiocese since October 1973.

"Look at the pile of stuff on the desk. I make a conscious effort to get out of here and do other things."

Archbishop MacNeil, who often travels to area schools to meet students and teachers and celebrate mass, said "people simply think bishops or people like us are tied behind a desk all the time."

"I feel we should be out."

The archbishop, equally at home talking about baseball or the need for church activism, came to Edmonton after four years as bishop in Saint John, N.B.

'We have to be sensitive to the society in which we live. The church has a role, in a way, of being a gadfly, to contradict the society, to be in the conscience of the society."

The church will never be active enough, maintained Archbishop MacNeil, a firm believer in the co-operative movement.

"One of the great faults that could be laid at the door of the church is that we are not strongly opposed to some of the things that are happening in society. When I say church, I don't mean just the bishop and pastors, I mean all the people who are church members."

Archbishop MacNeil likes to involve others in decision-making.

"It's been much easier to share decision-making since the Second Vatican Council when the bishops spent so much time with the Pope discussing all kinds of pastoral decisions. From that council it was suggested that in every diocese there would be that kind of procedure.

"It isn't an easy thing to work out since we have the structures of the past."

There were some matters that can't be decided by voting.

"You can't sit down and decide by a vote whether there is a God or not.

"So the question is how do you have some sort of democratic procedure so we can in fact sit down and say do we need a new church building, or do we need a new course in theology or do we need a new program for the ill people.

"All of these things which are very important can be discussed at all kinds of levels."

Archbishop MacNeil said the ecumenical movement is not dead. "If we don't hear as much about ecumenism now it's simply because it's no longer the favorite of the press.

"It was like everything else when it was new. It was kind of a favorite for a lot of people to talk about ecumenism and getting together and going to each other's church and having an ecumenical service.

"That's when it was all new and kind of wonderful."

Supporters of ecumenism "hit the crunch" long before the talk ever got around to church union.

"The crunch came in things like having social action projects together. A lot of people agreed to that, but a lot said 'no, that's not where the church should be.'

"It became even more difficult when we said we have to probe into the theology of ecumenism—should we have a common communal service, can we really have a common ministry.

"That began to touch at the nerve-centre of not so much theology and doctrine as it did at the faith of the individual and what makes the faith of one individual a little bit different than the faith of an individual next door."

Despite the roadblocks, "that doesn't mean we quit or have to stop."

"It simply means with more prayer and study this must continue, because if we are faithful to the gospel message, we must continue to work for church unity.

"That has to be."

Archbishop MacNeil makes time in his hectic schedule for relaxation, such as golfing, skating and snowshoeing.

"No man can work day and night. You have to make time for yourself, no matter how busy you are."

If he's pressed hard enough, the archbishop will recount his encounter with Casey Stengel, the crusty manager of the New York Yankees in the 1950s.

Then a priest, Archbishop MacNeil went to Yankee Stadium to see New York play an American League baseball game and was invited to sit in the dugout.

"I asked one of the players why is Casey walking back and forth in the dugout all the time."

He was told that he was sitting in Casey's favorite spot, the only place the manager would sit.

"I offered to move, but he said never mind. I think he sat down somewhere else."

Active Archbishop

Archbishop Joseph MacNeil of Edmonton is equally at home talking about baseball or the need for church activism Archbishop MacNeil, who often travels to schools to meet students and mass, says people simply think bishops or people like us are tied behind a desk all the time but he finds time for leisure activities, such as snowshoeing. Freedom in Christ Appropriate Goal

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

On August 4, 1941, two statesmen, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin Roosevelt, met on a battleship off the coast of Maine and drafted an historic document called the Atlantic Charter.

In it they incorporated four freedoms that Roosevelt said must become the rights of everybody. These were freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want, and freedom from fear.

It is tragic to think of what has happened. After the assassination of Senator Robert Kennedy, a noted biblical scholar exclaimed, "We've become a nation of cynics, master debunkers of quality, nobility and the great values. We've surrendered our religious traditions for a cheap attitude which assumes it has no need of higher laws. It's a conspiracy of all of us. "We've all failed."

It is significant that Arnold Toynbee the great historian, tells of making a pilgrimage to an ancient shrine where he "prayed that the spirit which had once created a western Christian civilization out of the Dark Ages might return to reconsecrate latterday westernernizing world."

Thus the recent "Week of Prayer for Christian Unity" was no empty gesture in our communities. The theme, "Free in Christ!", was eminently appropriate. It had been selected by the Canadian Catholic Conference and the Canadian Council of Churches.

I realize that critics could point, for instance, to Ireland. But let them consider what Terence O'Neill said when he resigned as Premier of Ulster. He said, "The tragedy of this island, in North and South, is that for too long we have allowed our politics to influence religion instead of permitting our religion to influence politics."

The Ecumenical Movement is gathering strength as it fights for freedom on many fronts. For example, last December 20, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Manila presented a special Medallion of Appreciation to Rev. Alton A. Gould, a Free Methodist minister, formerly of Renfrew and Brockville. He had been working for years to uplift children of the poor in the Philippines.

A recent news release from Salisbury, Rhodesia, quoted a colored Anglican layman, prominent on the African National Council, and just released from the white man's detention camp, as saying, after ten years' confinement, "There are some fine men on the other side doing what they think is best for the country. There is no reason why we shouldn't work together in the future."

"The 20th century crisis is a crisis of the individual." So wrote Dr. Carl Jung, distinguished Swiss psychologist and psychiatrist. Prophetic words! Astronomically speaking, man would be insignificant were it not for the fact that man is the astronomer. This is a contemporary interpretation, in part, of the sacredness attached to man as "made in the image of God."

It is of the utmost urgency that we strive to cultivate the dignity of every individual. We must, above all, rally every spiritual instinct, religious memory, and moral vow to do battle.

Watch This Show? It's Up to You

If you'd like information about what International Women's Year will mean to Ontario women, get on the mailing list of the Co-ordinator, International Women's Year Program. Write the Ontario Ministry of Labor, 400 University Avenue; Toronto, Ontario M7A IT7.

It's up to you whether you watch It's Up to You, the department of consumer and corporate affair's quiz show aired every Saturday in this area on CJOH-TV, channel six from Ottawa.

The quiz show is designed to disseminate consumer information in a pleasant manner. What it manages to do is tell you things you probably already knew in a rather boring fashion.

To begin, the only appeal of quiz shows is transferred greed. We want the contestants to win because we'd like the keys to a new car handed to us. The prizes in "It's Up to You" are silver and bronze replicas of Olympic Stamps. Terrific.

Secondly, the show is slow-paced and ill-timed. After a few rousing choruses of the theme song are thrown in, some embarrassed and uninformed play-acting by the contestants and some vague legal advice given by an also-embarrassed expert, what you end with is two or three bits of information that you probably knew already. And if you didn't you would have been able to absorb them more quickly and less painfully in a couple of two-minute advertisements.

But then, it's up to you.

One enterprising individual says she can stretch her food dollar by making one pound of butter into two! She allows the butter to warm to room temperature and then creams it. She then adds two cups of evaporated milk, a little at a time, and keeps beating until the milk is absorbed. Next it's chilled until solid. I haven't tried it but if you do, let me know how it works out.

Look for lower maple syrup prices this season: last year consumers bought little because of high prices and the lower grades of syrup didn't move as well either. Perhaps the price will drop.

Metrication is going to mean good news for the confused grocery shopper. The change in parkage sizes will give manufacturers an unparalleled opportunity to choose sensible package sizes which are easily comparable. Round numbers in grams or millilitres will be the aim and the Metric Commission is already beginning to approve package sizes. One more criteria: fewer sizes from which to choose.

If you don't happen to shop at a market which uses unit pricing, what do you do between now and metrication? Best bet is a Consumer Cost Calculator available from Information Canada for 25 cents.

A plastic card that rivets on a plastic disc, the calculator lets you line up price with quantity and come up with unit prices.

Unit prices, of course, let you compare brands and package sizes for the best value.

Young Lawyer Has No Problem 'Being Equal'

Cathy Burns is going to be a lawyer.

A century ago, that would have been unheard of. As little as ten years ago it would still have been unusual.

But today Cathy Burns is one of 45 young women, out of 145 students, in Queen's University second year law course. In other words, nearly one third of the lawyers graduating from Queen's next year will be women.

Consequently, Miss Burns says, she has not had to become "pushy" or militant in order to study law. She's one of the new generation of young women who have never doubted their equality with men.

"I can't think of a time when I've felt discriminated against," she says.

"There is a women's caucus at the law school, but I haven't joined. I'm not a joiner, and besides, being part of a women's lib group doesn't appeal to me. What I think liberation is all about is being an individual, and I can't see losing that by having to belong to a group," says Miss Burns.

"I really think there are more important things, like fighting pollution, overpopulation and racial discrimination. I'm more interested in native rights than in women's rights.

"I think people should be free to be themselves, uninfluenced by exterior things."

take two burns

Miss Burns is among several law students who provide free legal aid in Belleville every Tuesday and Thursday evening at the United Community Services headquarters on William Street.

In the summer, the students were paid by an Opportunities for Youth grant, but during the winter months they donate their time. In return they gain valuable experience and confidence.

The law students advise, reassure, and occasionally intervene directly to assist people overwhelmed or upset by legal difficulties.

The most common troubles are landlord-tenant disputes, loan non-payments, careless driving charges and property divisions. The people who come for advice don't seem to prefer either a male or female law student as their counsellor.

"We're just lumped together as students," says Miss Burns. "There's no surprise that some of us are women."

"What I've found is that a surprising number of the women who come for help are really well-informed about the law. It's surprising because it hasn't been too easy in the past to find out what your rights are, unless you have access to law books. And even then it's hard to use them unless you know how," she says.

"But there are some books on the market now that make the law clear, giving simple, basic information that is really useful. There's a good self-counsel series that deals with wills, small claims, driving offenses and landlord and tenant acts."

Her experiences interpreting the law for Belleville citizens has emphasizd one thing in particular that the major concern with laws is financial.

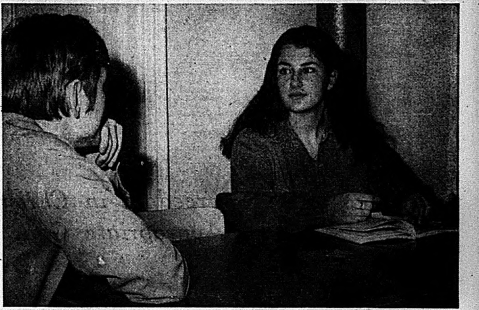
"Traditionally, women didn't have much power, or control over family money. But that's changed. And the old excuse 'I'm a woman and don't know about these things' doesn't stand up anymore. That's one good thing that women's lib has done."

Although she likes to see women stand on their own feet and be independent, Miss Burns knows that it takes time.

"And you can't expect a happily married woman to take much interest in divorce settlement information. But women should know about wills, about what their property rights are, and they should be especially aware of consumer protection laws," she says.

"I used to be quite typical of a lot of women, afraid to make trouble of any kind. But I've got over that, since I found that generally store owners are grateful to find out that merchandise you bought from them was shoddy or badly made. They want satisfied customers, and we have a right to expect good quality.

"Being nice and polite really isn't a virtue anymore. Besides, you can be polite and still demand your rights."



Cathy Burns, Queen's law student, listens to a citizen's problems.

WOMEN'S STUDY GUILD

The January meeting of the Women's Study Guild was held at Suzie Sherry's home. Olive Elson was in charge.

Topic for the evening was International Women's Year (IWY) taking place during 1975 at the instigation of the United Nations. with a threefold theme — equality, development and peace, achieved only by involvement, action and total participation by women, says Fiona Hyslop, IWY Secretariat of the Privy Council Office

Lois Wishart reported on a speech by Fiona Hyslop. IWY Secretariat of the Privy Council Office, who urges women to become involved, active participants in their newspapers and magazines, keeping informed about current events, are the duties of concerned citizens. Every woman in Canada has a stake in making IWY a working reality, she said.

Here Are Some Laws You Should Know About...

Here are some of the ways that laws affect women. In some cases you'll see that women are in fact "protected" by laws in much the same way that Canada's native people are. In other words, they've been treated as child-like beings who need looking after, and who are not "responsible". On the other hand, many of the laws are perfectly just, and useful.

Although these laws can often work to women's financial advantage, they can also demean and imprison.

The women who fight for "liberation" are willing to give up protection, in the belief that dignty and equalty will only result from a body of law that regards all persons as responsible beings.

Did you know that:

If her husband has been missing and has not been heard of for the last seven years, a wife may apply to a county court judge for an order of presumption of death.

Although this order permits a woman to remarry, it does not dissolve the first marriage nor authorize disposal of the "dead person's" property. If the first husband who was presumed dead is shown to be alive, the wife's second marriage becomes void but any children of that marriage are not considered to be illegitimate.

Did you know that:

Until fairly recent times, not only were women considered to be their husband's property, but when a woman married all her possessions became the property of her husband.

At present, a married woman's wages, or any property acquired by her as a result of any employment she is engaged in, normally becomes her own separate property. Thus, in most cases, a husband has no right to any of his wife's earnings.

• • • • •

Did you know that:

A wife has the right to pledge her husband's credit for necessities.

A wife is not responsible for her husband's debts except when he entered into a contract on her behalf and with her express authority.

However, one of the basic duties that the law places on a husband is that he must support his wife. He must do so in accordance with the standard of life they have maintained in the past.

• • • •

Did you know that:

There is no law which requires a woman to adopt her husband's surname upon marriage. The change of surname is merely a custom. Maiden name passports do not become invalid upon marriage.

A person whose marriage has been dissolved may make an application for a change of surname for children of whom he or she has custody, providing the other parent consents.

Did you know that:

Generally, in Ontario, when a man dies, his wife is entitled during her life to a one-third interest in her deceased husband's real estate. This right is called her "dower".

Dower attaches to any land held by the husband during marriage, and in order for him to sell or transfer it, his wife must agree to give up her dower interest in the land even though her husband has sold or transferred his part of it to someone lse.

A wife's dower right cannot be taken away from her by her husband's will if he dies, although it could happen that the will might offer more favorable terms if she renounces her dower.

• • • •

Did you know that:

The corresponding interest of a husband in his wife's real estate is called "curtesy". A husband is entitled for life to a one-third interest in all land owned by his wife at the time of death.

However, this interest is not as strictly applied as dower and a wife can sell or transfer land without having her husband give up his curtesy interest.

• • • • •

Did you know that:

Under certain circumstances, children may be obliged to contribute to their parents' support.

The fact that a daughter is married does not relieve her of this responsibility. The financial position of her husband will be considered in determining her share of the responsibility.

• • • • •

Did you know that:

Sales by door-to-door salesmen are subject to a unique cooling off period of two clear working days. This period comes into effect when you, the buyer, receive a copy of the sales contract. That is to say, you can cancel the contract within that time. The working days include Saturday but not Sunday or statutory holidays.

Book Traces B.C. Indian Place Names

VANCOUVER (CP) — The history of many place names in British Columbia has already been lost but Helen Akrigg is working against time to investigate others while her sources are still alive.

In 1969, she and her husband, Prof. G. P. V. Akrigg of the University of B.C. English department, published the book 1001 British Columbia Place Names.

Now they want to compile a larger collection while there are still enough old people around who can remember how the names originated.

"They are dying out with the last of the people who remember them," she told the Canadian Aural-Oral History Conference at Simon Fraser University.

The Akriggs became fascinated by the names of the province's lakes, rivers, towns and mountains when they were researching the name of Shuswap Lake in the interior, where they have had a summer camp for 15 years.

They discovered it came from Suxwa'pmux, the name of the interior Salish tribe living in the area.

"Many of the original Indian names have been so badly mutilated in English pronunciation and spelling they are virtually unrecognizable," Mrs. Akrigg said in an interview.

One such name is the town of Klemtu, derived from Klemdoo-oolk, a Tsimpsean word meaning impassable because the bay on which the village stands looks like part of a passage but is not.

She said Indian names for places were specific, usually describing some recognizable part of the landscape. One such name is Tsawwassen, south of Vancouver. The word means facing the sea.

OFL Contract Gives Women Employees Higher Salaries and Better Benefits

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Labor (OFL) has reached a collective agreement with its employees that provides weekly salaries of $198.25 to clerk-typists with two raises retroactive to last Oct. 1 to match increases in the consumer price index.

he contract, with Local 343, Office and Professional Employees Union, provides for a work week of 31¼ hours averaged over two weeks to give employees every other Friday off, two new paid holidays bringing the total to 13, and vacations of five weeks after eight years and six weeks after 12 years.

The agreement also provides for maternity leave to a maximum of six months without pay and leave with pay for employees designated by their office union as delegates to conventions of the union, the Canadian Labor Congress or the New Democratic Party.

The contract increases salaries of clerk-typists $33 a week to $166.75 after a 60-day probationary period, $187.75 after one year and $198.25 after two years.

Other rates for those with two years' service are $229.75 for secretary-librarians, $224.50 for secretary-bookeepers, $219.95 for secretaries and $198.25 for switchboard operators.

A separate two-year agreement gives OFL department directors $18,500 a year and monthly cost-of-living increases.

Single Parents 'Lost People'

TORONTO (CP) — Single parents are the lost people in the fight for women's rights, says Laura Sabia, chairman of the Ontario Status of Women Council.

Speaking during the closing session of a joint meeting of federal and provincial councils Thursday, Mrs. Sabia said "one parent families are subjected to discrimination in housing, and government perpetuates their dependency by keeping them locked in the welfare rolls."

She said it is the duty of government to help single parents become self-sufficient by employment retraining programs.

"Let's support them financially while they take on constructive retraining, instead of penalizing them as we do now," she said.

Joan Fraser, a representative from Halifax, said single parents need time of their own.

"The single mother is often shunted aside because society makes certain assumptions about her status. She should have the chance for self-betterment and a decent social life," she said.

Rick-Rack Cheaper

DON MILLS, Ont. (CP) — Elen Henderson, a grandmother who designs high-fashion creations for sub-teen-age girls, said smocking is too expensive in the dresses she makes. Instead, she said, she uses rick-rack braid which gives the same effect.

Sexism Infuriates Men

TORONTO (CP) — Waving an article on women's lingerie from her hometown newspaper, the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix, Margaret Harris told a status of women meeting Thursday "that even men are furious about this type of sexism."

Chairman of the Saskatchewan Status of Women Council, she was speaking on sex stereotyping in advertising and media at a joint meeting of councils.

"When this appeared in the women's section of the paper, we started getting complaints, and not all from women," she said.

Phil Manuel of the Ontario council said sex stereotyping is blatant. He had discovered examples in federally-issued job opportunity pamphlets and "even census forms."

She said that Wonderbra has killed the slogan her council complained about: "He cares about the shape you're in."

Laura Sabia, Ontario council chairman, said "it looks as though Belvedere (cigarettes) is going to get a shellacking." The model in one advertisment had her shirt further unbuttoned than a male model in a matching ad.

When all results are in, the list of complaints may be published, Mrs. Sabia said, and all advertisers will be named.

Ann Landers

Rules for Ruining a Marriage

Dear Ann Landers: Every once in a while you rerun a column because someone asks for it. I am not only asking—but pleading. It was the column on "How To Break Up A Marriage." It was one of your best—and I need it now.—Cliff-Hanger.

Dear Cliff: Here it is, with my compliments:

(1) When a son or daughter lets you know they plan to be married, show open hostility to the person of his or her choice. After all, marriage means less love and attention for parents and they have a right to resent it.

(2) Expect your married children to spend every Sunday and holiday at your home. Act hurt if they have other plans.

(3) If your married children have problems with their mates, encourage them to come home, no matter what. Listen attentively to all their complaints. Point out additional faults which may have gone unobserved. Remember, a drop of water at a time can wear away a rock—if you keep at it long enough.

(4) If your married children are having financial problems, rush in with the chequebook. If you are having financial problems yourself, borrow, if necessary, in order to help them, but let them know they will never have to do without anything so long as you are around.

(5) If a married child has a drinking problem, keep telling him his mate drove him to it. It will make him feel better. Everyone needs someone to blame.

(6) If your married child gets an opportunity for advancement which takes him to another city, tell him family is more important than money and if he leaves, God will punish him for not obeying the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

(7) If there are grandchildren, smother them with gifts. If the parents object, tell them to keep out of it. After all, grandchildren are to spoil. Sneak money to the kids secretly if you have to. They'll love you for it.

(8) Whenever your married son and daughter visit with their children, make a point of how thin and tired the kids look. Get across the message that you don't have a very high opinion of the way your beloved grandchildren are being cared for. Intimate that the mother's neglect is detrimental to the health of the youngsters. Ask repeatedly what they eat and why it is that they have so many colds. If the kid breaks a tooth or is injured during play, get all the details and place the blame on lack of supervision.

(9) If your son has a button off his shirt or if his shirt isn't ironed as well as you used to do it when he lived at home, say something. Also mention the hole in his sock or the spot on his coat. It could fan the flame of self-pity and start the final fight that will end up in the divorce court.

(10) If your married child has a difference of opinion with his mate, get into the act and give them both a sample of your wisdom born of years of experience. What do they know? You've lived! If you talk loud enough, maybe you can turn a minor argument into a major hassle and break up the marriage. The divorce lawyers from coast to coast are sure to love you for it.

Foster Mother Cared for Hundreds

Almost 30 years of loving and devoted care: this has been the gift which Mrs. Annie Walmsley has given to over 500 infants and handicapped children in her long career as a foster mother.

Widowed for many years, Mrs. Walmsley had worked to support her son Bill, who at the time she became a foster mother, was 17 years old. With his full approval, she began to board babies. In 1947 her home became subsidized for emergency and special placements of children up to the age of four years and foster parenthood became her career.

When you glance at Mrs. Walmsley's file you see social workers' comments such as "She has unlimited patience and understanding with small children. This is one of our most valuable foster homes." You also read comments about the excellent care she provided for children with special needs such as the baby with a club foot who was placed in her home directly from hospital. This baby had to wear special braces and Mrs. Walmsley spent many nights sitting up with her when she cried because of the irritation of the braces, massaging her and looking after her tirelessly.

During the several years of intensive care and surgical procedures which this child underwent, Mrs. Walmsly became very attached to her and eventually adopted her. This little girl grew up to become a very attractive young lady, affectionately known as Dolly, who became her mother's right hand assistant in caring for the hundreds of babies who passed through their home.

No matter how many little ones she cared for, Mrs. Walmsley always found it hard to say good-bye when the time came that they were well enough to go home, or to go on adoption. Each time a child left, a bit of her went with him.

Last summer, Mrs. Walmsley decided to give up her job of providing 24-hour emergency care. She has, however, continued to look after a little mongoloid boy whose future at this point is uncertain.

Annie Walmsley is truly one of a special breed: the kind of people who find their fulfillment in life through helping others. She has provided meaningful service to half a thousand children.

Many of those children may have been too young to remember Mrs. Walmsley and all she did for them; but we at Children's Aid will never forget. Our hats are off to a real lady!

Immunization Program Stepped Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Health department officials in British Columbia are increasing public education programs and immunization services in an effort to stem the rising incidence of diphtheria and German measles in the province.

The incidence of diphtheria has shot up dramatically in the last year, Dr. Enest Bowmer, director of the provincial laboratory, said in an interview.

While there were only seven cases reported during the 10-year period from 1958 to 1968, there were 351 cases between January and November of last year.

There are several different strains of diphtheria, each entering the body through the nose throat or skin. If untreated, the disease can cause heart stoppage and paralysis.

"People tend to become complacent about immunization but it's available via the school system and people who go through the school program should get it," said Dr. Bowmer.

He said diptheria immunization cannot be given to all adults because unlike children, some are adversely affected by immunization.

Meanwhile, the incidence of rubella, more commonly known as German measles, increased to 217 cases last year from an average of about 14 between 1971 and 1973.

Health department figures show that 90 per cent of the cases involved patients older than 14.

Dr. Bowmer said this statistic is a reflection of the public immunization program launched for children up to age 12 during the last rubella epidemic in 1970.

"We now are seeing the people who just missed out on that one," he said.

Rubella is most dangerous to mothers in the early stages of pregnancy when it can cause severe damage to the fetus.

At a recent seminar in Vancouver, doctors were advised to obtain blood tests to determine whether a woman of child-bearing age is immune to rubella.

Dr. Tony Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said the rubella vaccination service in British Columbia was extended to cover all age groups last spring when the government began to supply vaccines to doctors and public health staff.

Try Belly-Dancing for Exercise

Randi Cherry, who teaches belly dancing to 100 women in five classes, plays down the burlesque and nightclub connotations of this art form.

"Belly dancing is mainly a good way to get the mind and body together," she said.

When done properly belly dancing is described as a series of movements that can be graceful, flowing, winding and erotic.

Mrs. Cherry said many of the women in her classes want to try something different and for most of them it is a fascinating experience.

She said learning to control the muscles in the body is the most important aspect of belly dancing.

One woman in her 30s said she had reduced her waistline by 2½ inches since she began the course three months earlier. Aerona Lubbert said she had tried fitness programs before but found none of them as successful or as stimulating.

"Plain exercising is boring, which is why no one stays with it," she said. "This has been interesting as well as physically demanding."

Mrs. Cherry also teaches the history of the dance and helps her students make their own costumes. She said belly dancing may have been originated to assist in the ritual of childbirth since many of the movements are similar to contractions.

The dance instructor said belly dancing and yoga can complement each other, noting that much of the same discipline is required.

"I don't think North American people are really ready for the theory of yoga and would be much better with something like this," she said.

Purse-Snatching

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — One purse-snatching and two attempts to steal purses were reported to police. Mrs. Theresa Maioraty told police two youths grabbed her purse as she walked along a street. The thieves opened the purse and then dropped it. Rosalyn Dargie and Katherin Swieton reported attempts to grab their purses.

Student Firms Busy

Right now stock dividends don't look good in eight Belleville junior achievement companies, but things will get better, a program director said Friday.

Across Canada thousands of high school students are involved in the junior achievement program which gives them a taste of running a full scale company with small scale money.

About 60 youngsters in Belleville have set up eight companies since the fall with each company hoping to show a profit before it is "liquidated" in June. Each firm solicited about 100 shareholders at a dollar a share to provide "start up" capital.

These shareholders, along with the rest of the community, are invited to attend an open house at St. Thomas Parish Hall Monday night to scrutinize the operation.

It won't do shareholders any good though. "They can't sell their share until the end of the program," said Garth Stephenson, a program co-ordinator.

While initial expenses have drained much of the company capital, stocks should begin soaring in February, he said. Once the companies are into production, the marketing division takes over retailing the products which should send the company's capital curve into a profit climb.

"The program is designed to teach youngsters how to make profit though," said Mr. Stephenson. "It's designed to give them an appreciation of the business world."

Despite this, "we'll be looking for a bull in May," referring to the stock situation, said Mr. Stephenson. "It will be reflected in a shareholder payment at the end of the year.

Last year, the final dividend paid to shareholders ranged from a low of 23 cents to a high of $1.40 meaning a net loss of 77 cents for some and a 40-cent profit for others.

The open house begins at 7 p.m. and all are welcome to come in and browse and purchase company products — including book racks, wall hangings and hand bags. Most sell for about $2.00.

Moira Film Aired Feb. 8

A film highlighing the workings and setting of the Moira River Conservation Authority will be aired Feb. 8 at 6:30 p.m. on channel six.

Titled Moods of the Moira the color documentary was made with a $5,000 Project SWEEP grant last summer and was produced by two loyalist College students.

It "skips around" touching on all aspects of the conservation authority ranging from outdoor education programs to water control, said Bert Frink.

Fish Meeting Finishes

An international fisheries meeting concluded at Glenora Fisheries Research Station Friday. Shown here is station director Jack Christie discussing the meeting's results with Ken Loftus, director of the sport fisheries branch of the ministry of natural resources.

Meeks Angry Over Lack Of Conference Invitation

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville alderman Stu Meeks says he will "raise hell" with provincial cabinet ministers meeting here this month because he was refused permission to attend a fisheries meeting in Glenora this week.

Under the direction of the province's ministry of natural resources, scientists from Canada and the United States are meeting with provincial and federal government official to discuss Lake Ontario ecology.

As the city's harbor specialist and particularly as chairman of the Moira River Conservation Authority's Fish and Wildlife Advisory Board, Ald. Meeks said he feels he should have been allowed to attend.

Originally, reporters were invited to sit in on the meeting but were subsequently told they would be given only a noon press conference Friday.

"I'm very disappointed that they would keep us in the dark," said Ald. Meeks "I don't understand why they are keeping the meeting a secret."

Ald. Meeks said he disturbed that there is no public input into a scientific proposal to ban any fish stocking in the bay and Lake Ontario for the next years.

The proposal is outlined in a study which would record ecological activity in the lake with specific interest paid to lowered phosphate levels. These levels have dropped through filtration system along the lakeshore.

"These scientists are adopting an "isn't that a to bad attitude that poeple won't be able to fish while such a study was in progress," said Ald. Meeks.

"I will be raising hell about this when the ministers come down for their meeting Feb. 17 and 18," he said.

Since the fall, Ald. Meeks has been active in securing a fish-stocking program for the Moira River and the Bay of Quinte.

The alderman said "there is widespread support for such a program."

"I've had several municipalities offer resolutions endorsing such a scheme," he said.

Mine Re-opening Poses Problems

BANCROFT — The reeve of Faraday Township that borders on Bancroft, Jack MacKenzie, is taking a cautious approach to the recently announced reopening of the Faraday unranium mine in his township.

"There is no doubt that the mine opening would be an asset to the township," he said Friday." However, Faraday Township is already pretty prosperous."

Mr. MacKenzie and Bancroft Reeve Russell Hawley were advised of the proposed mine reopening on Friday morning by Hastings MP Jack Ellis.

Both local men expressed concern about the housing situation if the mine opens soon with several hundred employees.

"We are going to have to make a few changes to our building bylaws," said Reeve McKenzie.

"In Faraday, we don't have any place set up for mobile homes and I don't think that Bancroft does either. Bancroft and Faraday are going to have to work to-gether on this problem."

Mr. McKenzie agreed that on the surface the mine would benefit the area, "The mine is the biggest taxpayer in the township now — and they are only assessed on the property and buildings at the moment."

"However, we're going to have a lot of new people coming in and we'll have to take a long hard look at this," he said. "It's not just the mine, but a lot of other things like the cost of renting and of food. We'll also have to take a look at the schools and hospital and other community services."
Mine Take 2

At the moment, Bancroft is in the midst of a small building boom in the Forest Hill area of the village.

Easton constuction Ltd has 28 lots that are available for construction in that area.

The homes will range in price from $40,000 to $60,000.

In a parcel of land that is adjacent to the Faraday Heights subdivision and the new North Hastings Senior Elementary School. Bowes and Cocks Realtors own a proposed subdivision that could be employed for housing.

Blackout Reported

West Hill residents were without power for a few hours this morning. Hydro officials said that shortly before 8.30 a.m. today power was cut to homes in an area of Cedar, Murney, Dunbar, Catherine, Isabel and West Moira Street.

The power was restored to most homes in the area about 10 a.m. except for a brief interruption.

Strike Action Considered

City Hall Workers to Vote Monday

A strike vote will be held among City Hall employees Monday.

Last Thursday the union membership voted unanimously to reject the city's latest offer of a 14 — percent increase over one year.

Peter Ouderkirk, steward of city hall's local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said he "hopes the vote will carry," in light of the solid offer refusal.

The union is seeking 25-percent increase for clerical staff and 21 percent for technical staff. These figures are based on the increase in cost of living between the last negotiations and the next, said Mr. Ouderkirk.

If the latest city offer had been accepted, employees would have received an all-paid dental plan with an average raise of $1,150.

The union president had said earlier if his membership strikes, it could cripple city hall departments "and a few others."

If a strike comes, left on the job will be secretarial staff to the mayor and city manager, department and deputy department heads.

Fisheries Experts Discuss Lake Ontario Future

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The Glenora Fisheries Research Station this week is headquarters for 35 fisheries experts from Canada and the United States who are participating in a discussion of the technical aspects of the rehabilitation of Lake Ontario

Ken Loftus, director of the sports fisheries branch of the ministry of natural resources, commented the seminar represents "a drawing together of the best experts we could find to discuss the present status of Lake Ontario." The potential of various fish species in future years also is under study during the meetings.

Jack Christie, a biologist and director of Glenora Fisheries Research Station, said Friday the two-day seminar is being held to obtain the best information available on the best candidate species to restructure the ecological system of Lake Ontario.

"An array of ideal "eco" systems may be created," he predicted during a luncheon at Prince Edward Yacht Club.

"Its a question of the best species for Lake Ontario," he added.

John Byrne, a biologist with the Lake Ontario Fisheries Assessment Unit, explained the American fisheries program is "not entirely parallel" to the one in Canada.

"Most of this activity is coordinated through the International Great Lakes Fishery Commission," said the biologist.

It was observed there are differences in discussions between Canadian and American fisheries experts because of slightly different approaches. These variances are expressed in management programs and philosophies. Research programs are compatible, however, and there is much co-ordination.

"We've been losing for a long time in connection with the capability of Lake Ontario to stay healthy and produce the kinds and numbers of fish we were used to," said Mr. Loftus.

"Right now, its not in very good shape. There is ground for optimism though through the International Joint Commission."

He said its is expected spawning grounds in the lake will be improved There is "much room" for improvement of water quality and a question of how much progress to anticipate has been raised.

New species such as smelts, ale wives and white perch have invaded the lake but the impact of their invasion cannot be totally assessed for some time.

Mr. Loftus observed changes in water quality have been "relatively steep" in the last 30 years with the 1940 decade a critcal period.

Jack Christie of the Glenora Fisheries Research Station said fishing in Lake Ontario could be produced through Cohoe and salmon plantings but the real concern is to establish a system in the lake that will make the most of its productive potential.

"We must restore a viable ecological system in Lake Ontario. The lake is not producing the kind of thing people want The only salmon produced are implanted and this is very expensive," he explained.

Mr. Christie said successful natural reproduction is better than a fishery based on a hatchery program.

Lamprey control was noted by Mr. Christie who said a control program is in progress and it has reduced stress.

John Byrne commented, "The chemical (control) program used is not perfect but it is effective. It reduces the lamprey population 80 to 90 per cent."

It was noted the Salmon River near Shannonville is the closest water locally where a lamprey control program has been implemented.

A Deep Rest

Jyette Hansen, 21-year-old Quinte area instructor in transcendental meditation (TM), demonstrates the simple method of meditating, displaying a deep rest and relaxation. Miss Hansen says the common notion that meditators sit in a cross-legged position is misplaced. Actually, most people sit in a manner which is most comfortable. All that is required is back support.

Loyalist Student Also Teacher

And unknown to most Belleville district residents, she is a qualified teacher of transcendental meditation (TM) for the Quinte area.

A native of Denmark, Miss Hansen became interested in TM while living in Ottawa. "My next door neighbour started meditating and got me interested," she related in an interview Friday.

Desiring to instruct in TM, she travelled to Spain for sessions with Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, who founded the Students International Meditation Society (SIMS). "Everybody who is an instructor has spent at least three months studying under the Maharishi,' she pointed out.

Miss Hansen began instructing here over a year ago and there now are almost 50 meditators in the area. She is currently conducting a course at Quinte Secondary School with a new course slated within the next month.

"Sometimes it's slow to start in an area but when people start meditating they tell their friends about it," she said. "It spreads by words of mouth."

White Cane Week Begins This Sunday

Sunday marks the opening of White Cane Week, an annual recognition of the efforts of the Canadian National Institute of the Blind and the Canadian Council of the Blind.

S.J. Hennighausen, co-ordinator of blindness prevention services for the CNIB, said this week that special efforts to prevent blindness should be considered this week.

For example, glaucoma is an eye disease which, left unchecked, leads to blindness. It is one of the leading causes of blindness in Canada. Yet a simple painless test can detect glaucoma in its early stages and arrest its prograss.

Miss Hennighausen says that last year 287 Canadians suffered serious eye injuries on the hockey rink. About one-third of these persons recovered full sight.

"A face mask would have prevented most of these accidents," she says.

"The snowmobile is another source of serious eye injury. It's such an exciting sport, most people think of the joy ride only and forget the dangers that go with it.

Ackerman Display Opens at Glanmore

This Sunday at Glanmore House the Canadian Federation of University Women Belleville and District, invites residents to attend the opening of an exhibition of paintings by George Ackerman. The opening is from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and refreshments will be served.

The seven painting from the artist who painted water color landscapes in the middle 1800s are on display until March 2. Scenes of the old Hastings County Court House and of Picton, Roslin and Madoc are on view. It is thought Mr. Ackerman, who taught art from 1870-77 at the Ontario School for the Deaf, now Sir James Whitney School was deaf and could not speak.

Interest Mounts in Meditation

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Feel yourself under a great deal of stress from everyday world pressures? Having sleeping problems and days when you feel you just can't take it?

And does your growing cynical outlook on life resulting from this make your presence intolerable to other people?

The Students International Meditation Society claims to have the answer to all these problems and even more.

It's called transcendental meditation (TM) and interest in it is growing in the Quinte area. Already there are almost 50 meditators here and 25 more turned out to an introductory lecture this week sponsored by the society's Kingston centre.

Many of those interested attended a preparation lecture Friday at Quinte Secondary School. And those who signed up continued today with individual sessions at QSS, followed by group work Sunday through Tuesday.

Linda Bullock of the Kingston centre told the lecture TM means "to go beyond the thinking process" or "to have the experience of the source of thought." that comes from the words transcend ("to go beyon") and meditation ("to think a thought"), she said.

"Everyday we think thousands and thousands of thoughts," noted Ms. Bullock. "They come from a reservoir of energy and development."

So TM allows a person to follow that path back to its source. "It turns the mind around — allows attention to go within until we experience the finer state of thought," she said. "The mind is more powerful at its source.'

Studies have shown a person uses but from five to 10 per cent of his mind, outlined Ms. Bullock. The rest of the mind is "latent, unavailable to us."

Theoretically, TM can be used "until we are using 100 per cent of the mind's poten-

Dam A Concern

Chairman Walter Van Steenburgh and other members of the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority water control committee will be asked to meet soon with Marmora council to discuss the village's request for a survey of the Marmora dam.

Council is concerned about the condition of the dam and is confident a study of it will result in a recommendation for repairs or replacement by the authority.

Belleville Entries Face Stiff OMHA Opposition

For the past two years Belleville has participated in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association (OMHA) AAA category. The OMHA puts cities into groupings according to population. There are AAA, AA, A, B, C and D classifications.

Prior to Belleville entering the AAA category, we had many provincial champions in AA competition.

For Belleville to produce an AAAchampion in Ontario may take some time though. The division that representative, local teams participate in — the Eastern Ontario League — is one of the toughest in the province.

Our teams play against clubs from Oshawa, Peterborough and Kingston. While we draw players from a populace of 38,000, Peterborough and Kingston draw from 60,000 and Oshawa takes their teams from about 90,000 people. With selections like the other three cities in the grouping have it's no wonder Belleville has trouble winning games.

An idea of the strength of the league in which Belleville plays was given by this year's Wrigley National Midget Hockey Tournament. Oshawa Parkway captured the bronze medal of the event, after beating Fort Garry-Fort Rouge Twins 8-3.

The tournament was divided into two divisions — the Spearmint and the Doublemint. Oshawa went through five teams without a loss before bowing 2-0 to Barrie Co-ops 2-0 in the Spearmint division. Barrie went on to win the championship, downing Verdun Leafs — the defending champs — 7-4.

At last year's Wrigley National, Kingston Gurnsey midgets won the silver medal. They were beaten out of the title in the final game after winning six consecutive starts.

Both Kingston and Oshawa play against Belleville in the Eastern Ontario League. What's more, the fourth team in the league, Peterborough, was strong enough to knock Oshawa out of their OMHA playoff 3-1 in a best-of-five series.

With competition like this, is it any wonder that the Belleville Lion's Club midgets went out of their OMHA playoff series, on Sunday, 3-1 to Kingston? Along with the midgets, the Shell Juveniles bit the dust on Sunday, losing their best-of-five series 3-1 to Oshawa, and Rollins Peewees went out 3-0 to Oshawa, in their series.

Belleville Kinsmen Major Bantams lost 8-2 Thursday in Peterborough, losing the series 3-0.

Things aren't as dark as they look. Despite the fact that the local clubs were beaten out of the playoffs, they did make an excellent showing. None of the playoff series were runaway wins for the opposing clubs. For the most part, with a few breaks, the series could have gone to Belleville teams.

Oh, well. Maybe the remaining teams will have lady luck shine upon them. The city still has the Dixie Lee minor peewees, the McInroy-Maines minor bantams, and the Belleville Yardmen minor midgets in the playoffs.

In any evnt, next year should be the best ever for Belleville clubs in OMHA play. For example: Belleville Lions midget manager, Gerry Murphy, is aiming his sights for the 1976 Wrigley Nationals.

Bunnett Gets Shutout

Warren Whitley, Uniroyal, Beaver Lumber and Stephen Licence earned wins in well-played Belleville Minor Hockey Association novice section house league play in the latest report submitted.

Dave Bunnett's shutout goalkeeping and two goals by Jeff Plane sparked Whitley's past Credit Union 3-0 while Uniroyal got a pair of counters each in a 4-2 defeat of Manpower.

The Beaver team had its work cut out to nip Dixie Lee 3-2. Two goals by Mike Brown carried Stephen Licence past Local 1,000 4-2. At the minor bantam level, there were a pair of ties, a squeaker and a rout.

Ten players shared the goals as Ed's Esso matched Kiwanis 5-5 and there were six scorers in Ken Brooks' 3-3 draw with Y's Men's Club.

Tom Masterson scored twice as Red Shark topped Blake Kerr Imperials 4-2, and Lou Williams shelled Belleville Broadloom 11-1 as Speers and Latchford each scored three times.

Bobby Orr's HOCKEY TIPS

By BOBBY ORR

Copyright 1975, Toronto Sun Syndicate

STOPPING PUCKS ONLY PART OF GOALIE'S JOB

The goalie is often described as the last line of defence because it's his duty to make sure that once the puck has gone past his defence it doesn't slip past him into the net.

But there's more to goaltending than that. It's vital for goalies to keep in constant communication with teammates. Keep talking to your defencemen, yell at them to keep their head up, watch out for the oncoming forechecker and so on.

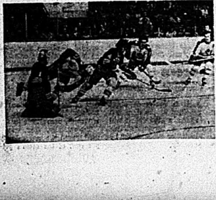
Personally, I like goalies who keep on top of the game by chattering. They tell me if I'm screening them, whether the puck I'm about to touch will be called back for icing and whether someone is chasing me.

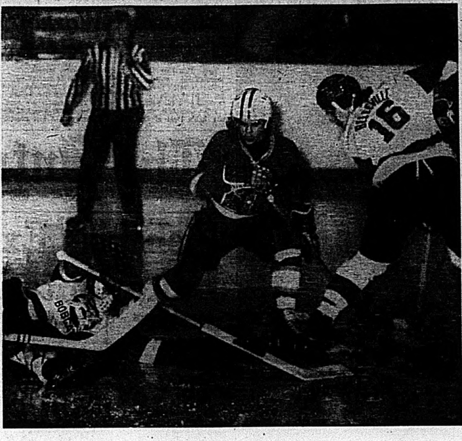
In many cases, the goalie in hockey is similar to the catcher in baseball — he sees the entire ice surface and he tries to shout signals which will help his teammates.

Goalies and defencemen can improve their communication by discussing the responsibilities of each in various situations. Make certain that when your team is caught on a two-on-one break (that is two opposing players rushing on one defenceman) the goalie and defenceman know excatly what each should do.

The goalie should always be responsible for the man carrying the puck while the defenceman watches both men. On a three-on-one break, once again, the goalie watches the puck carrier while the defenceman stations himself in the centre of the three and watches all of them.

Once the shot is taken (see picture) and the goalie has made the save it's my duty to clear the rebound away. The whole process is called team-work, so keep talking and listen to your goalie because he sees things you often can't.





Moore Smothers

Belleville Bobcat, Al Jeffery (16) temporarily took over defensive duties on this scoring attempt by Wexford Warriors Mark Kirton. Belleville goalie Bob Moore was able to smother the puck before Kirton could get another swipe at it. Kirton managed to score one goal in his teams 11-1 drubbing of the Cats in Metro Junior B action at the Memorial Arena, Friday night.

Anyone expecting a rough, wide open game was not in the least bit disappointed as referee Don Goodridge handed out a total of 99 minutes and one game misconduct as the two teams appeared more willing to fight than play hockey.

Included in the 51 minutes the home team received were two 10 min. aggressor penalties, two five minute majors for fighting and a five minute high sticking along with a game misconduct to Dave Taylor.

The Warriors, noted for their style of rough play throughout the league, lived up to their reputation and could not be intimidated by anything the locals threw at them.

The Belleville squad appeared able to concentrate on only one thing at a time which was for the most part, agressiveness and not goal getting.

The visitors, obviously more adept to the style of play, were able to tranform the locals various mistakes into lights on the scoreboard.

Bryan Ross opened the scoring with only 46 seconds gone in the first period from a sprawling position on the ice in front of Cats goalie Bob Moore.

Belleville defenceman, Neil Turner took his second aggressor penalty in an many games during the first period as he tried to get the upper hand on Warriors' Mike Collins.

The Warriors counted two more goals before the first period ended including defenceman Barry Denson's first of three, while the Cats were shorthanded.

With Turner still serving his major for fighting and Eric Powell off for a major high sticking penalty, Dave Taylor was assessed his aggressor penalty leaving the Cats two men short for about 3 minutes of the middle frame. For shoving the linesman he earned his game misconduct.

During that time the visitors were able to increase their lead to 5-0 and after scoring the sixth goal Wexford management decided to give Warren Skinner some time between the posts.

Scott Samis' rising shot from the blue line caught the netminder unawares for the only Belleville tally of the game.

One of the most impressive performers on the ice had to be referee Goodridge. He called a close game from beginning to end and despite the four fights had the game under control at all times, much to the dismay of the near capacity crowd.

Honorable mention would also have to go to the linesmen who, as usual, took a good share of misdirected punches and high sticks.

The home team, in the third period, had all but given up the ship as they seemed to be waiting for the final siren to come to the rescue. They offered only token resistance to the Warrior onslaught.

Belleville put Bruce Clark in goal for the remaining 20 minutes to be the target for the Wexford marksmen.

The visitors counted five goals against Clark who was also left virtually unprotected.

Benson rounded out a solid performance with the final goal of his hat trick, a rarity for a defenceman in any league.

Call-up John Murphy, of the Cats, and Wexford's Peter Hall ended the fighting show in the latter stages of the period in a minor skirmish that earned the pair seven minutes each.

The Cats having lost their last three starts in a row, will try to get something going in their last home-ice stand of the season on Sunday when the high flying Pickering Panthers, of the Central Division, will invade the Memorial for an 8:00 p.m. contest.

Frankford Wins Another

The Frankford Huskies recently labelled the "Giant Killers" are still going strong and living up to the title with a 10-6 win over Cobourg in Ontario Hockey Association Junior C play Friday night.

Cobourg needed a win Friday night and one on Sunday to finish up in first place but now can only wind up the season in second.

The Huskies, now undefeated in their last 11 of 12 games will travel to Lindsay for a four point contest in the last game of the season.

Frankford currently holds down fifth spot, two points out of fourth and with a victory Sunday could rap up the year in the fourth place position.

One pleasent surprise for the Huskies last night was the return of forward Pete Crawford who has been out with a knee injury for the past two weeks and was not expected to return this season.

Rob Arbuckle and Al MacIntosh each had a pair for the Huskies with Jean Doucette and Curt MacClean adding singles.

Loyalist Takes One On Chin

The Loyalist Lancers basketball squad took it on the nose Friday night in Ontario Colleges Athletic Association play as visiting Algonquin College of Ottawa, handed the Lancers an 85-46 drubbing.

The Lancers got off to a slow start letting the visitors run away with the ball and racking up a considerable lead before they put any effort into the game.

Peter Scott, back in uniform for the Loyalist squad, appeared in fine form as he led the losers attack with 15 points. Bill Kyle dropped in 14 points for the Lancers with Dave Culmer and Jim Sutton adding eight and seven points, respectively.

John Sabourin led the winners with a 20 point barrage. Sabourin was continually dangerous in the rebound department with his height advantage.

The visitors outscored the Lancers 42-20 in the final 20 minutes putting the ball up at will with no real serious threat coming from the opposition.

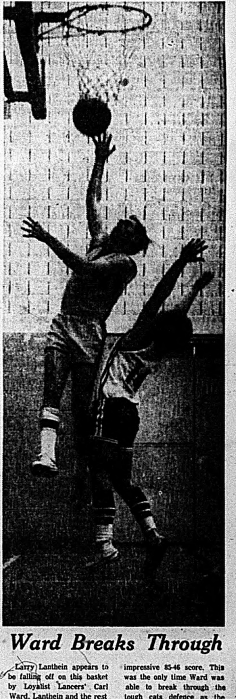
Scott scored 13 of his 15 points in the last half of the game,-but all alone was unable to pose any problem to Algonquin.

Loyalist have four games remaining before the playoffs are scheduled to begin including an exhibition game with Trent University, who won the Lancers invitational basketball tournament in January.

Sir Sandford Fleming, of Peterborough, will supply the opposition next Friday night in a 7:00 p.m. contest at Loyalist.

Hanna Appointed

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — John Hanna, fired in January as coach of Cleveland Crusaders of the World Hockey Association, was named Friday as coach of the Syracuse Eagles of the American Hockey League, following the Jan. 9 firing of Art Stratton. Hanna, native of Sydney, N.S., will coach the Eagles for the remainder of the season and may also become a player-coach if the need arises.



Ward Breaks Through

Larry Lanthein appears to be falling off on this basket by Loyalist Lancers' Carl Ward. Lanthein and the rest of his Algonquin teammates cleaned up on the home town Lancers by an impressive 85-46 score. This was the only time Ward was able to break through the tough cats defence as the visitors continuously blocked the road to the basket.

Palmer Hoping To Regain Form

HONOLULU (AP) — Eddie Pearce kept hearing cries of glee rolling out of the gallery that was trailing a couple of holes behind him. It was Arnie's Army.

"That hotdog," said Pearce, 22, with a big smile, referring to the man who has been his long-time idol. "Why doesn't someone tell him to retire?"

But Arnold Palmer, 45 and a non-winner for two years, has no intention of retiring. He is determined to regain some of the form that made him the most popular golfer ever and won him 61 tour titles.

"I made up my mind that this year I'm gonna concentrate on golf," said Palmer. "I'm gonna quit dilly-dallying around. I'm gonna play more golf. Whether the results will be good or bad, I can't say.

"But one thing I can be sure of. The effort will be there."

In Friday's second round of the $220,000 Hawaiian Open, he matched the best round of the day with a five-under-par 67 that vaulted him to within one stroke of half-way leader Al Geiberger.

Geiberger's 69 and a 135 total left him one stroke clear of Palmer, Pearce, Forrest Fezler and Gary Groh.

Pearce had a 69 with a grab-bag set of borrowed clubs. His regular set has been stolen. Groh took another 68 and Fezler had a 67.

Lee Trevino, the PGA king and a former Hawaiian Open champion, failed to qualify for the final two rounds. He played his last nine in 40, had a 75 and a 150 total.

NFL Faces Kapp May 19

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Football League says it is not ready to abandon the standard player contract or its recently concluded draft despite a federal court ruling in the Joe Kapp case that will keep it from appealing for perhaps a year or more.

Judge William Sweigert of United States District Court ruled Friday that the NFL may not appeal the case—which declared illegal parts of the standard player contract and draft and all of the Rozelle Rule—until damages have been set.

Sweigert set May 19 for the jury trial to decide how much money the NFL must give Kapp, and Kapp says he will ask for $10 million. That means a substantial delay in any appeal.

But in the meantime, the NFL insists it will be business as usual.

"From a legal standpoint, today's developments neither clarify nor advance the situation beyond the court's earlier memorandum decision," the league said. "The merits of that decision are, in our attorneys' judgment, very much in doubt.

"Accordingly, we have no immediate plans for any change in our practices pending final determination of these issues, either through the judicial system or by collective bargaining between the NFL clubs and the players."

The decision by Sweigert indeed neither clarified nor advanced the situation, which is that the standard player contract, Rozelle Rule and part of the college draft violate antitrust laws. Sweigert ruled Dec. 20 that they restricted a player's ability to freely negotiate his services.

And although all the ramifications of this latest decision are not clear, the NFL now faces the possibility that this week's draft was illegal. And the contracts to which the NFL now will try to sign selected draftees also may be illegal.

The NFL can't appeal now and may very well have to begin its pre-season games under the current Sweigert ruling.

Thus, the NFL may be forced into modifying the draft; it may have to rewrite its standard player contract. Or it may actually do nothing, resulting possibly in more suits, refusals to sign contracts and chaos.

"The appeal attempt (by the NFL) was a diversionary tactic, an attempt to stall," said Moses Laskey, a lawyer for Kapp, the former Minnesota Vikings and New England Patriots quarterback who quit pro football in 1971 rather than sign the contract he considered illegal.

One of the items on which Sweigert did not rule, the option clause, also will be an issue of a case brought by former Baltimore tight end John Mackey. That suit begins Monday in Minneapolis.

The option clause says a player must serve his current team one year beyond his contract in order to become a free agent. But even though that was not altered by Sweigert's decision, the option clause also may be in trouble because it is linked to the Rozelle Rule.

Under the Rozelle Rule, if Team A signs a player who used to play for Team B, Team B must get something in return from Team A. If the two teams can't decide themselves on compensation, NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle decides.

And Sweigert held that by requiring compensation, the Rozelle Rule prohibited an NFL player from negotiating his services on a free and open market.

Warriors Lose Sixth Straight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Al Attles called it a defensive breakdown; Dick Motta called it a good job by the referees.

Whatever it was, it was a National Basketball Association victory for Motta's Chicago Bulls over Attles' Golden State Warriors.

"The fact that we have now lost six in a row on the road makes me sure we have had a defensive breakdown, and I want to know why," Attles said following the Warriors' 127-103 loss to the Bulls.

Motta said: "The big difference was the refs were calling the grabbing and hacking whenever we got a forward inside. And when the refs do their job, there's no way we can lose."

In other games, Boston beat Cleveland 121-99, Buffalo defeated Atlanta 111-101, Milwaukee edged Philadelphia 101-97, Washington beat New Orleans 106-101, Phoenix downed Los Angeles 105-101, and Seattle defeated Portland 106-103.

Curlers Split

TORONTO (CP) — A group of touring Scottish curlers won one of two Strathcona Cup matches Friday but remained behind in the series by a total count of 457-383 after 10 matches.

The Strathcona Cup is an irregular event involving alternated visits between Canadian and Scottish curlers. The current series continues with matches at Ottawa, Montebello, Que., Montreal, Trois-Rivieres, Quebec City, Saint John, N.B., and Halifax.

On Friday, a morning match at the Toronto Cricket, Skating and Curling Club saw the hosts win 33-32 against the five Scots rinks. Later, the Scots beat the Granite Club 58-37.

Ottawa Wants WHA To Return to City

OTTATA (CP) — An Ottawa group seeking the return of a World Hockey Association franchise to the capital had their hopes bolstered Friday when Mayor Lorry Greenberg pledged his support for their cause.

"I would welcome a team and would do my utmost as mayor to assist those who want a WHA franchise," Mr. Greenberg said.

The mayor and Chicago Cougar player-owner Ralph Backstrom shared top billing at a luncheon attended by about 400 persons, more than 100 of them pleging $1,000 to lure a WHA team here. The Founders Club wants 500 such pledges before actively dickering for a franchise.

Backstrom said the WHA had adopted the same thinking as its rival National Hockey League that expansion should be halted after new clubs enter the league next season.

Backstrom, who said he came to Ottawa as a goodwill ambassador for the WHA, conceded the Chicago franchise will be looking for a home if a proposed 18,000-seat arena isn't promised soon in the Chicago suburbs.

The Ottawa group had its eye on the Michigan Stags franchise until it moved to Baltimore. Backstrom said the Stags might become available if Baltimore does not support them.

Asked what other WHA franchises might become available to Ottawa, Backstrom said most of the "weak sisters" had been eliminated.

But there was a chance that Vancouver Blazers might find opposition from the NHL Canucks too much. The same might be said for the Toronto Toros, he added.

Ottawa's first franchise in the WHA was a disaster. The Nationals, now the Toronto Toros, had troubles getting a deal with the civic-owned rink and got lukewarm support from the press and radio.

The Ottawa rink seating capacity is just below 9,500 and Backstrom said he believes that would be enough for at least a few years. But to keep the club in sound economic shape, thought should be given then to adding about 3,000 more seats.

Ottawa sports columnist Bob Mellor told the group that his talks with WHA officials convinced him that a new franchise, when available, would cost less than the $2-million price tag.

Rutherford Says Racers Need to Get Closer to Fans

DAYTONA BEACH Florida, (AP) — Johnny Rutherford, the 1974 Indianapolis winner, says race drivers are no different from other athletes, and he wants the people to see for themselves. A.J. Foyt, who has grumbled at over-zealous fans, agrees it is time to let down a few barriers.

"We've got to get closer to the people," Foyt said. "We should be willing to meet and talk to the fans, explain to them what auto racing is all about.

"Maybe 90 per cent of the people who leave a race don't understand it. We can help them. They pay big money to see us perform, then leave without really understanding what they have seen. Just telling them over a loudspeaker system isn't enough anymore. We've got to go out there and meet them."

Rutherford, who won almost $400,000 in prize money last year, joined Foyt and several other top drivers at a news conference in Daytona Beach last week on the eve of the opening of Speed Weeks.

They announced formation of a motor sports club and said it had a potential membership of 500,000 race fans. One stated policy of the club will be to set up compounds near garage areas at tracks and open them to fans. Drivers would visit the compounds at certain times on qualifying days, mingle with fans and explain the inner workings of auto racing.

The first such compound will be set up at Darlington (S.C.) Raceway in April during the running of the Rebel 500 stock car race. The same thing will be tried at the World 600 in Charlotte, N.C., in May.

"I have seen Richard Petty stand at the gates for two hours signing autographs," said former driver Roger Penske. "He shouldn't have to do that. We should have a place where he can bring his race car, and where other drivers can mingle with the fans.

"Petty is the darling of the stock car fans, and it's because he not only wins but because he's willing to take time to meet with the people."

Penske now owns two racing teams and the Michigan International Raceway where fans are allowed to come down from the stands and meet the drivers and inspect their racers at close range.

Rutherford was mobbed after winning the 1974 Indianapolis race, but by people who had spent upwards of $40 for seats that placed them near the pit road action.

"People not now familiar with race drivers and racing want to know what it's all about, and they want to meet the people involved in it," Rutherford said.

No Recognition

LONDON (AP) — The British Boxing Board announced Friday it will not recognize a world heavyweight title fight between Muhammad Ali and Chuck Wepner. Ali and Wepner are scheduled to meet in Cleveland on March 24. The British say European champion Joe Bugner of Britain has a better claim to challenge Ali than Wepner, who is not ranked in the world's top 10 by the World Boxing Council and the World Boxing Association.

Toronto Looking Good Under Bobby Leduc

By CHUCK SVOBODA
The Canadian Press

Bobby Leduc, journeyman hockey player suddenly thrust into the difficult task of coaching a major league club three weeks ago, already is beginning to make his predecessor look bad.

Leduc took over Toronto Toros when Billy Harris, under pressure from club directors because of the club's inconsistent play and further distracted by family illnesses, stepped down.

When he took over, the former Toros forward said he planned to demand that the players get into better condition and pay more attention to the fundamentals of the game.

The new regime was in contrast to Harris's policy of letting his players use their own judgement regarding conditioning.

After a shaky start, the new coach now has five wins and a tie against three losses and the Toros' current winning streak stretched to four games Friday night when they beat Vancouver Blazers 6-0.

"It's a different team from the one we had a month ago," said goalie Gilles Gratton who stopped 33 shots to record his second shutout of the season.

"We're hustling more in practice as well as the games now. We're simply putting it all together."

In other games, New England Whalers edged Baltimore Blades 4-3, Minnesota Fighting Saints beat Houston Aeros 4-1 and Cleveland Crusaders blanked Edmonton Oilers 2-0.

Tony Featherstone scored twice against the Blazers and centre Wayne Dillon broke a personal 12-game scoring slump with his 18th goal of the season. Rookie defenceman Jim Turkiewicz also collected his first professional goal as the Toros fired 42 shots at Vancouver goalie Don McLeod.

Baltimore, formerly Michigan Stags, ran into their 23rd loss of the season on the road while the Whalers ran their home record to 17-3.

The defending champion Aeros had a 34-31 advantage in shots over Minnesota but only Gord Labossiere managed to get a goal against the sharp netminding of John Garrett.

Also sharp in goal was Cleveland's Gerry Cheevers who stopped 28 shots for the Crusaders win at Edmonton.

Al McDonough scored for Cleveland in the first period and Skip Krake beat Jacques Plante on a breakaway in the final period.

Kings Wide Awake In Norris Standings

The Canadian Press

Los Angeles Kings often have been described this season as a team that beats its opponents by putting them to sleep with a dull style of close-checking patterns prescribed by coach Bob Pulford.

That the Kings have not succumbed to their own sedation is borne out by their leading position in the National Hockey League Norris Division, a lead which they defend tonight in a match against the second-place Montreal Canadiens.

In the only NHL game Friday, St. Louis Blues defeated Atlanta Flames 4-2.

The Kings lead their division with 71 points which, along with Buffalo Sabres of the Adams Division, makes them the top points earners in the league. Montreal is second in the Norris circuit, two points behind Los Angeles.

The Kings have been looking forward to tonight's game, so much so that they almost ignored another opponent Thursday night. Washington Capitals jumped to a 2-1 first-period lead before the Kings woke up with four goals in the second period.

"We didn't play well defensively and they had too many shots in the first period," Pulford said. "Maybe we were thinking ahead to Montreal."

Tonight's game will be the fifth this season between the Kings and Canadiens. Their first three meetings ended in ties and Los Angeles won the last one 6-3 in Montreal.

Curt Bennett scored for the Flames on a power play at 8:37 of the first period but Unger put a shot past Atlanta goalie Dan Bouchard to tie the game.

The Blues went in front midway in the second period when Bob Hess fired a shot in from the point. St. Louis scored agina when Collins, on a two-on-one break, shot from the right face-off circle to give the Blues a two-goal lead.

Penguins Fate Decided At Today's Meeting

NEW YORK (CP) — Money problems in Pittsburgh and an old $3-million lawsuit brought by a former Oakland owner are two of the prime topics to be discussed at the National Hockey League meeting here today.

Whether the Penguins leave Pittsburgh and California Seals depart from Oakland may well hinge on the decisions taken by the NHL's board of governors.

Thayer Potter, owner of the Penguins, has faced a shortage of cash to keep the club going and is seeking new long-term investment. His cash needs are reported between $500,000 and $1 million.

H will report to the governors on his efforts to raise additional capital. Borrowing from the league may be another possibility. That means the other clubs might be asked to lend Pittsburgh some money.

The Penguins, unbeaten in their last 16 games at home, have started drawing sellout crowds. They are in third place in the Norris Division and seem to be a shoo-in for the playoffs for the first time in three seasons.

Potter has insisted that the Penguins will not leave Pittsburgh. He has gone ahead with plans to add 2,000 seats in the Civic Arena, which can seat 13,402 for hockey.

The NHL also is getting closer to a decision on the California franchise. The league bought out owner Charles O. Finley for $6.5 million last year and is operating the franchise.

But the NHL cannot move the Seals elsewhere until there is a settlement of the lawsuit brought by Barend von Gerbig, head of the group that originally owned the Seals from 1967 to 1969.

Von Gerbig sued the NHL for refusing to allow him to transfer the franchise, a big money-loaner in Oakland from its inception. He brought an anti-trust action against the league.

Lawyers for both sides want to settle out of court and chances for a settlement are reported good. Obviously, the governors will have to decide what to pay the man.

The governors also will hear a report on the yerba-buena development program which includes building a sports centre in downtown San Francisco.

If there is a reasonably good chance that the arena will be built, the league could decide to keep the Seals in Oakland for the time being, pending a shift across the bay to San Francisco under new owners.

The NHL-appointed administrators have been running "a tight ship" in Oakland, keeping costs down, and there has been a healthy increase at the box office although California is in last place in the Adams Division.

Seattle and Denver both have conditional franchises in the NHL for the 1976-77 season, but their arenas will be ready next season. The owners of the franchises want to begin play in 1975-76. Thus there have been plenty of rumors making the rounds that Oakland will end up in Denver and Pittsburgh in Seattle next season.

Bayi Breaks Mile Record

NEW YORK (CP), — Filbert Bayi of Tanzania, running indoors for the first time, didn't plan to break any records. But his famous kick was there all the way as he won the Tanamaker Mile in a meet record three minutes, 59.3 seconds.

Bayi's victory in his United States debut bordered on the sensational because the rubberized boards he was running on are heavily banked and not the fastest. He took the lead with a 58.5 initial quarter in the Millrose Games event at Madison square Garden Friday night and never let go.

The mile run easily was the premier event of the 68th Millrose Games before a sellout crowd of 17,606, the biggest for a track and field meet in New York in several years.

There are no indoor tracks in Tanzania, where Bayi as a boy used to hunt gazelle barefoot. "Even our national coaches know nothing about indoors," the 21-year-old Bayi said. Although he complained that the air in the Garden was too dry, he said running on the boards "wasn't bad."

Only a handful of Canadians competed in the meet, the first of the indoor season in New York.

Debbie Mitchell of the Toronto Olympic Club ran a strong race in the women's 1,000 yards, finishing third in 2;29.3. High jumper Claude Ferragne of Montreal cleared seven feet but failed three times at 7-2 and ended up in third place. In the two-mile race, Joe Sax of the Toronto Olympic Club was 10th and last, almost lapped by the winner.

In a specialty event, the master mile for runners over 40, Canadian Ed Whitlock was second in 4:33.4.

Bayi, who surprised the world in the 1974 Commonwealth Games at Christchurch, N.Z., by winning the gold medal in the 1,500 metres, said he thought all along that it was Marty Liquori, three-time winner of the Wanamaker Mile, he had beaten.

But Liquori was out of the race early and wound up fourth in 4:07.8. The only real challenger was Paul Cummings of Brigham Young University, second in 3:59.8, and also under Tony Waldrop's meet record of 3:59.7, set last year.

With 1½ laps to go, Cummings almost pulled even with Bayi, who set a world record of 3:32.2 for the 1,500 at the Commonwealth Games.

"He was trying to pass but that was when I kicked and I went very fast," Bayi said. "I saw his hand and I kicked. I knew I had some strength left."

But Bayi said he didn't go out to break four minutes. "If it would come," that would be all right, too. But to win is the important thing."

Francie Larrieu of the Pacific Coast Track Club got out of the box to set another meet mark, winning the women's 1,000-yard event in 2:26.8, with Cheryl Toussaint of New York second and Miss Mitchell third.

Al Feuerbach captured the shot put with a heave of 68 feet 11½ inches, equalling the meet mark set by George Woods, his team-mate from the Pacific Coast Club who was second with 63-9½.

Californian Vic Dias won the pole vault, clearing 16-10, and Mel Embree of Harvard upset world champion Dwight Stones of the Pacific Coast Club in the high jump. Embree and Stones each cleared 7-2 but Embree had fewer misses.

Berezowski and Porter Senior Dance Champs

Senior Pair Finally Wins Crown

QUEBEC (CP)—Barbara Berezowski and David Porter are looking forward to the world figure skating championships now that they have finally won the Canadian senior dance crown.

"They have a much better chance now that they are going as Canadian champions rather than as second-place finishers," said Marijane Stong, coach of the young couple at the Toronto granite Club, after they had wrapped up the title Friday night.

Miss Berezowski, 19, and Porter, 25, have skated in the shadow of Louise and Barry Soper of Vancouver, Canadian champions the last three years.

The Sopers, a husband-and-wife team, retired after winning at Moncton, N.B., last year.

All seven judges ranked Berezowski and Porter first in the compulsory set-dance program Thursday and first in the free skating Friday.

Toller Cranston of Toronto and Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa tightened their grips on the senior singles titles with strong performances in the compulsory free-skating competition.

Cranston, a virtual certainty to capture his fifth consecutive senior men's title in the free skating today, received marks in the 5.8 and 5.9 range—within a fraction of perfect sixes.

The 25-year-old skater, who has revolutionized men's skating with his expressive use of hands, is expected to win the world championship in Colorado Springs, Colo, in March.

Cranston was third in the world last year at Munich but clearly established that he is the best free-skater anywhere. He has worked hard on his figures and should be in better position to make a run for the top this year.

Jan Hoffman of East Germany, the reigning world champion, will miss this year's competition because of a knee operation, and Cranston stands a good chance of overhauling Sergei Volkov of the Soviet Union who barely edged him for second in Munich.

Miss Nightingale, 18, the defending women's senior champion, was again ranked first by the judges in the compulsory free skating and seemed poised for an easy victory in today's free skating.

She was sixth in the world last year but, after winning Skate Canada and Skate Moscow competitions in the last few months, is hoping to move into medal contention this year.

Three gold medals were awarded in junior competition Friday night. Kevin Hicks of Windsor, Ont., won the men's singles, Camille Rebus of Edmonton took the women's singles, and Judie Jeffcott of Toronto and Keith Swindlehurst of Richmond Hill, Ont., captured the dance title.

Second place in the senior dance competition was taken by Susan Carsoalgen and Eric Gillies of Toronto, the 1974 junior champions, and third went to Shelley MacLeod and Bob Knapp of Cambridge, Ont., fifth in the seniors last year.

The junior men's victory for was a major achievement Hicks, 15, who had moved up to that level only recently after winning the novice title in 1974.

Fifth after the compulsory figures, Hicks was strong in the compulsory free skating to move up to second behind Jimmy Szabo of Coquitlam, B.C. Then he put on an impressive free-skating performance to edge Szabo for the gold medal. Third was Gary Beacom of Toronto.

Miss Rebus; 15, made her charge from a fifth-place ranking in the compulsory figures to the junior women's title.

Second was Heather Anderson, 13, of North Vancouver, B.C., the leader after the school figures, and third was Julie Bowerman of Woodstock, Ont.

Miss Jeffcott, 19, and Swindlehurst, 27, were clear winners in the junior dance event, but the crowd of nearly 3,000 also was treated to attractive exhibitions by Debbie and Greg Young of Toronto, second, and Amy and David Martin of Lindsay, Ont., third.

Canada can send three senior men to the world championships this year and Cranston and Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., fifth at Munich in 1974, have already qualified for two of the berths.

The third spot is likely to go to the runner-up here and, with free skating to come, Bob Rubens of Montreal likely will win that spot.

There also is an exciting battle for second in the women's with a trip to the world championship as a prize. Canada can send two women to Colorado Springs because it had a finisher in the top 10, Miss Nightingale, in Munich.

Kim Alletson of Ottawa moved from third to second after the compulsory free skating.

The senior pairs, cut to four couples after Cheri and Dennis Pinner of London, Ont., had to withdraw because of an injury to Cheri, ran through the compulsory short program Friday night.

Kathy Hutchinson and Jamie McGrigor of Cambridge, Ont., were first with a narrow lead over Candy Jones of Toronto and Don Fraser of Richmond Hill, Ont.

Christine McBeth of Surrey, B.C., and Dennis Johnston of Port Perry, Ont., were third and Marie-Ellen and Bernard Souche of Thornhill, Ont., who won the junior pairs Thursday, fourth.

Sandra and Val Bezic, the defending Canadian champions, withdrew before this year's competition began because Sandra is recovering from an injury.

But they qualify automatically for the world championships because of their fifth-place finish in 1974. And they will be accompanied by the new Canadian champions to be crowned today.

WANTED

We're looking for rental accommodation in your community. It's for lower income families who are spending more than they can really afford on rent. Families in need of rental assistance can be housed within the private sector.

The Rent Supplement Program for landlords will guarantee units will be occupied at the prevailing market rents for three years or more. Market rents mean just that. We'll review the rents annually to ensure they are consistent with rents in your municipality.

For developers we'll provide second mortgage financing at below market interest rates — up to 35 per cent of capital cost — to bring mortgage financing up to 95 per cent of construction cost. In return we ask developers to take part in our rent supplement program.

We will consider apartments, detached or semi-detached houses and row houses. All we ask is that units are self-contained and meet residential standards.

After a landlord and the Ontario Housing Corporation agree on a market rent, the landlord participates in selecting a tenant or tenants from the local waiting list for assisted housing. The tenant then pays his rent to the landlord, just as other families in the building do, and OHC mails a monthly cheque to the landlord to cover the difference between that rent and the agreed market rent.

The new tenants are treated the same as any other family. They sign a lease and assume the normal responsibilities outlined in The Landlord and Tenant Act.

Applications should be submitted to:

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Sunday, February 2

Aries (March 21-April 19) Persons with whom you have strong emotional ties are most anxious now to appease your interests and aims.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You'll be lucky today in situations that call for teamwork. Your partner will backstop anything slipping past you.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) There are things you can do, if you're industrious enough, that will save you money later on. Get out the repair kit. Go to work.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) It has been a trying week. You're entitled to relax and let yourself go. Arrange something that's fun with a few friends.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) There'll be lots of activity around your house. It will be action you're comfortable with and personally enjoy.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions are developing that aren't yet visible or apparent. They'll have a favorable effect on your finances.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're not the type of person who goes unnoticed. Today, you will draw even more attention than usual.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's best for the present to keep outsiders' noses out of your business. However, family discussions will bear fruit.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will notice today that those in your peer group will look to you for leadership. Assert yourself if you feel it's necessary.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Gratifying results await if you direct your full energies and attention to your most important goals and ambitions.

Treasure Trove

TOKYO (AP) — A trove of ancient manuscripts, paintings, weapons and tools, some dating back 2,000 years, has been unearthed in central China, says Peking's official news agency. The manuscripts ranged from technical medical treatises and political discourses to a 4,000-word essay on how to judge a horse.

Varied Causes Of Kidney Stones

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband passed a kidney stone a short while ago which was very painful. The doctor took x-rays and said there were no signs of any other stones. Your comment, please—Mrs. H.N.

Kidney stones result from different causes. Milk, in excess, can be one of them because of its calcium content.

A kinking of the ureters resulting in interference of normal urine flow can be another cause, as can a urinary tract infection, especially one involving the kidneys themselves. Another and perhaps more common cause is the excessive excretion of calcium or wastes from the kidney.

The excess calcium excretion can be a result of overactivity of the parathyroid gland or, as perhaps in your husband's case, an excessive intake of calcium from such things as milk drinking.

Since urate stones can occur with gout, it is important to have an analysis of the stone to determine its chemical makeup. This is undoubtedly what your husband's doctor did, and what prompted him to issue the caution on milk.

Analysis of the urine will give a clue to any infection and the x-rays would indicate any structural defects in the kidney or urinary tract.

The fact that your husband passed one stone doesn't mean that he necessarily will pass another.

A burning sensation during urination would suggest infection, and pain in the flank would be another warning that a checkup is in order.

Besides cutting down on milk, adequate water drinking will help dilute the urine and lessen the chance of stone formation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband, 59, has always seemed to be subject to spells of diarrhea. He has been drinking at least a six-pack of large cans of beer each day. I wonder if the yeast in the beer could be causing it?—Mrs. M.M.

It's not likely that it is the yeast, since the bulk of that is spent in the brewing process before it gets into the cans or your husband's stomach.

But beer can cause loose stool and rectal irritation, too. It is probably due to the combination of alcohol and carbohydrate content. And, from what you say it seems he is on a largely liquid diet anyway—another factor.

The Missing Three Men

One of the eeriest unexplained disappearances on record is that of three light-keepers on one of the Flannan Isles who vanished — from behind a locked door.

The Flannan Isles lie off the northwest coast of Scotland. Chunks of rock, the tips of undersea mountains, they jut out of the ocean some 20 miles east of the island of Lewis, largest of the Hebrides. On the west, the bleak Atlantic stretches endlessly. It is one of the loneliest and most desolate places on the globe.

In 1900, there was a small lighthouse on the biggest of the Flannans, which was merely a piece of rock 500 feet long and not so wide.

The Seven Hunters Lighthouse, as it was called, was staffed by four men who trimmed the wicks, oiled the machinery, and kept the tower in repair between visits of the supply ship, which came every six weeks.

In late December, 1900, there was a tremendous storm of several days duration. The lighthouse was pounded by mountainous waves that would have swept it away if it hadn't been built on solid rock.

The supply ship, delayed by the storm, arrived after it had subsided, on Dec. 26. Aboard was Joseph Moore, one of the four regular light-keepers who was returning from a two-week vacation on the mainland.

Moore had left behind at the lighthouse his three co-workers — Thomas Marshall, James Ducat and Donald McArthur. However, no trace of these men could be found.

Moore, with the ship's crew, made an exhaustive search of the lighthouse and the tiny island. The three men's boots and oilskins were found in place. Strangely, the lighthouse door was barred from the inside, indicating that the men were indoors when they disappeared.

The entries in the lighthouse log gave no clue as to how and why they had vanished.

On December 12, the entry read: "Storm raging." That was odd since according to all reports from ships in the area there had been no storm on that date.

The entry for Dec. 13 said: "Storm continued through night." The last entry, on Dec. 14, said simply: "Noon. Gray daylight. Me, Ducat and McArthur prayed . . . "

Joseph Moore, the returning light-keeper, said his companions weren't the praying kind — unless they were awfully afraid. He didn't think a storm could scare them that much.

And where had the three men vanished to?

They couldn't have been swept into the sea because the lighthouse door could only be bolted from the inside. And there was no other means of entry or exit.

The fate of those three men on the Flannan Isles is unexplained . . .

Pensioners Considered

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives launched a concerted effort Friday to improve the lot of old age pensioners, convincing the government to yield ground on at least one point.

Bud Cullen, parliamentary secretary for finance, said Friday the government will adopt a change advocated by George Whittaker (PC—Okanagan-Boundary). It will make pensions available to some armed forces veterans who do not quality.

Meanwhile, Don Munro (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) urged that income and sales taxes be abolished for all senior citizens in an effort to restore public faith in saving.

He also asked for legislative changes to let pensioners earn extra money without losing guaranteed income supplements, now paid only to the neediest.

Diplomats Spar in Mideast

Gromyko Is Trying To Block Kissinger

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko flew into Cairo today on major fence-mending mission and called for the immediate resumption of the Geneva Middle East peace talks.

He arrived from Damascus, where he held talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and signed an agreement providing Soviet aid to Syrian irrigation and fishery projects. No figures were announced.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy welcomed Gromyko at Cairo airport.

Gromyko reaffirmed that Moscow's view on settling the Middle East was based on complete Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands, achievement of what he called the legitimate rights of the Palestinians, "and finally the immediate resumption of the peace conference in Geneva to discuss matters related to a settlement."

The Soviets are anxious to blunt the step-by-step diplomacy advocated by United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger, who will visit Egypt later this month to continue his peacemaking efforts. At the Geneva peace talks all Israel's Arab adversaries would be represented and the Soviets would play a major role.

Sadat said if Kissinger, when he visits the Middle East later this month, brings proposals for another Israeli withdrawal in the Sinai desert, "it would be treason" not to accept them even if they do not include Israeli withdrawals on the Syrian and Jordanian fronts.

"There is no contradiction between our rejection of separate solutions with Israel and any movement on the Egyptian front," Sadat said. "Strengthening Egypt's position enhances other Arab fronts."

But the Egyptian leader added he did not expect anything definite from Kissinger's trip. He said Israel must also withdraw on the Syrian and Jordanian fronts to "defuse the explosive situation."

Sadat said Egypt wants "to establish good relations with the Soviet Union and other powers in order to be able to rebuild our country."

Moscow-Cairo relations have been cool since the Soviets refused to sell Sadat arms after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, and Sadat refused to agree to the return of the Soviet military advisers he expelled in 1972. Sadat turned to the French, who agreed last week to sell him Mirage jet fighters and other arms.

The prospects for getting the Geneva conference going and Kissinger's coming visit to Cairo, Damascus and Jerusalem were among the matters discussed between Gromyko and the Syrian president Sunday, informed sources in Damascus said.

Ethiopian Jets Flatten Villages

ADDIS ABABA (CP) — Ethiopian air force jets have flattened two Eritrean rebel villages in a major escalation of fighting between government troops and Moslem insurgents bent on secession, diplomatic sources reported today from Asmara, capital of Eritrea province. No other details were immediately available.

The Ethiopian army was reported in control of Asmara after beating back an attempt by the guerrillas to re-enter the country's second largest city.

Reports from Asmara, the capital of Eritrea province 450 miles north of Addis Ababa, said at least 75 rebels and civilians have been killed and 200 wounded in heavy fighting since Friday. There were no reports of army casualties.

Reliable sources said 52 government tanks, 20 armored vehicles and a number of trucks carrying troops were on their way to Asmara and expected to arrive later today.

Ethiopia's military government issued no information about the fighting in the country's northernmost province and blocked the roads to Asmara.

But informed official sources gave these reports of the Eritrean Liberation Front's (ELF) most serious challenge to rule from Addis Ababa in the 12 years it has been fighting for Eritrean independence:

Battling from house to house, the army drove the guerrillas out of the city of 200,000 Saturday. The rebels counterattacked early Sunday, and there was hard fighting at a naval headquarters near the United States consulate.

Fighting also was heavy at the Asmara airport, and it was not known which side held the field. The air force's two U.S.-built F-5A jet fighters attacked a suspected rebel base 10 miles north of the city, but there were no air attacks on Asmara itself.

There were unconfirmed reports that government troops carried out reprisal raids against villages suspected of being used by the guerrillas.

Eyewitnesses reported Sunday that two villages north of Asmara were almost completely levelled in bombing raids.

They added that heavy ground fighting took place near the village of Adi Nefas, about six miles north Asmara. The provincial capital was in total darkness after a power cut, but was quiet Sunday night with troops recalled to their barracks and patrols taken up by police.

Showdown on Syncrude Set Today in Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Government ministers and top executives of four oil companies meet here today in the latest round of talks aimed at saving the Syncrude oil sands project, but some officials said they expect no final decision from the meeting.

The session on neutral ground in Winnipeg was scheduled after Syncrude's owners agreed during a meeting with Energy minister Donald Macdonald Friday to keep the $2 billion project alive until at least today.

The owners—Imperial Oil Ltd., Gulf Canada Ltd. and Canada—Cities Service Ltd.—had threatened to cancel the project at midnight last Friday unless they found new partners and additional financing of $1 billion.

Although an agreement in principle might be reached at the meeting, it is more likely the negotiators will seek more time to make a decision on investment.

"It's still up in the air," said one source close to the talks. "There are still a lot of things on the table to be negotiated."

Premiers William Davis of Ontario and Peter Lougheed of Alberta, two of the provinces that have shown interest in providing funds for the venture, were to join Energy Minister Macdonald and executives of Syncrude's owners for the talks.

Treasury Board Chairman Jean Chretien, who would have to approve any large federal investment, also was expected to attend along with officials of Shell Canada Ltd., the only other oil company that has shown an interest in the project.

Syncrude said costs are running at $1 million a day and any delay would also result in the company having to make interim payments on $400 million in equipment orders.

But six hours before the Friday time limit, the owners emerged from the meeting with Mr. Macdonald to say they were "sufficiently encouraged by progress" to wait until after today's session.

Despite the interest shown by the provinces and Shell Canada, only Ottawa has made a cash offer so far, saying it is willing to commit $200 million and that an additional $300 million might be available under certain conditions. Those conditions have not been outlined.

Syncrude ran into financial trouble in December when one of its partners, Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd., withdrew after estimated cost of the project doubled to $2 billion during one year.

Government Putting on Heat To Get Tax Changes Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — With an eye on the approaching deadline for income tax returns, the government has set aside this week for debate on its 287-page omnibus tax bill.

The pressure is heightened by the fact that the tax return forms, already printed and mailed, contain some provisions not yet approved by Parliament. Returns must be mailed to the government by April 30.

"It's that simple," said a privy council spokesman. "It has to be passed and passed bloody quickly."

The bill is an amalgam of measures proposed in the Nov. 18 budget. Included are measures aimed at the individual taxpayer as well as at the corporate giants and just about every income level between.

The problem lies in the fact that second reading began only last Tuesday and by week's end there had been less than 10 hours of debate on the proposed legislation.

Once second reading, approval in principle, is done, the Commons will sit in committee of the whole for clause-by-clause consideration and possible amendment.

There are 142 clauses in the bill, many with complicated sections and sub-sections that could promote lengthy debate.

But Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp suggests the bill could have final Commons approval in six or seven days.

Finance Minister John Turner, however, has said he does not want to go through the bill too quickly because of its importance.

"I'd like to see the bill dealt with with reasonable dispatch, but I think the issues are important enough that they ought to be debated thoroughly," he said in an interview.

"But I never lean on Parliament: I find that that would be self-defeating."

The government has its hands tied. It cannot mail out refunds on 1974 income tax returns until the bill is passed.

The bill would among other things, reduce personal income taxes by a minimum of $150 and a maximum of $500 for 1974 and a minimum of 200 and a maximum of $750 for 1975.

It also would exempt from taxation any income up to $1,000, from interest on savings accounts, dividends or private pension plans. Taxpayers would be permitted tax-free savings of $1000 annually, up to a total of $10,000, for purchase of their first home.

Also included are hotly-contested proposals to tax royalties paid by petroleum companies. This led to a constitutional battle between Ottawa and the oil-producing provinces, but Alberta, the major producer, since has made some concessions.

Sinclair Stevens, the main Progressive Conservative finance critic, says he expects second reading debate to continue until Tuesday and possibly Wednesday.

He said the government waited more than a month after the Nov. 18 budget before introducing the bill and more than two months before bringing it back for second reading.

"I'd be very, very surprised if the government tries to get unduly pushy on this. Any nonsense about refunds going to be held up—that's just tactics."

Charred Body Found in Bush

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Walter Tucker, administrator of the Clearwater Private Club, said Sunday he found a partly decomposed and charred body in a wooded area on property rented by the club in Puslinch Township, about 15 miles southwest of here.

Mr. Tucker, 41, said he and his 19-year-old son found the body while on a walk. A gun and an empty can of flammable liquid were near the body.

City Hall Employees Approve Strike Call

By PETER LEICHNITZ
City Editor

City hall workers today voted 30-to-2 to take strike action to back up demands for a new contract.

Peter Ouderkirk, president of the Belleville local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said no strike date has been set and that the union has asked for further meetings with the city to discuss a new pact.

The workers last week rejected a city offer for a one-year contract, which included a 14-per cent salary increase and a city-paid dental plan.

The union is asking for a 25-per cent increase for clerical staff and a 21-percent boost for technical staff in a one-year agreement.

If a strike is called, city hall will be without its telephone receptionist, plumbing and building inspectors, clerks and technical staff.

'Snuggle Up' Is Advice From Ms. Groundhog In Sunday's Sun

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

Button up and batten down. That's the official word from the burrow of Marmota Monax in the frozen fastness of Belleville's West Hill.

Sunday marked the annual observance of Groundhog Day and, this being International Women's Year, Ms. Grizella Groundhog was the subject of a brief interview. Why not?

"I'm snuggling up for another six weeks," said Ms. Groundhog, as she glimpsed her shadow in Sunday's bright sunlight. "And I'd advise you to do the same."

Normally Ms. Groundhog's husband, Gus, would have done the honors, but this year he was still sleeping off the effects of an overload of fermented huckleberries he took on last November. Why not?

Your leisure years made easier.

First Canadian Retirement Savings Plan

First Canadian Retirement Savings Plan helps you plan for your leisure years.
Retirement can be the time of your life. But you have to plan for it now, while your earning power—and probably your expenses—are high. You can start by reading about First Canadian Retirement Savings Plan, and how it can make your leisure years, as well as your saving years, much, much easier.

By investing in First Canadian Retirement Savings Plan any time during and up to 60 days after a taxation year, you may reduce your taxable income by the amount of your investment, up to the lesser of: 20% of your earned income, $4000 if you have no pension plan, $2500 if you are a non-contributing member of a pension plan, or $2500 less the amount of your contributions to a company pension plan. Your tax reduction is not affected by payment into the Canada or Quebec Pension Plans. Income tax will have to be paid on your savings eventually—either when used as retirement income or if you withdraw your savings prior to retirement—but probably at a lower rate than during your peak earning years.

Choose from two options.
At present there are two options available. Both are eligible for registration with the tax authorities so that you can reduce your annual income tax.

Option I-First Canadian Mortgage Fund.
In today's financial market, investment in a quality mortgage fund is considered a good bet to produce a relatively secure high yield over the long term. At the same time, investors may realize an increase in value of their units in this Fund depending on prevailing mortgage interest rates. There is no load on the purchase or redemption of these units.

Option II-Firstbank Special Retirement Account. Your deposits in this special bank account will earn interest at the Bank's Five-Year-Term Deposit Receipt rate. This rate of interest will be fixed every January 1st and July 1st at the rate prevailing that day—and remain in effect for six months.
Interest is calculated and payable on your minimum monthly balance and credited semi-annually.

Over the long term, the yield will vary but always be tied to the upper end of the scale of bank interest rates.

Option I and Option II. If you wish, you may buy into both First Canadian Mortgage Fund and Firstbank Special Retirement Account. In fact, over the long term and as economic conditions fluctuate, one option may become more profitable and appropriate than the other. You may switch your savings contributions from one option to another without penalty or charge.

The cost of this plan is minimal.
Unlike many other registered retirement savings plans, there is no charge for opening or closing a plan.
There is an annual Trustee fee of 1/5 of 1% of your investment—maximum $25 per account, to cover registration and the expense of the Trustee of the plan. The amount will be deducted from your share of the income of the plan and will be indicated on your statement. The standard management fees will also be applicable.

You start by investing as little as $200.
The minimum initial contribution into First Canadian Mortgage Fund and Firstbank Special Retirement Account is $200. (If you invest in both, your first contribution is $400—$200 into each option). Contributions may be made at any time. However, the most effective method of participation is on a regular basis.
Ask your bank manager to help you work out a regular payment schedule and automatically transfer funds from your bank account to your R.R.S.P., as per your instructions.

Now is the time to arrange your saving program for the future with First Canadian Retirement Savings Plans.

For an independent analysis of types of plans, what to look for, costs, etc., ask for R.R.S.P. specialist, R. W. Wakefield's booklet, "Registered Retirement Savings Plans".

Toronto, Berten Victims Of Morgan's Unique Wit

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

HENRY MORGAN

Mr. Morgan, who chose to answer questions from the audience at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall rather than speak from a prepared text, received the best response for his comments about the local scene.

On Mayor Robin Jeffrey, he said. "In Belleville you have one mayor, a woman, and one city manager. In Toronto we have one mayor and two million city managers.

And even the chamber of commerce didn't escape his bite as he referred to a printing error in the chamber's regular publication, What's Happening in Belleville.

Mr. Morgan, an ex-patriate American, now living in Toronto, was a prominent panelist on the long-running television show I've Got a Secret. As well, he has appeared on numerous talk shows, has written a column for a Toronto newspaper and has a regular segment on a Toronto radio station called Here's Morgan.

As a new-comer to Canada and Toronto, many of the questions asked concerned his views on his newly-adopted city and of the country he left behind.

Mr. Morgan also was asked to give his views on how his chosen home compares to cities such as New York, Vancouver, Montreal, and even Belleville.

On New York he said, "You find better restaurants there. The ones in Toronto are too expensive. On Vancouver: "It's pretty from the air". On Montreal: "I don't speak enough French to live there."

On Toronto: "In New York they say you can't walk the streets safely. In Toronto, you can walk the streets without any trouble at all, but where can you go?"

He didn't venture any opinion on Belleville, saying it was his first time here and it wouldn't be fair to base anything on a first impression.

He did talk about the United Empire Loyalist background of the original settlers here and also said: "When I arrived here I saw you had a CN station and a Four Seasons Hotel, always a Four Seasons Hotel."

Other Morganisms: On Toronto's other most famous newcomer, Xaveria Hollander; "I met her once in Toronto and found her to be a plain woman. I then saw her in a men's magazine, wearing little, well wearing nothing at all, and I still say she's a plain woman.

On Pierre Berten and what he would suggest to him if he were looking for another job: "Pierre Berten. He already owns most of Canada, he owns the railways, the Klondike and a lot more. He must be saving money by not getting haircuts."

Students To Visit Whitney

Classes 7Cb and 10Ca of Our Lady of Fatima School will make their second visit to Sir James Whitney School, the former Ontario School for the Deaf on Dundas St. W., Wednesday afternoon.

The students will arrive at 1 p.m. and will first view a movie about their initial visit. If time allows, they will also watch slides concerning the Whitney School.

Two separate tours will be undertaken, with the girls studying the girls' vocational area and the boys inspecting the shops.

Refreshments will be available in the auditorium at the final half hour of the visit. The girls of 10Ca will serve the food, part of a language project promoting manners and polite responses.

At all times the pupils will be grouped with a student from the special classes.

Blaze Destroys Two-Storey Home

CANNIFTON — A fire in this village, about three miles north of Belleville, Saturday gutted a two-storey insul-brick house and left a family of four homeless.

Officials today said Mr. and Mrs. Earl Noyes and their two teen-age children lost all their possessions.

Total damage to the 20-year-old structure was estimated at $20,000. The blaze, apparently began in a back summer kitchen, about 5:30 p.m. Precise cause of the fire is undetermined.

The officials related Mrs. Noyes noticed smoke issuing from a door of the back room. When she opened the door to investigate, the fire burst into the house.

Thurlow Township Volunteer Fire Department fought the blaze for about three hours. There were no injuries and no other buildings were involved.

Mr. Noyes is employed at the Belleville division of McFarlane Gendron Manufacturing Ltd.

MADOC — A freak accident involving a collision between a skier and an automobile resulted in a Toronto woman being taken to Belleville General Hospital with a fractured left ankle and lacerated scalp.

Police said Elizabeth Joan Savage, 27, was skiing in the area of the Old Marmora Rd. with her husband. The area here consists of ski trails and at certain points the trails cross the roads.

The lone occupant of the car with which she came into collision was Douglas Stewart Murray, 21, of Peterborough, driving east on the snowcovered Old Marmora Road.

A public speaking branch speak-off was held on the weekend at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, Branch 99. Four winners were chosen to go to the zone competition in Tweed Feb. 16. Police said Dennis William Prest, 18, of RR4, Marmora, and an unidentified companion were snowmobiling on a snow covered side road about three miles south of Marmora, 100 yards west of Highway 14.

Th snowmobile was being driven east on a concession road when the driver noticed the train, applied the brakes, only to find the brake cable had broken and the vehicle wasn't stopping.

The youths were unhurt, said police, while the snowmobile sustained $200 damage.

Christie Says Meeks Not Deprived of Views

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

BLOOMFIELD — Glenora Fisheries director, Jack Christie, said Saturday charges made in a news story in Saturday's Intelligencer, was just "an unfortunate misunderstanding".

Belleville alderman Stu Meeks charged that he was refused permission to attend a two-day seminar at the Glenora Fisheries Research Station, adding that he was "being kept in the dark" and "couldn't understand why the meeting was being kept a secret".

Mr. Christie said "Mr. Meeks is not being deprived of expressing his views and it is completely false that the press had been invited to attend the meeting and then refused.

"The government isn't rushing off to do something in secret. It was just a discussion of the kind of fish in the lake (Ontario) the kind to introduce and how they might perform. This is just stage one in the management of Lake Ontario," Mr. Christie expained.

Icy Roads Crash Cause

Police said he was travelling alone in his car about 4.10 p.m. Sunday when his car skidded on ice and struck a pole.

There was $1,000 damage to the front end of his car.

Achievements

It is being called a government public relations exercise — the get-together in Toronto in which Queen's Park told reeves and mayors of a $5-million plan to purchase land for an industrial park in Edwardsburg township near Prescott. But when the talk is of recession, what reason is there to complain?

Whether or not it militates against development in the Quinte area is another thing. The feeling is that if it attracts only industries larger than this area can handle at present, it will be all right; but if small and medium industry start moving in too, that could spell trouble for us.

For the Prescott area of course it is great news, and if there is related business for Eastern Ontario and beyond, including the Quinte area, then all should benefit.

Objectives

A quote from the introduction to the Ministry of Industry and Tourism's brochure, in the context of "specific objectives," which are relevant to the Edwardsburg township development:

"Build a strong, competitive manufacturing base; increase exports and tourism revenue; develop the service industries; enhance Ontario small business; develop and exploit innovation, science, technology and good design; capitalize on the beneficial aspects of foreign investment in Ontario; increase exports; develop Ontario-owned international companies."

Whatever way you look at it, the proposed development is going to mean an increase in the province's productive capacity, and more jobs. More pollution too no doubt, but then keeping it to a minimum is supposed to be the task of both industry and government.

Protests

Defence Minister Richardson is getting an earful from citizens of all ages incensed at his department's decision to disband the Air Transport Command band based in Kingston.

A newspaper in Kingston has published a protest form for readers to sign and forward to the minister, while in Napanee students of the district secondary school there are sending a memo to "all interested musicians" enlisting their support.

The minister, and by association the federal government, should know better in time of peace than to pull the rug from under this cultural adjunct of the services which in turn has been of such help to area schools. As we have noted before, there must be other areas of the military establishment that could be trimmed without noticeably weakening its defence capability.

Horror Story

The accident toll is bad enough in this country and anywhere else that the automobile is both servant and potential killer.

For the most part it is taken for granted, save by those left behind to grieve the loss of family or friends.

Now and then the routine chronicle of death and injury is punctuated by some real horror story.

Like the one about the four Mississauga teenagers killed when their car slammed head-on into a tree.

A picture told the story, and the caption provided a grim rider; "William John Pogue, 17, of Mississauga, borrowed his father's car for the first time Wednesday and a short time later the car rammed into a tree.

A story of our times . . . tragic in its dimensions.

There's a lesson of course — but will it be learned?

Political Options for Future

Deposed Minister Herb Gray Now Commands an Audience

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — When Herb Gray was minister of consumer affairs and used to lull the Commons with dry dissertations about corporate legislation, the galleries often begged for occupants.

Now he is out of the cabinet, just a backbencher who happens to sit on the front bench, and when he rises to speak the word spreads and spectators, particularly the press, filter in. The deposed minister seems to be getting more attention than he ever did.

It is doubtful whether there is any precedent for this in Canadian politics—since there is little precedent for being dropped from the cabinet at the age of 43. Of the four ministers sent to the minors by Prime Minister Trudeau last August, Mr. Gray, Canada's first Jewish cabinet minister, is clearly the most prominent survivor.

Already there is persistent speculation he will be returning to the cabinet—providing he doesn't decide to enter Ontario provincial politics later this year.

He is under some pressure from Ontario Liberals to run in the next provincial election, probably later this year, and there have been published reports that a group of New Democrats want him to run for the leadership of that party.

"To switch to provincial politics is a very serious decision for me," he said in an interview, "and I am not going to rush it." And as for the reported interest from the NDP, "no approach has been made to me."

But there are approaches from organizations all over Canada who want to hear the ex-minister speak, and many of the invitations come from universities. No longer bound by cabinet solidarity, Mr. Gray can spice his speeches with criticisms of the government—something he religiously avoided before—and ears have been perking up.

"But any criticisms have been positive," he says. "I haven't been attacking the government, it's just that I now have an opportunity to go to the people wih some of my ideas."

Ironically, it has always been assumed that Mr. Trudeau dropped Mr. Gray largely because of the minister's alleged failure to communicate easily. The prime minister has emphasized the need for greater communication.

But now that the Windsor West MP has gone off on a communications binge—or so it appears—some are guessing he may talk his way back into cabinet. This speculation also includes the argument that Mr. Trudeau, by inviting Mr. Gray's return, would then find it easier to shuffle other ministers in and out of cabinet without the demotions appearing permanent.

Mr. Gray discounts suggestions that he is maintaining a higher profile as a private MP than he did previously. It's just that the circumstances are different, he said.

He maintained the same pace before entering cabinet and said the same sort of things. And during his nearly five years in the cabinet, he was one of the most available ministers for interviews, frequently defending government economic policies.

Now he speaks with the authority of a former minister and with the freedom of a private member. And when he locked horns recently with the hefty minister of agriculture, Eugene Whelan, over the marketing of eggs it was considered a whale of an afternoon on Parliament Hill.

Mr. Gray has never been a standup comedian, and his entertainment value, while merely defending government policies, was never considered high. But his style, involving methodical research and patient persistence, is ideally suited to committee work. His background as a trial lawyer in Windsor does not hurt either.

"I think we have a contradiction here," he'll say, pulling a raggedy-edged paper from an obese briefcase. "I'd like to pursue this a bit further."

He seems to know exactly what he is going after — just as he does when he so frequently defends government positions.

He was upset after Mr. Whelan accused him of violating cabinet secrets in mounting his case against egg marketing. "That was an absolutely false accusation. I researched papers and documents that were available to any member of the public."

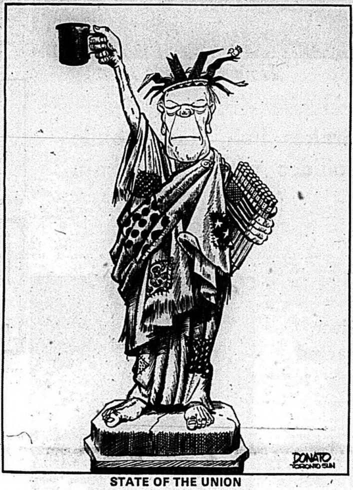
There is no question that he was hurt last August when he was stripped of his cabinet stripes, along with former revenue minister Robert Stanbury, former multiculturalism minister Stanley Haidaiz and former veterans affairs minister Jean-Eudes Dube. But Mr. Gray didn't spend a great deal of time away from Ottawa like the others. His crew-cut head was held high, he appeared to take on a new easy-going approach, and he plunged into his parliamentary duties like a fired-up rookie.

He always takes satisfaction from the legislation he has conceived—the foreign investments review act, the anti-profiteering bill, the competitions bill, and measures. He has never had to withdraw a bill.

Although five months have passed since he was dropped from cabinet, the stocky MP still winces uncomfortably when asked about his feelings at the time. Not a man of glib generalities, he turns to something else.

"I have no plans to leave politics," he says. "My time is as fully occupied now as when I was a minister, and I am going to carry on and see what develops."

He says it's unlikely he will make a decision about provincial politics during the forthcoming Liberal convention in Windsor. And so far as any forthcoming NDP offer is concerned, "I don't think I would take it."



STATE OF THE UNION

Crisis Point for Inflation Near Yet Government Hesitates to Act

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Inflation keeps on going higher and higher—and Ottawa is still trying to deal with it by appeals for voluntary restraint in wage and price increases.

The latest such appeal was made by Finance Minister John Turner in his annual speech to the Canadian Club of Toronto, delivered recently.

Mr. Turner conceded that "similar efforts to muster voluntary co-operation in the past have had little success, either in this country or in any other country."

But, he went on, only one alternative is left now—"voluntary support for a national effort to gear down the rate of inflation."

Then the finance minister outlined some eminently sensible principles about the value of self-discipline and mutual understanding in the task of fighting inflation.

Nobody could quarrel with the concept. Obviously, when the economy is no longer growing, any big increases to favored groups will have to be at the expense of the less fortunate.

But it ought to be equally obvious that millions of Canadians will never respond positively to a general call for self-restraint.

Even in war-time such appeals had to be backed by government regulations.

Today, without the rallying point that a war effort provides, the public is hardly likely to fall in behind the Trudeau-Turner banner of self-restraint.

Instead, as recent history shows, those who have the greatest economic strength will redouble their selfish efforts for more.

As William Mahoney, director of the United Steelworkers, said, "talking about general solutions is not coming to grips with the problem."

If Mr. Turner is correct in his belief that self-restraint is the only alternative left, then inflation will have to run its course until market forces bring about some form of economic cataclysm or collapse.

But surely there are other solutions that a federal government should be considering, even though they may be imperfect.

One approach would be for the government to apply self-restraint on its own spending activities—to rationalize its huge foreign aid program to establish business-like standards of efficiency and productivity in the sprawling bureaucracy, to curb the shameful waste of unemployment - insurance benefits.

And while Mr. Turner may be right in suggesting that the Canadian electorate has rejected controls on prices and incomes, the government ought to summon up the political courage to say that it would invoke controls if the inflation rate reaches a crisis level.

Such a level would have to be determined by the experts—but with inflation at 12 pr cent a year and rising, the crisis point may not be far off.

Activist Bombs Hit New York City

The Christian Science Monitor

The senseless and brutal bombing at a crowded restaurant in New York's Wall Street area last Friday by a Puerto Rican nationalist group serves no justifiable political purpose and can only be condemned in the strongest possible terms. We applaud Mayor Abraham Beame's determination to use every available tool of law enforcement to hunt down the assailants and "bring them to justice."

To what extent the bombing may represent an escalation of the sort of indiscriminate violence, so tragically seen in Northern Ireland the past several years, is yet unclear. But the terrorists, a small dissident Puerto Rican nationalist group calling itself the Fuerzas Armadas de Liberacion Nacional Puertor-Riquena (FALN), has claimed responsibility for prior New York City bombings.

Like most political terrorists, the FALN claims to speak for its nation's "masses" — in this case the people of Puerto Rico, who, the terrorists insist, demand political independence and an end to that island's commonwealth status with the United States. Yet in election after election the great bulk of the people of Puerto Rico have voted to retain that very status and association.

In this latest incident the terrorists are estimated by police to have used a particularly heavy charge of explosives — possibly as many as 10 sticks of dynamite.

For law-enforcement agencies, the need for preventing such incidents is obviously difficult but readily apparent. Involved are questions of technical difficulties in getting to the explosives and disarming them if prior notice is given, and, equally important, of maintaining necessary day-to-day police intelligence work to ferret out groups and individuals who would be willing to commit such unconscionable crimes. Every effort must be given to the task of preventing such tragedies.

Socialism Bogs Down in Tanzania

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, a charismatic leader of black Africa and the Third World, darling of Western intellectuals, is in deep trouble at home.

The reason is about the same as with other single-minded leaders in backward nations in a hurry to catch up. His favorite development schemes aren't working and Mr. Nyerere won't admit it.

Mr. Nyerere has committed his almost 100 per cent agricultural country to a form of total socialism, a part of which is the creation of co-operative village communities.

Called jamaa in Swahili, the language of Tanzania and of much of East Africa, the inspiration for them appears to be a mixed Tanzanian-Chinese approach to rural reorganization.

The collective villages would not only increase production but make much easier and presumably less costly, the distribution of basic services like schools, medical clinics, running water for the new inhabitants and also water for field irrigation.

But unlike other grandiose schemes, the supreme leader, in Tanzania's case President Nyerere, called Mwalimu or tacher, has run into tough opposition from his people.

The original idea of jamaa was that villagers would voluntarily leave the places where they lived to move into the new communal communities. But Tanzanians, conservative and intensely loyal to the community where they were born, like most Africans had to be forced to move.

About three million Tanzanians have been moved into the villages against their wishes and to fulfil Mr. Nyerere's grandiose scheme.

In some cases they have had to abandon traditional family-owned small land plots.

President Nyerere is also faced with continuous drought which has drastically reduced Tanzanian food output and forced her to seek loans from international banking agencies and certain overseas ones, like Canada's CIDA (Canadian International Development Agency).

And though Tanzania is basically a food-producing nation and could sustain herself from production, she imported about 40 per cent of her foodstuffs last year, almost wiping out her foreign exchange balance by doing so.

President Nyerere's pursuit of doctrinaire socialism has kept him close to the Communist Chinese who have also supplied the main financing and construction know-how to a major East African railway scheme.

The capital of Dar-es-Salaam has been the major centre of African liberation and guerrilla movements determined to overthrow Portuguese and white supremacist rule in southern Africa.

The Communist Chinese have allegedly trained the Tanzanian military, although many of its pilots have been trained here in Canada and fly Caribou transport aircraft built by de Havilland Aircraft of Canada.

What could wreck Tanzania's economy beyond recall is the president's determination to complete what many charismatic leaders before him have insisted on doing, building a new and costly national capital.

President Nyerere's choice is a site near Dodoma about 200 miles from the coastsl and steaming city of Dar-es-Salaam in the dustier, remote hinterland of his beleaguered country.

Estimated cost of this kind of empire building is half a billion dollars in a country with currency reserves of less than 15 millions.

The Shouldice Affair

Fund-Raiser Was Bounced

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Thanks to the Shouldice affair in Sudbury the public is finally learning a little about one of those great mysteries of life, the matter of political financing.

Not much perhaps, but a little.

Premier Davis has reportedly admitted that he had heard some things he didn't like about the methods of Mr. Shouldice and had ordered that he be dropped as one of the party's collectors or "bagmen."

This report is the first time in recent memory, at least, that any political leader has even as much as admitted that there were bagmen, or that they knew anything at all of their activities.

Traditionally this is a subject on which they have been as quiet as a cemetery at midnight.

But MacKenzie passed out the money and certainly knew everything was going on.

His residence was in Toronto but he also kept a room at the Royal York.

Frost, of course, also lived at the Royal York and the two men often shared breakfast. And a great deal of the time they drove up to the Parliament buildings together.

Both men were avid politicians so presumably these meetings weren't spent discussing the latest price of meat.

But if Frost were asked about money he was the picture of complete innocence.

"I don't know anything about party funds and I don't want to know," he would say.

Knowing him, he probably did have a rule that he not be told about specific donations.

But also one could suspect that he wasn't unaware of them.

In this sense the Shouldice matter could have its benefits.

It seems that it will probably result in political donations being more in the open.

And that could be a good thing.

The Career of Charlotte Whitton

Kingston Whig-Standard

With the recent death of Charlotte Whitton in an Ottawa hospital ... there is certainly an inclination to declare the passing of an era. Yet it was not an era of radical change, of brilliant municipal management or even profound thought. Rather, the Whitton era was, above all else, simply one of lively politics made that way by a colourful personality.

There was more to Miss Whitton, of course, than mere verbal warfare. She was a brilliant student in her youth, with scholarships in six subjects and leaving that institution with a master's degree and medals in English, history and pedagogy. It was not long after that the "brainy and pugnacious little girl" as one teacher described her, made her mark in government as a pugnacious and aggressive woman.

Mine Reopening Boosts Economy

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Correspondent

BANCROFT Bancroft and Faraday Township residents are still reacting to the announcement this week that the Faraday Uranium Mine, four miles south of Bancroft will re-open this year.

The mine has been closed since 1962. However announcement by Hastings MP Jack Ellis that a federally approved six-year contract with an Italian state-owned corporation has local hopes high for a boost to the north Hastings county economy.

"It's going to be a real shot in the arm to the area,' said Ivor Mcleod, president of the local Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Mcleod added "of course the main industry of the area is tourism. Now people can come for a real double feature reason ... to enjoy the tourist attractions and to visit one of the main uranium centres of Canada."

Mr. Mcleod said he foresees a boom in the house building industry in the village in order to provide accommodation for the eventual influx of population.

Since the announcement of the re-opening Wednesday, there have been several conflicting reports locally on the number of people who will be employed by the mine.

Hastings MPP Clarke Rollins, said in an interview Saturday that, "There will be between 40 and 75 people employed at the mine site by the end of 1975."

Mr. Rollins said he had been speaking to a representative of the Consolidated Canadian Faraday Company, Del Tilson who told him that it is hoped that about 300 workers will be at the mine by the end of 1976.

The work done in 1975 will involve preparing the site for the active production which will start as the equipment necessary for the operation becomes available.

"I have been assured by Mr. Wilson that as much local labor will be used as possible," said Mr. Rollins.

Mr. Rollins also stated emphatically that there is no clause in the contract with Italy which indicates that European workers will be used in the re-opened mine.

Prior to the announcement of the re-opening, the Canadian Faraday Company had received more than 150 applications for employment.

Bancroft's labor force has suffered severely recently with the temporary closing of the Domtar Woodlands Chip Mill and the general slowdown the lumber industry.

"It is hoped that Faraday will be able to absorb some of this labor pool," said Mr. Rollins. "They will use local employment as much as possible."

Pancake Supper Benefits Needy Kenya 12-year-old

By RICK NELSON
Staff Correspondent

WELLINGTON — A young boy from Kenya, Africa will be receiving funds this year from the fourth annual pancake supper to be held at the Anglican Parish Hall here Feb. 11, with an added attraction, the Covenant Players, a theatrical group from California.

The pancake supper is held on Shrove Tuesday or Pancake Tuesday; which originated in England from the custom of eating pancakes on the last day before Lent.

During the first two years of pancake eating at the Anglican Church here, money raised has been used for restoration purposes, but last year it was suggesed that for the third annual supper, money raised be used to support a child in a foreign country. The suggestion was put to good use and the money raised was sent away. This year the parish of Kente knows who received that money and is preparing to do the same this year.

The boy's name is Lemain Lerapo, a 12-year-old child whose father died some time ago leaving his mother to provide for the family.

Although the mother tried to support the family, her income was too small. Finally, she had to bring Lemain to the Christian Children's Fund who were happy to take him in.

Rev. David Hawkins, rector of St. Andrews' Church said he only wished the parish could support 100 more like Lemain.

The supper begins at 5:30 p.m. and admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

Also that evening, a group of performers from California, the Covenant Players, will be on hand just across the road at the United Church, a joint effort of the two churches.

The Covenant Players have performed all over north America since 1963 and have given more than 65,000 performances. The purpose of their one act plays is to try and awaken people to what is going on around them.

The group has received high praise from clergy all over North America and it seems Wellington residents and both church congregations will be looking forward to their performance. Show time willl be at 7:30 p.m.

Picton Fair Board Rejects Pool Site

PICTON — At a meeting of the Picton Fair Board Friday night, open to all members of the Prince Edward Agricultural Society and any exhibitors who paid memberships, it was a "thumbs down decision" concerning a community swimming pool on fair ground property.

In an interview following the meeting, Ken Hicks, County Council representative to the Prince Edward Agricultural Society, stated that a letter has been forwarded to Prince Edward County Council opposing the location of a community swimming pool on fair grounds property.

Ed Rae, co-ordinator of the swimming pool committee, said that the fair board was generally quite sympathetic toward the need for a swimming pool, but weren't particularly in favor of it being located facing Main St.

Astra Parade Kicks Off Week of Celebrations

Henry and Mrs. Henry, Carnival chairman Major Bert Proulx and his wife, Danish Brewmaster Carl Holman and Ottawa TV newcaster, Max Keeping.

The parade started at the Community Gardens, progressed along Byron St. to Curtis Rd. then up Rivers Rd. to AMDU (formerly 8 RD).

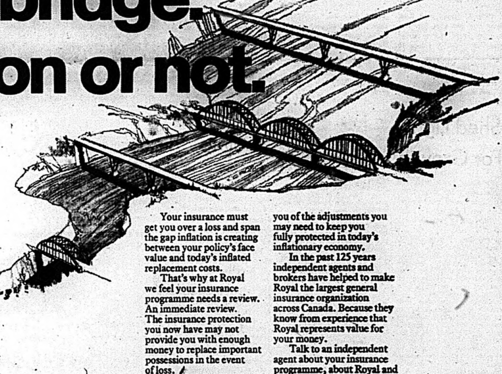
At Royal, we feel insurance should work like a bridge. Inflation or not.



Your insurance must get you over a loss and span the gap inflation is creating between your policy's face value and today's inflated replacement costs.

That's why at Royal we feel your insurance programme needs a review. An immediate review. The insurance protection you now have may not provide you with enough money to replace important possessions in the event of loss.

We recommend that you have an independent agent – an insurance professional – examine your programme and advise you of the adjustments you may need to keep you fully protected in today's inflationary economy.

In the past 125 years independent agents and brokers have helped to make Royal the largest general insurance organization across Canada. Because they know from experience that Royal represents value for your money.

Talk to an independent agent about your insurance programme, about Royal and a bridge for your future.

Indoor Garden 'Inside Tips'

So you're going to start an indoor garden!

Here are some miscellaneous, but important tips to keep in mind:

Talking to your plants isn't mandatory. It is far more important to provide proper light, check for cramped conditions and bugs, wash the leaves, reomve dead leaves, water and fertilize.

Avoid pretty faces. The aphelandra squarrosa louisae or zebra plant has spectacular shiny green leaves, strikingly veined in white. Its beauty makes it a big seller but it is almost impossible to maintain at home. It needs tropical conditions — up to 60 per cent humidity — to live.

Take hanging plants down at last once a month for close-in inspection. When they are hard to inspect daily it is easy to miss bugs. And don't hang them too close to the ceiling. Poor air circulation can cause death, when you thought you had taken all proper steps to insure good health.

Glass magnifies and intensifies heat. Don't rest leaves against window glass where they can burn or wilt from intense heat. Also rotate plants a half turn once a week so light distribution is even. Otherwise they will grow towards the light and become lopsided.

More Plants Die Wet Than Dry

Drowning is one of the major causes of death among plants. While some die from lack of water, most succumb to overzealous watering by unknowing new owners, who literally drown their plants with love.

It is always necessary to check the soil before watering by gently pushing your finger about an inch into the earth to see if it is wet or dry. In the winter, don't be fooled by cold earth from a pot that is near a window; the soil can often feel wet.

A good rule is to let your plants become completely dry before watering them. When you do, soak until the water runs out of the bottom of the pot. Make sure the excess can drain out.

Be extra careful not to overwater plants in decorative pots without drainage holes. Generally, give them less water.

Plants in plastic pots hold moisture longer than ones in clay and require fewer waterings but check all plants frequently A little plant in a small clay pot may need watering every day while one in a 10-inch plastic pot might need a drink only once a week or less.

Fertilize in Small Doses For Healthiest Results

Since your plants are potted and live inside, they are not fertilized by nature. You are their food source.

Be careful with new plants and those in low light. Fertilizer can damage a plant that is trying to adjust to new non-nursery conditions and one in a low-light situation that is not functioning actvely cannot use up the extra food.

Fertilizing is best done in small doses. When you are in doubt about quantity, cut it in half. it is easier to refertilize undernourished plants than to repair the damage caused by overfertilizing. Too much can burn the roots or cause fast, strung-out growth, which makes the plant susceptible to diseases and temperature changes.

Choose from liquid, powder, tablet or concentrated fertilizers. Good results can also be obtained from fish emulsion. Liquid and powder fertilizers are usually the best because they are diluted in water and you control the amount used.

Fertilize about once a month during the warmer months from spring to fall. Plants need rest, during periods when there is no new growth, so don't fertilize in the winter months. It gives both you and them a break.

Low-light Plants Best for Starters

While all plants need light, some need less than others to live and thrive. Here's starter group of low-light plants to choose from.

Sansevieria (commonly called snake-plant), any of the dracaena family (corn plant is the most widely known), aglaonema (Chinese evergreen), ficus elastica (rubber plant), philodendrons, dieffenbachia (dumbcane), pothos (sometimes mistaken for philodendron), maranta (prayer plant) and spathiphyllum (a real tongue twister). Take your pick. They are a hardy group.

They can survive most light conditions and will do very well in bright, indirect light. Their leaves will develop brown burn spots if put in full, direct sun.

Begin with a small collection. Become familiar with the requirements of each plant you buy before trying a different one. You can apply what you learn to new, more-difficult-to-grow plants.

Don't be afraid to ask a nursery keeper for advice. Better to risk showing ignorance than kill your plant with misguided good intentions.

Shed Light For Growth

All plants need light, but some require less than others. Trying to decide what kind of light you have can be fairly difficult. If you have an unobstructed southerly exposure you probably have bright, direct light conditions.

An unobstructed northerly exposure usually indicates medium light conditions, while an obstructed exposure in any direction can mean medium to low light conditions.

Allowances for poor light can be made through the use of plant lights. An ordinary incandescent light can produce fairly good results. But all artificial lights must be kept on for 12 hours or more to be effective. In these energy-short days it would probably be wisest to stick with low-light plants which can live without the aid of plant lights.

Big Plants Cost More

When you feel you're ready for some more demanding indoor plants and can provide the right conditions, you might choose from asparagus ferns, spider plants, swedish ivy, schefflers, pickabacks or ivy. They require large amounts of bright indirect light and have different watering requirements.

Because of their more delicate natures, they are usually more expensive.

Growing time in a nursery is the biggest price factor for plants. It they only spend a couple of months there and are moved out quickly they will be less expensive than plants that may have taken as long as two years to grow and train, e.g., five-to-six-foot scheffleras and dracaenas.

Don't think you can grow a large dracaena marginata from a six-inch miniature. It is very difficult to stimulate the warm, humid, ideal plant living conditions, in your home that are created by a professional nursery in Florida.

Generally you can buy good, healthy plants up to six-inches for as little as $1 if they are fast-growing philodendrons or dracaenas. You will pay $5 to $10 for larger six-inch to one-foot full, luxurious ones. Remember, the bigger the plant the bigger the price and there are good reasons for it. Bargain plants are seldom a bargain.

Repot If Roots Are Cramped

When — and how often — should you repot your houseplants?

It depends on several factors, so that there is no hard and fast rule to follow.

If you can see any of the plant's roots struggling up at the edge of the pot, then you know you've left your repotting too long. But only when you feel that the roots may be cramped, or deprived of enough soil to be healthy, should you move a plant to another, larger pot.

Don't move a plant to a large pot before it's ready to go, or you'll find that the growth goes all to the roots instead of the leaves.

Rather like people, most houseplants prefer to settle in and "put down roots" in one pot. Too frequent moving, in both cases, can prove to be unsettling and detrimental to health.

Your plants will do their best in fine, especially-prepared sterile soil that is sold in stores and nurseries, to be used in indoor gardens. African violets rate their own kind of prepared soil, that will serve well for other plants as well.

When you move a plant to one container from another, do so carefully, by loosening the soil in the first pot all around the edges with a dull knife, and then gently tapping the plant, soild and all, onto a newspaper-covered surface.

A few pebbles in the bottom of the new pot help to maintain good drainage. Then add a little new soil, and place the plant — whose roots will be holding the soil from its recent home so that it comes along too — into the new pot gently, and add more new soil around the edges of the pot. Pat the soil down firmly so that there are no air pockets around the roots, and then add a little water to help the plant settle in.

Take the opportunity while you repot to check the plant for insects, blight and withered stalks. It is also a good time to wipe and clean leaves to keep the plant in good health.

Isolate 'Sickly' Plants Quickly

Plants sometimes just die. This is not easy to accept, but it happens. Most of the time, though, there is a direct cause of their expiration. Overwatering, too little light, diseases, too little water, cold, etc. are all good reasons.

The minute you suspect a plant is "sick" immediately put it in isolation to insure the continued health of other plants, particularly if the sick plant has bugs. Bugs are hard to get rid of, but it can be done.

Make sure you diagnose the disease properly to avoid the wrong treatment. If you can't determine it from books and observation, check your nursery. Follow all the necessary steps for revitalization.

Most important, don't start treating the plant as if it were already dead. That is water it, wash the leaves, make sure the light is right. All these things become more important when the plant is ailing.

Treatments may have to be repeated if the first curing attempts are unsuccessful. When dealing with insecticides and fungicides use several small does rather than one massive dose. These poisons can kill the plant as well as the disease.

Try Growing Your Leftovers

Plants are for everyone, children included. Good lessons are learned from the experience of working with simple-to-grow plants started from kitchen seeds.

Start with two of the easiest, the avocado and sweet potato. Both are "planted" in the same fashion. Suspend them on three equally distanced toothpicks in a jar of water with about one-third of the potato or avocado in the water.

Now for some patience. An avocado will take longer to sprout than the potato, about two months. Guard against a child's disappointment if you pick a "dud" by simultaneously planting a couple of avocados and sweet potatoes.

When you have enough roots, a stem and leaves on the avocado, plant it in normal housplant soil and watch it grow quite tall if you don't cut it back.

The sweet potato should stay in water and the luxurious shoots can be trained to gracefully frame a window or trellis.

Avocados cannot take the cold as well as sweet potatoes, so you should be careful not to let them sit in a draft.

When choosing an avocado in the store, look for the blackest, mushiest one you can find. It is already on the way to germination.

Choose Containers With Imagination

The types of containers that can be used to house plants are practically limitless. The traditional clay pot is becoming scarce and more expensive due to the increased interest in indoor plants.

The next most popular commercial container is the round plastic pot that drains into an attached dish. They are very practical for hanging plants.

Increasing in popularity but not so wise is the clear plastic pot — decorative but not healthy for the plant. Roots grow in the dark under the earth. Nature planned it that way and the system works very well. In a clear plastic pot when the roots grow up around the outside edge of the pot, they are exposed to light which can cause root damage.

You can create your own planters by experimenting with any containers you have around the house — old cups with broken handles, water pitchers, cracked tea pots, fruit molds, coffee cans, old pots, etc. You are limited only by your imagination.

Pot Drainage Essential

Once you have picked your pots, start planting, but remember these basics:

Drainage on the bottom of the pot is very important, particularly in containers that have no drainage holes. A one-half to one-inch layer of pebbles or crushed pottery is necessary to catch any excess water in order to keep the roots dry.

Then add a layer of sterilized enriched potting soil. Place the plants in the pot with the roots loosely packed in the original soil. While holding it upright add more soil and pack it evenly, not too hard, until it is about an inch from the top of the pot. This room is necessary for watering.

Usually, it's a good idea to avoid disturbing new plants for a month or two after you buy them so they can adjust to their new surroundings. But if you purchase them in the five and dime store instead of a nursery, the soil may be less than ideal and repotting in the same size container with new sterilized soil is necessary. Your plant will have a better chance for survival in good soil.

Don't Forget Pretty Cacti

Succulents and cacti fall into a separate category because they function differently than other household plants. They store water in their stems and leaves to help them through long dry spells. Therefore, they are ideal for sunny, dry conditions, which are found in many homes and apartments.

They prefer being watered about half as much as other plants and would probably be better off if you "forgot" to water them once in a while.

Cacti need very infrequent waterings in the winter, just enough to keep their foliage from shrinking — perhaps once very two weeks. In the spring to fall, once or twice a week is good or whenever the soil is very dry. Whater only on sunny days when the moisture can be absorbed.

Both succulents and cacti are slow but steady growers and need little attention. They are often passed over by people who prefer the lavish greenery of long, lush leaves, but they have a quiet lasting beauty that should not be overlooked.

Quinte Cuisine

This fall Gloria and Ian Scott attended 20 fairs to show the hackney horses they raise. Both Mr. and Mrs. Scott drive in the shows. Now that the fair season is over, Mrs. Scott spends time baking family favorites like these ice box rolls. She often freezes a batch after baking. They're popular with Ian and children Jennifer, 2 and Charles, 7. Mrs. Scott is a member of the United Church Women.

Ice Box Rolls

four tbsp. butter or margarine, melted ¾ cup white sugar two eggs
two tsp. salt
one cup boiling water
one tbsp. yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
one tsp. sugar
1½ cups milk
eight cups flour

Beat melted margarine or butter with sugar, eggs and salt. Add boiling water gradually. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water with sugar. After yeast has bubbled up, add to sugar and egg mixture along with 1½ cups milk. Stir in four cups of flour and beat well. Add four more cups of flour and mix. Let stand overnight in the refrigerator.

In the morning, punch it down, cover and allow to stand 10 minutes. Divide dough and shape into rolls, loaves or desired shape. Let rise until doubled in bulk about one hour. Bake at 350 degrees.

Ann Landers

Kids Cause Marriage Splits

Dear Ann Landers: I'm another reader who wants to challenge your reply to the woman whose son was allergic to cats. The doctor said the cat had to go. The woman's second husband (he brought the cat with him when he moved into her home) said, "Nothing doing. The kid should go. We can find a nice foster home for the boy and it will be better for everybody." The child's mother was very upset and wanted to know if her husband was nuts. You said, "Probably."

I say the man is far from nuts. All I have to do is look at our friends. Two couples in our crowd (Both married more than 25 years) split within the last six months and the reason was their kids. One couple busted up because of their son's shoulder-length nair and smoking pot in the house. The other couple had a group of weirdos and her father cut her out of his will.

At present I see two other marriages (plus my own sister's) headed for sthe rock Again they are all fighting over the life-style of their children.

The happiest marriages are the ones without children. I am a bachelor, again 44, successful in my profession, free to do as I please, and I'm having a wonderful time. If I should ever decide to marry, I will get it in writing—"no children." Just sign me—Sam

Dear Sam: I hope you remain single. By doing so, you are bound to make some unsuspecting woman very happy.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a few choice words for that lawyer whose older clients asked him to change their wills and scratch out the names of grandchildren, nieces, and nephews who "never bother to come around."

I am one of those young people and I don't care if anybody leaves me one dime. I have two well-heeled relatives—both bores. I've tried to spend time with them, but it's the same old story: "Why don't I ever see you? I'm so lonely. I wish you'd call on the phone more often. My days are so empty." Nothing but self-pity. In the meantime, on my last visit, four people dropped in and three friends telephoned.

So, to all you old folks who are sitting on your money, either your memory is shot or you just like to gripe. To put it more bluntly—get out of your rocking chair and call me when you have something cheerful to say. I haven't heard a good word from you in years. I don't want your money. I just want you to enjoy life and stop complaining.—A Relative

Dear Relative: That letter may be the most expensive one you've ever written. But I admire your spunk and thank you for it.

Dear Ann Landers: You once said, "The double bed is the cornerstone of a durable marriage . . ."

My husband and I have been married for 32 years. He has never mentioned twin beds, but about two weeks ago, he said, "Your snoring bothers me. If you don't mind, I'm going to sleep with my head at the foot of the bed." He has been doing so ever since.

I feel slightly rejected. Should I say something? If so, what?—Blue

Dear B.: You have no reason to feel "rejected." He's still in your bed, isn't he? Say nothing, unless, of course, you are bothered by his feet in your face, in which case, I suggest twin beds with a single headboard—and earplugs.

Doris Clark

Do the Best You Can

A friend of mine always has this on her blackboard on a chart: "Always do the best you can, whenever you can, with what you have."

This is being read by grade three children in a Vancouver school. Because it is on a blackboard every day, it will stay with those who read it up through the years. It will remind them that all that is ever asked of us to do the best we can.

"With what you have." This reminds us that we have different gifts and talents. We have differing opportunites. One person, be it a boy or girl, man or woman, has more of this world's goods than another yet in many cases the person who has less, manages to do more with it than one with the greater possession.

It is a more a matter of attitude, of love of life, and faith in oneself, what one does with what one has.

Who was it who said, "We always do whatever is possible right away; the impossible takes a little longer"? Think about it.

Dear Doris: I find your column very inspiring. I too have been taken for granted and get talked into things, etc. I see that now and have yet to correct it.

Don't quit writing, please.

Thank You.

Dear Thank You: It is all too common for good-naturer people to let themselves be taken for granted. And to such people it doesn't seem worth while to make any effort to correct it, since this, they think, would be getting angry.

But there are ways to deliver the message and it is important to do it — one way or another. Each of us needs to work out our own way of letting the person we care about know that we do care, and that the reason we are at their beck and call is because we want them to be happy. Can't we gently say — at the right time — that we would like a small show of appreciation, even if it is merely "thank you"?

Then of course if even the slightest appreciation is shown as in an unexpected box of candy or an unexpected hug and kiss and smile for some special favor, this must get return praise. This is a positive approach.

It works the other way too. Are you sure you are not unconsciously taking that fellow you care about for granted? You should know how it feels and you should be able to correct it when you do it. This would set a good example — and the return might surprise you by coming rather easily.

Dear Doris: I know you probably don't get any letters from kids but I'm writing for advice. I'm 12 and just head over heels with this boy.

He is the same age. I don't know if he likes me. The girls tease me about it but I say it's not true.

They tease him about me, and he turns away and says nothing. Do you think he likes me? I'm very shy.

Susan.

Dear Susan: It may surprise you, but you are not the only girl of 12 — or even younger — who has fallen "head over heels" for a boy. It goes the other way around too — the boy falls for the girl.

Since I can't see you, and I can't see him, nor can I see any of the expressions on your face when you see each other; nor talk to any of the girls or boys who tease you, or watch him, I can't answer your question.

Perhaps he does like you and he is shy too. If your hero breaks down and starts talking to you or walking along the street with you or carrying your books, you can have a pretty good idea that he likes you. And that's about as far as I can go. Good luck!

Regional Conferences Dropped In Favor of Information Program

OTTAWA (CP) — The government re-organized its $5-million program to promote International Women's Year Monday, abandoning plans to hold four regional conferences on women's rights and opting instead for a series of smaller public information programs.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde, responsible for legislation on the status of women, said the new approach is the government's response to women's complaints that they are tired of attending conferences.

The government will use $500,000 of the budget, which had been allocated for a series of four regional women's conferences this year, to establish mobile information centres in British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Newfoundland and the Yukon Territory, Mr. Lalonde said.

Other provinces will get federal financial help for small-scale conferences or to hire roving information officers to promote equal status for women, he said.

Other aspects of the program will remain. The government will go ahead with plans for a national conference on women, probably this fall, and $1 million will be shared among women's organizations, native citizens, multiculturalism and language minority group, he said.

Unions Haven't Fought for Women

WINNIPEG (CP) — Women must bargain collectively to improve their lot in the work force but many unions have not "really fought in their interests," labor organizer Madeleine Parent of Brantford, Ont., said Thursday.

Ms. Parent, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Textile and Chemical Union, said women must apply solid organizational tactics to achieve equality in pay and job opportunity.

"Women themselves are going to have to do the job, by taking the initiative in organizing, by choosing the kind of union which they as women workers feel is best suited to protect their interests, and the interests of their fellow workers."

Ms. Parent, a participant in a three-day conference beginning today at the University of Manitoba on Women and the Law, told a news conference she was not advocating women-only unions.

"You have to have a union which takes the whole group of workers concerned. But women themselves . . . have to take the lead in searching out the injustices in their own conditions and in preparing a program of demands."

Dr. Lynn McDonald, a Toronto sociologist, said current legislation on equal pay for men and women doing the same jobs does not meet the problem. Women working full-time earned on average 60 per cent of what full-time male workers earned.

She said jobs should be objectively evaluated to determine fair remuneration, a proposal advanced by the Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

Sylva Gelber, women's bureau director of the federal department of labor, said strong law is needed to prohibit discrimination in any branch of employment.

She noted that only one women in five in the Canadian labor force is a member of a trade union.

Ms. Parent, an executive board member of the Conference of Canadian Unions, said women must get on union bargaining committees so they can debate directly with employers.

Books By And About Women

WIDOW
by Lynn Caine

There are over ten million widows in America today. One out of every six women over the age of twenty-one is a widow; and the statistics show that women are becoming widows at younger and younger ages. For most of them, the experience is not only a personal tragedy, but often a rude awakening to the fact that our society turns away from death and from those who have been left behind.

The consequences of suppressing emotion, of facing grief totally unprepared and ignorant of the dynamics of the reaction to loss, of dealing with the role of being a single woman, a single parent, and a single provider in a coupled world, are explored here in realistic and compelling terms.

Lynn Caine's story is a courageous one that can serve to enlighten us all. As the author states "Our society is set up so that most women lose their identities when their husbands die," and that is the reason for this book; if wives have to face widowhood, and it seems the great majority of them must, then women must be prepared for life after marriage ends.

Killing of Thirteen Was 'Error' Says Paper

MONTREAL (CP)—The Gazette says it has learned from a reliable source that the murder of 13 persons in the north-end Gargantua Club Jan. 20 was an "error."

The newspaper quotes the source as saying more than one gunman went to the club to kill someone believed to have told police the names of several persons who set a fire in the city in December.

"They (the gunmen) were convinced the leak came from someone who was in the Gargantua Club because that's where the December torch job was planned," the newspaper quotes the source as saying.

The newspaper said there were more than 13 persons in the club when the gunmen entered but some were permitted to leave because they were "friends."

Alberta Doctors Back Stephenson on Abortion

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Medical Association (AMA) has officially supported Dr. Bette Stephenson, president of the Canadian Medical Association, in her criticism of Canada's abortion laws.

AMA President Dr. Richard Hatfield, in a telephone interview from Calgary, said Saturday his board of directors voted unanimously Friday to support Dr. Stephenson's criticism of the abortion laws made recently in a speech at Toronto.

"We feel that the statements made in the speech by Dr. Stephenson very accurately reflect the present difficulties which doctors are placed in following legislation regarding abortion," he said.

In her speech, Dr. Stephenson criticized Justice Minister Otto Lang for imposing his personal interpretation on Canada's abortion law and she also expressed dissatisfaction with the vagueness of key words in the legislation.

Change in Law Needed

TORONTO (CP) — Psychiatrists were told Saturday they should seek legislation that would protect them from breaking the confidence of their patients in court.

Mr. Justice E. L. Haines of the Ontario Supreme Court said psychiatry's greatest need now is "complete confidentiality between client and psychiatrist."

"You owe it to your patients and to your profession to actively promote the appropriate legislation making a patient's confidence a privileged communication," the judge told a meeting of the Onatrio Psychiatric Association.

Clark Added to Injury List

Bobcats Digging Own Grave

By MARK BRET

Sports Staff

As playoff time draws increasingly closer the Belleville Bobcats, of the Metro Junior B Hockey League, are finding themselves sinking deeper and deeper into trouble.

Sunday night besides losing 7-2 to the visiting Pickering Panthers the Cats lost another of their outstanding performers — goalie Bruce Clark.

Clark was added to the ever growing list of injuries after taking the full force of a stick on the forehead. Belleville General Hospital (BGH) lists Clark in satisfactory condition but a spokesman for BGH said: "He will have to remain in hospital for a couple of days under observation".

The high stick belonged to Panthers' Kevin Owen. "It was an unfortunate accident," said Pickering coach Sherry Bassin after the game.

An accident it was. Owen while being molested in front of the Belleville goal lost his balance and, as he was falling to the ice, his stick made contact with Clark.

Wayne Calberry immediately pounced on the fallen Panther in hopes of gaining revenge, but the only thing gained was a 10-minute agressor penalty which resulted in two Pickering goals.

Also missing from Sunday's line-up was defenceman Dave Taylor, serving the first of his two game suspension acquired in Friday's game against Wexford.

The visitors held a 3-1 lead at the conclusion of the opening period, but thanks to Clark the score didn't reach higher proportions.

Pickering outhustled the Cats in the first period as Owen opened the scoring and Steve Falkner netted his first of three before Eric Powell put the home team on the scoreboard.

A deflection off of a Belleville defenceman's leg was the cause of the final Pickering goal of the period and was credited to Mark Uvodich.

Steve Keech, back in the line-up for Belleville and sporting a very black eye, took up a position on the blue line with Calberry to ease the pressure on the Belleville netminders.

Things from here on in went to pieces for the Belleville squad as passing became erratic and puck control was non-existent.

"We had four juveniles up with us tonight. They were finding it hard to fit in, but with a little experience they should have no trouble," said Cats' coach Bob Boyle after the game.

One thing the juveniles did show throughout the game was a little bit of spirit — something badly lacking in some of the older players.

Chuck Durocher scored his first of two for the visitors and Falkner, on his way to a hat trick, scored the other giving Pickering a commanding 5-2 lead at the end of the middle frame.

Neither team gave much effort in the third period with Belleville looking rather sloppy on the defensive end of things and goalie Bob Moore continually left to fend for himself.

Boyle is optimistic for the future however. "Once we get a few of our players back and everybody trying things will start to happen."

Bassin at the other side of the rink had much the same feelings about the Belleville slump which stands now at four consecutive losses. "They (Belleville) badly miss those injured players, but I think once the playoffs start, and they get some people back, they're going to be a tough team to beat."

Falkner's third goal of the evening was a gift as he had the puck put right in his stick in the Belleville end and Durocher's second goal with eight seconds remaining rounded out the Pickering scoring for the night.

The Cats have three games left with which to regain some lost ground. The first chance will be Tuesday when the locals travel to Whitby for an 8 p.m. match with the Bruins.

OMHA Roundup

Victory to Loss In Six Minutes

A rash of penalties came at the wrong time for Belleville Yardmen minor midgets in the opener of their Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA series with Peterborough, Sunday.

Playing in Peterborough, Yardmen were nursing a 4-3 lead with six minutes left but the home team fought back to pot three, taking advantage of Belleville penalties, and took a 6-4 win.

The teams hook up in the second game of the best-of-five set at Memorial Arena, Tuesday night at 6:45.

Paul Hipkin was a three-goal shooter for Yardmen. Howie Coons had the other Belleville marker.

Belleville McInroy minor bantams closed out their regular schedule with a 6-4 home ice loss to Kingston, Sunday. The team will meet Peterborough in group playoffs.

McInroy enjoyed an early 3-1 lead in the match with Kingston but let up in the last half of the game.

Paul Chapman, Mark Crawford, Steve Casey and Greg Sprout clicked for the Belleville goals. John Linesman sparked Kingston with three goals.

Playing with only nine skaters and a goalie, Belleville's Shell Juveniles came up with a 3-3 exhibition saw-off against Kingston Township at Memorial Arena, Sunday.

Gary Thompson got two goals for Belleville, including the tieing one with less than four minutes to play. Rick Growden got the other goal for Shells.

In other exhibition action, Belleville Lions major midgets lost and tied in a home and home set with Trenton Quinte Ice Products.

Rob Chase had two Lions' goals in a 5-5 draw, while Tom Belch, Clint Riendeau and Sandy Waterson each scored once. Tim Neron and Mike Skelcher had two apiece for Trenton. Rick Belzewski had one.

Kingston Township hung the reversal on the Rollins skaters who got a pair of goals from Louie Crawford and one each by David Semark and Tony Parks.

At the minor peewee level, Belleville Dixie Lee split a pair of games, topping Trenton 5-3, Saturday, and losing 6-4 to Picton, Sunday.

Darcy Maher fired two Dixie Lee goals in the win. Stu Emerson, Steve Thompson and Steve Molaski had the others. Replying for Trenton were Mike Nadjiwan, Jamie Turner and Steve Smith.

Stephen McConnell was the big gun for Picton, notching three goals. Dixie Lee got two from Neil McKeown and singles by Emerson and Rich Manderville.

Belleville Takes Second Place

Stirling and Belleville Mel Barriage battled to a 3-3 tie in the Quinte Ladies Hockey League, Sunday, in a four point game. The two points Belleville earned through the tie put them in second place in the four team loop.

Stirling held a single goal lead three times in the contest, but the locals came back to tie it up on all three occasions.

Carol McFarlane scored twice to lead the Belleville attack and Sue Morton added the other.

Expo Reps in Town Tuesday

Hal Breeden

Larry Lintz

A major league infield will help represent Montreal Expos when the National Baseball League teams pays its repects here Tuesday.

Expo fans will be acquainted with all but Mackanin. He came to the club in the deal which sent Willie Davis to Texas Rangers.

Parrish, brought up to the Expos from Quebec of the Eastern League late in the season, saw plenty of action at third base.

Bill MacKenzie whose chief responsibility is player development, will be making a return visit to the city. He was here as part of the staff which ran a tryout camp in August, 1974.

Carling-O'Keefe is bringing the Expos to Belleville.

Nicks Earn Inter-provincial Honors

ROSEMERE, Quebec (Special) — The Nicholson senior Nicks have really been making a name for themselves throughout the province. Now, they're going to be well known in basketball circles throughout Quebec and New Brunswick.

Friday the Nicks travelled to the North Island Invitational Tournament in Rosemere, Quebec (a suburb of Montreal) and Saturday they came home with the Grand Championship.

"The competition wasn't as tough as I thought it would be," said Nicholson coach Gary Duggan. "We really didn't have any trouble with any of the teams we faced."

The Nicks dumped Laurentian Secondary, of Quebec, 60-23 in their first game, and bounced the tournament favorites, Centreville Secondary, of New Brunswick, 64-48 in the semi-final. In the final, Saturday, the Nicks came out on top of a 50-42 score over Ottawa's Merivale Secondary. The Ottawa representative was seeded number two in the tourney.

Nicholson travelled without the services of their first string forward, Dale Wilson. He has been out the last few weeks with a twisted knee.

"Chris Kalnay has substituted for Wilson since his injury," said Duggan, "and he's done a fantastic job for us, clearing the boards."

Along with Kalnay, Jeff Boyle was a large factor in the Nicks rebounding department. Both Boyle and Bruce Collins, one of the better ball-handlers in the Bay of Quinte area, were voted to the tournament's all-star squad.

"We played well defensively all weekend," said Duggan, "and we shot well too."

"The key to our defence is to let the other teams bring the ball to us and take their shot. They have to stay outside to shoot because we play a tight zone. After they take their shot our forwards clear the boards and we take over ball control," said the Nicks coach.

The system has worked well for the Nicks all season. In the tournament, against Merivale, they not only faced a strong offence, but also a man-on-man full court press.

The local seniors displayed a lot of composure against the Ottawa team and came up with an eight point victory.

Boyle had 15 points in the final and Kalnay had 12. Collins was next with seven, Dave Holland had six and Danny Kraszewski and Mark Soule had five each.

In the semi-final against New Brunswick, Collins had 19, Boyle 13, Holland 10 and KaKlnay eight. Kraszewski, Soule and Mike Hall checked in with four each and John Lynch rounded things out with two.

Friday's win over Laurentian was an all-round effort. Collins and Hall had nine points each, Boyle eight, Kraszewski, Mike Gorman and Soule six apiece, five each from Holland and Lynch, four from Kalnay and two from Peter Wilkinson.

This weekend the Nicks are in Oshawa to test their skills against the top Catholic Secondary Schools in the province. Among the squads invited to the event are Toronto's Michael Power and St. Basil's and London's Catholic Central. All of which are highly rated across Ontario.

Seniors Rolling

Belleville Collegiate (BCI) seniors continued to win games despite the loss of high scoring forward Larry Wilson. The local school took a decisive 82-38 exhibition decision from LaSalle Collegiate, of Kingston.

Larry Savage came off the bench to lead the win with 26 points. Gord Wright added 12, Russ Simmonds 10 and Brian Bell 9.

BCI out-rebounded the visiting Kingston squad 37-26. Wright was tops under the boards hauling down 13.

MacRury Upsets Walsh for Squash Title

By MIKE BRADSHAW

Sports Writer

Second seeded John MacRury upset number one seeded Ron Walsh 3-1 Saturday to become the first Belleville Squash Club Champion.

MacRury and Walsh were the only two undefeated A Flight players left after three days of playoffs. MacRury had won three consecutive matches 3-0 (all matches are best-of-five) while Walsh had won two by 3-2 and 3-1 scores.

The ladies champion was Lynn Brearley. She won her first two matches 3-1 and 3-0 before defeating Doreen Holmes 3-0 in the final.

B Flight championship was earned by Lynn's husband, Don. He won his first two rounds 3-0 and 3-0 and then ousted Gavin Monaghan in the final 3-1.

The final championship, C Flight, went to Ian Fraser. He dumped Dick Morden in the final 3-0. Fraser rolled through the first two rounds of competition by 3-0 scores, as well.

Although this was the first squash tournament ever at the Belleville Club, MacRury felt he had a psychological advantage over Walsh.

"I've played in a lot of tennis tournaments," said the champion, "so I know what kind of pressures to expect. I think that helped me. Ron appeared to be a little up tight."

Walsh came out like gang busters in the first game of the match. He jumped into a 4-0 lead and then went on to win 9-3.

"I was cold," said MacRury, "I thought I had warmed up enough, but I guess I hadn't."

The third game was the turning point," he said, "after he had me 6-2 and I came back I think that really did him in."

MacRury and Walsh battled through nearly 15 minutes of squash at a 2-2 tie before Walsh finally jumped into a 6-2 lead. Then the two went into a deadlock again. Winning and losing serves consecutively. (A player must have the serve to score.) Suddenly, the game broke wide-open and MacRury jumped in front 7-6. "I played a lot of drops," said MacRury, "I planned a lot of my shots and just tried to wear him out. After a while he was just hammering the ball and hoping for the best."

"You can't do that," said MacRury, "in squash you have to combine conditioning and strategy."

MacRury's tactics paid off. He went on to win the third game 10-8 and had his opponent so worn out that in the fourth game he won 9-0 to take the championship three games to one.

"We were very pleased with the outcome of the tournament," said convenor Spencer Destun, "it was beyond our expectations."

Club president Dr. Patrick O'Boyle-Kelly, said, "We are so pleased with the success of this one that we're planning another in a few months."

Racquet Sports supplied the 'A' Championship trophy and Leslie's Ski Den supplied the 'B'. C Flight trophy was the Manager's Trophy and the Ladies' Trophy was donated by Dr. James Dolan. All champions received keeper trophies as did final round losers. The final round losers' trophies were donated by Bob's Sports, Don Bells Sports and Stephen Licence.

Players who lost their opening round game went into the Consolation Championship. John Bailey was the A Consolation champ, Tom Fleming won B, Andy Hooper won C and Pat Gervis was the Ladies Consolation champion. Trophies were also presented to each Consolation Champ.

Zdravko Leads Barbers

Fundic Zdravko scored three times in the second half to lead 211 Front Street Barbers to a 6-1 win over John's Variety Store in Belleville Indoor Soccer League action on the weekend.

Zdravko also scored the only goal of the first half for the Barbers. Dario D'Anna replied for John's as the first half ended in a 1-1 tie.

Third Consecutive Year

BCI Wins Napanee Tourney

NAPANEE (Special)— Belleville Collegiate (BCI) juniors ran their season record to 21-4 on the weekend with three consecutive wins enroute to their third straight Grand Championship title in the Napanee Junior Basketball Tournament.

The local juniors downed Sydenham 43-36 in their first game and routed Regiopolis, of Kingston, 46-22 in the second. In the Grand Championship Fellowes Secondary, of Pembroke, fell prey to the BCI squad 54-50. The victory marked their fouth tournament win of the season.

"The score was not indicative of the play," said BCI coach Bill Miller of the Grand Championship game," we played excellent defence and shot exceptionally well."

The local crew jumped into 21-4 first quarter lead and coasted to the title from there. At half-time it was 21-16 and after three-quarters it was 47-32.

Mitch Hannah led the way in the final with 18 points. Mike Kirby added ten and Bruce Millien had nine. John Gunthrie dropped in eight and Brent Walmsley got four. Dave Franklin and Ron Bell rounded things out with three and two points, respectively.

"When we play good defence we usually have an all-round good game," said Miller, "good movement on defence invariably leads to good movement on offence."

"This is borne out by the number of people we have involved in our scoring," he added.

In BCI's semi-final win over Regiopolis eight people counted points, Bell had ten, Hannah nine, Milliken seven, Franklin and Kirby six each, Guthrie four, Walmsley three and Chris Adams two.

"We played sloppy basketball in first game," said the BCI coach, "we missed eight or nine easy layups and continuously threw the ball away."

Nevertheless his club held on for the seven point win. Sydenham went on to earn the Consolation Championship defeating Cobourg West in the final 55-46.

Hannah had 15 points in the opening win and Kirby added 11.

In two weeks the BCI junior squad travels to Orillia to participate in Blackball Tournament. The best junior teams in the province usually attend this one. The team's final tournament start of the year comes February 22 when they play in the Quinte Invitational.

Connors Wins 'Toughest Game'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Jimmy Connors withstood a valiant rally to defeat Rod Laver 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5 Sunday and bolster his claim to being the world's No. 1 tennis player.

"This was the toughest game I've ever played in my life," Connors, 22, said after his victory over the Australian star in a televised $100,000 challenge match—the richest purse for a single match in tennis history.

Connors received $100,000 plus a new car for the triumph. Although it was billed as a winner-take-all event, Laver got a consolation prize estimated between $50,000 and $60,000.

Laver, 36, who has played in only two tournaments in the last six monhs, said he probably would like a rematch once he plays in some tournaments. And Connors said he'd definitely like to meet Laver again.

Fezler Hangs On

HONOLULU (AP) — "Just one shot back," mused Arnold Palmer. "Well, that's not too bad. Not bad at all. I'm always pleased to go into the last round—any last round—just one shot behind."

Palmer, a non-winner for the last two years, twice had a share of the lead in the third round, but had to be content with a three-under-par 69 and a 205 total. Fezler had a 68 for 204.

Lou Graham sank an 80-yard shot from the rough for an eagle on his final hole for a 65 and a tie with Palmer for second.

Al Geiberger, the leader through the first two rounds, took a 71 and was tied with Gary Groh at 206, 10 under par on the water-logged 7,154-yard Waialae Country Club course. Groh had a third-round 70.

No one else was within three shots. Defending champion Jack Nicklaus had a 70 and was eight back at 212.

George Knudson of Toronto slipped to a 74 for 218.

A tropical storm washed out Saturday's play and another heavy downpour delayed things for more than half an hour Sunday.

Another storm today would end the tournament.

If that happens, Fezler is the winner. The tournament can't be extended because many of the players are entered in the Bob Hope Desert Classic beginning Wednesday in Palm Springs, Calif.

Swiss Skiers Sharp

MEGEVE, France (CP) — Swiss skiers took the first three places in an incident-filled World Cup downhill race Saturday as the top Austrian contenders all fell on the icy course.

Thick fog masked the top of the run at the start of the event which was put back one hour. It cleared shortly after Jim Hunter of Calgary, the seventh man to start, set off.

"You couldn't see the first gates and then suddenly you were in sunshine," said the 21-year-old Hunter who still managed to finish 12th as the Canadians put on a strong display. "I said to myself "I've got to go." But I was also slow over the flats on the upper part which cost me time."

Ken Read, 19, of Calgary was the best Canadian with an eighth-place finish in two minutes, 6.14 seconds. David Murray, 21, of Abbotsford, B.C., was 11th in 2:07.02, Hunter came in with a time of 2:07.1, Steve Podborski, 17, of Toronto was 15th in 2:07.67, Davie Irwin, 20, of Thunder Bay, Ont., was 31st in 2:09.62 and Gary Aiken, 21, of Trail, B.C., was 37th in 2:10.83.

It was Read's best performance in World Cup competition.

Walter Vesti, 24, of Switzerland finished first in 2:03.11 followed by countryman Rene Berthod in 2:03.18 and Philippe Roux in 2:03.79.

Italy's Gustavo Thoeni was ninth in 2:06.43, giving him the top score in the combined standings of the Arlberg Kandahar tournament with 16.74 points and putting him in the lead of the World Cup standings.

Hunter wound up fifth in the combined standings with 50.86 points, Murray was sixth with 60.62, Podborski seventh with 65.07, Read 11th with 69.44 and Aiken 18th with 92.41.

Thoeni, who won the World Cup event every year from 1971 to 1973 and took two gold medals at the 1972 Olympics, soared to a 14-point World Cup lead over Austria's Franz Klammer, one of the big losers of the day. Thoeni has 198 points and Klammer 184.

Kashiwa Takes Lead

MOUNT SNOW, Vt. (CP) — Hank Kashiwa of Bellingham, Wash., won the Mount Snow slalom event Sunday to take over points lead with 172 on the professional ski tour.

Kashiwa, who finished third Saturday in the giant slalom, earned $4,000 to raise his season's total to $22,600. Henri Duvillard of France is the leader in money winnings with $23,900 but he is second in the points race with 159.

Young Cards 67 For Title

MIAMI (AP) — Donna Caponi Young closed with a five-under-par 67 for a 54-hole total of 208 Sunday to win the $40,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament by three strokes over Kathy Cornelius.

Mrs. Young's sister, Janet Caponi LePera finished in a tie for third with Suzie McAllister at four-under-par 212, one stroke back of Mrs. Cornelius.

Sandra Post, who shared the second-round lead with Mrs. LePera and Miss Blalock, slipped to a 74 for a 214 total. Miss Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., collected $1,000.

The victory in the initial LPGA event of the year was worth $5,700 to Mrs. Young. The two-time United States open victor, who turned 30 last Wednesday, did not win a tournament last year while finishing 10th on the money-earnings list with $47,691.

Mrs. Young collected no bogies in her final round but said she didn't know how she stood until her caddy told her she was holding a three-stroke lead on the 18th tee. She birdied the 16th.

Canadian Champions Crowned

Now It's Shot at World Titles

QUEBEC (CP) — The 15 members of Canada's national figure skating team today turn their attention to the world championships with gold medal hopes pinned on Toller Cranston of Toronto, senior men's champion for the fifth straight year.

As the Canadian championships ended Saturday and the team was chosen for the world competition in Colorado Springs, Colo., March 4-8, the ambitions of most skaters were modest.

Lynn Nightingale, 18-year-old Ottawa skater who won the senior women's title for the second straight year, said only that she hopes to move up from her sixth-place finish in last year's world championship in Munich.

Barbara Berezowski and David Porter of Toronto, the dance champions who were 15th in the world in 1974, said they would like to make it to the top 10.

Candy Jones of Toronto and Don Fraser of Richmond Hill, Ont., the pairs champions, were so stunned by their victory that they weren't giving any thoughts to how well they might do in their first trip to the worlds.

Sandra and Val Bezic of Toronto, who missed the championships because of an ankle injury to Sandra and surrendered the pairs crown after five years, could only hope they would be ready for Colorado Springs. They were fifth in the world last year.

And even Cranston, after a brilliant free-skating performance that earned him a perfect six from one judge for artistic impression, declined to make any prediction.

"I'm not really banking my career on Colorado a month from now," he said. "The only thing that makes sense to me is the art of skating."

Cranston, who was third in last year's world competition after a spectacular comeback in the free skating, is rated by many as the man to beat this year.

"But anything can happen," he said while admitting that he must be ranked among the favorites along with Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., the three top Europeans and the American champion.

Shaver had to pass up this year's Canadian competition because of a knee injury but the 23-year-old skater is automatically invited this year because he was fifth in the 1974 worlds.

Jan Hoffmann of East Germany will be unable to defend his world title because of a recent knee operation. Sergei Volkov of the Soviet Union, who just edged Cranston for second place last year, will be back.

But those who see the prospect of a gold medal for Cranston are banking their hopes on the fact that he has clearly improved his work on compulsory figures, which account for an important 40 per cent of the total marks in singles skating.

Cranston said the absence of Shaver, his closest competitor in the last few years, made it tough to reach an emotional peak for the Canadian competition.

TOLLER CRANSTON

"I found myself my own competitor—fighting myself—and while your immediate goal is to retain your title, it gets more difficult each year."

He added that he was skating a new program after almost a year without competition. But anyone who watched his electrifying performance in the compulsory free-skating Friday night and saw him called back for three encores in Sunday's exhibition must be convinced of his superlative ability.

Introduced as the "Nureyev of the ice," he skated with all the grace that the famed ballet dancer displays on the stage, delighting the audience with his expressive use of arm and hand motions which has revolutionized men's skating.

Other members of the Canadian team, which will spend three weeks in Aspen, Colo., to become accustomed to the altitude before the world championships, are:

Bob Rubens of Montreal, a team-mate of Cranston's at the Toronto Cricket, Curling and Skating Club, who finished second in the men's; Kim Alletson, 16-year-old Minto Skating Club team-mate of Miss Nightingale in Ottawa, who was a surprise second in the women's; Kathy Hutchinson and Jamie McGrigor of Cambridge, Ont., second in the pairs; and Susan Carscallen and Eric Gillies of Toronto, second in the senior dance.

Stan Bohonek of Toronto, third in the men's, will accompany the team as an alternate but will participate only if Shaver or Cranston is unable to compete.

Like Cranston, Miss Nightingale was a runaway winner, leading the field of 10 through all three sections of the competition—figures, compulsory free skating and free skating.

Her unquestioned superiority was not without problems, however, because she was almost too relaxed before the free skating.

"Normally you're a bit nervous, but I wasn't nervous at all today," she said. "Somehow it felt just like another practice and that's not good."

Sifford Scores A First

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Sifford rolled in a 25-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden death playoff Sunday to become the first black man to win the Professional Golfers' Association Seniors tournament.

Sifford, 52 and a veteran touring pro, edged Fred Wampler of Denver after the two had tied for 72 holes at eight-under-par 280. His first-place finish was worth $7,500 and a new car. Wampler, 53, earned $5,000.

Sifford shot a three-under-par 69 Sunday. Wampler, the tourney leader after three rounds, managed an even-par 72 Sunday.

Sifford canned his long putt for a three on the par-four, 422-yard first hole to win the tournament.

WINS SKI RACE

PUTNEY, Vt. (AP) — Tim Caldwell of Putney, Vt., finished three minutes ahead of Reyo Piuras of Toronto in the men's 30-kilometre race Sunday at the United States cross-country championship races. Caldwell, a member of the U.S. ski team, had a time of one hour, 33 minutes and 33.87 seconds.

Forced to Settle for Tie

Rangers Blow Four-goal Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rod Gilbert had scored four goals in a game once before in 1968 when he led New York Rangers to a 6-1 victory over Montreal Canadiens.

"But we won that game," the Rangers right winger said. "To score four goals and get a tie tarnishes the game a bit for me."

So Gilbert, the Rangers' all-time leading scorer, got little satisfaction from Sunday's 5-5 National Hockey League tie against Detroit Red Wings.

"We needed two points really bad," Gilbert said. "We've got some of our most important games coming up and we need every point we can get."

In other NHL games Sunday, Bobby Orr had a goal and four assists in Boston Bruins' 5-1 win over Philadelphia Flyers, Montreal Canadiens beat California Seals 5-2, Buffalo Sabres whipped Kansas City Scouts 8-1, Atlanta Flames defeated Minnesota North Stars 5-3 and New York Islanders and Chicago Black Hawks tied 1-1.

Saturday, Toronto Maple Leafs nipped Boston 3-2, Montreal beat Los Angeles Kings 5-3, Vancouver Canucks beat Washington Capitals 5-2, the Islanders defeated Detroit 4-1, Philadelphia blanked Buffalo 6-0, the Rangers defeated Chicago 4-1, Minnesota edged Kansas City 3-2 and Pittsburgh and St. Louis tied 4-4.

Gilbert was further disappointed by the Rangers' waste of a four-goal lead.

"It must drive the coach crazy to lose a lead like that," Gilbert said.

"That's what happens when you get careless,' said Rangers coach Emile Francis. "The forwards were getting caught deep in the offensive zone and the defencemen were getting caught, period."

That led to a two-goal game by Detroit's Bill Hogaboam, the second of which tied the game for the last time at 5:56 of the third period. Gilbert's fourth goal of the game and 29th of the season had come just 46 seconds earlier.

The result left the Flyers winless in regular-season games at Boston since the Philadelphia club's first visit on Nov. 12, 1967.

Asked if the Flyers, who lead the Patrick Division by nine points, had been flat in the game, coach Fred Shero replied: "We don't know the meaning of the word flat. Of course, we're lousy at times."

The Bruins' Dave Forbes returned to action after sitting out nine games of a suspension for injuring Minnesota's Henry Boucha in a game last month. Forbes must also sit out Boston's next game in Minnesota on Thursday.

For the second time in two years, the Canadiens tied the league record for the longest undefeated road record in a season. The win at Oakland was Montreal's 10th to go with five ties in their last 15 road games.

The record 15-game streak was first set by Boston in 1940 and tied by Detroit in 1951 and Montreal in 1973.

Yvan Cournoyer tied the score for Montreal after Rick Hampton opened the scoring for California in the first period and then Steve Shutt and Murray Wilson put the Canadiens ahead 3-1 in the second period and Bob Gainey and Yvon Lambert added third-period goals.

Rey Comeau led Atlanta's victory over Minnesota with two goals, his second coming in a three-goal Atlanta splurge in the second period thatput the Flames ahead 4-1.

NHL Feels Pinch

NEW YORK (CP) — Soaring costs may force the National Hockey League to pull in its horns as far as expansion to a 20-team league is concerned.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said Saturday operating costs have tripled since the first expansion in 1967, and player salaries this season are 250 per cent higher than they were in 1971-72.

He said his estimates did not include the salaries of the last four expansion clubs—Atlanta, New York Islanders, Kansas City and Washington.

Campbell said it costs $3 million a year to run a club in the NHL. This does not include debt payments of any kind.

In 1966-67, when the NHL was a six-team league, operating costs were $1 million a club. Then the league expanded to 12 teams in 1967-68, and Campbell said the cost factor reached $1.5 million.

By the time the rival World Hockey Association began operating in 1972, NHL costs had jumped to $2.5 million a club as NHL owners began signing players to long-term contracts to match or better offers from the WHA.

NHL owners now are faced with major decisions whether to continue the route of expansion and create a 20-team league in 1976-77 by adding Seattle and Denver.

The 18-team league already has two financially troubled expansion teams in Pittsburgh and Oakland.

The owners, meanwhile, have given backing to Thayer Potter, president of Pittsburgh Penguins, in his attempt to raise financial support to keep the team in Pittsburgh.

The NHL's board of governors held an all-day meeting in New York Saturday and gave Potter a vote of confidence, saying they were satisfied with the progress he is making toward solving his financial problems.

Seventeen of the 18 governors—Atlanta was not represented—supported a resolution Pittsburgh needed to alleviate its financial troubles.

While the text of the resolution was not made public, Campbell said it simply was a declaration of policy that would aid the Penguins in their "recruitment of financial investment."

The league took over California Seals last year, agreeing to pay former owner Charles O. Finley $6.5 million for his interests. The club remains a big money-loser, putting a big bite on other club owners who must foot the bill.

Comets Rally For Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A third-period rally of four consecutive goals lifted last place Napanee C-omets to an 8-6 win over Whitby McDonald's in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action Sunday.

The Comets led 3-1 at the end of the first period but trailed 5-4 going into the final 20 minutes.

Dick Cherry led the Comets with three goals. Jim Sunstrum added two third-period goals. John McConnell, Wayne McConnell and Ron Riley got the others for Napanee, which has a 9-19-2 record and is within three points of fifth-place Cambridge Hornets.

Reds Nipped

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nova Scotia Voyageurs scored twice in 37 seconds in the third period Sunday afternoon to defeat Providence Reds 3-2 and move into second place in the American Hockey League's Northern Division.

The win enabled the Voyageurs to climb past Rochester Americans. The first-place Reds have 67 points, the Voyageurs 61 and the Americans, who lost a pair of decisions on the weekend, 60.

A Halifax crowd of 4,669 saw Jerry Holland's second-period goal give the Reds a 2-1 lead. Providence's Ken Campbell and Nova Scotia's John Van Boxmeer scored in the first period.

In Sunday's other games, Springfield Kings defeated Rochester 5-2, New Haven Nighthawks tied Virginia Red Wings 4-4 and Syracuse Eagles tied Richmond Robins 5-5.

In Saturday's games, Hershey Bears topped Richmond 5-3, New Haven edged Rochester 6-5 and Springfield shaded Virginia 2-1.

KEHOE N HOSPTAL

Kehoe, a right winger for Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League, was in hospital Sunday undergoing tests. A team spokesman said Kehoe became ill prior to Saturday night's 4-4 tie in St. Louis and was flown here. The club also announced Sunday that rookie defenceman Dennis Owchar has gone to Hershey Bears, the club's American Hockey League farm club.

Aeros Top Blades

Loss Dims Glow Of Welcome Home

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The travel-weary Blades finally made their home debut Sunday night and were warmly greeted by a crowd of 9,023 at Baltimore Civic Centre.

"It created excessive palpitations of the heart," said Blades' coach Johnny Wilson, who had never seen more than 6,500 at Detroit where the team played the first part of the World Hockey Association season.

Houston Aeros, however, were not impressed. They skated past the Blades 5-2, handing the club its seventh straight loss, six of them coming since the WHA shifted the franchise from Michigan to Baltimore.

The Blades lost Friday night in Hartford, Conn., Saturday night in Phoenix and didn't get to Baltimore until 10 a.m. Sunday morning.

"In addition,' said Wilson, "some of the guys have the flu."

The Blades were wearing the jerseys of the American League Clippers who disbanded when the Blades moved to Baltimore.

Elsewhere, Quebec Nordiques beat Cleveland Crusaders 4-3, Vancouver Blazers defeated Toronto Toros 4-2, Minnesota Fighting Saints beat Winnipeg Jets 5-4 in overtime, and Edmonton Oilers defeated Chicago Cougars 4-3, also in overtime.

Saturday, Phoenix beat Baltimore 8-1, Quebec edged Indianapolis 2-1, and Houston beat Chicago 6-5.

The Blades, who started as Los Angeles Sharks two years ago and then became Michigan Stags at the start of this season, played before crowds of about 2,000 at Detroit and their biggest attendance of the season had been 6,429 Nov. 10.

The teams were tied 1-1 midway through the second period, the Blades' J. P. LeBlanc and the Aeros' Rich Preston getting the goals. Then Houston scored three goals in three minutes.

Marty Howe made it 2-1 with an unassisted goal at 14:01 of the period, Jim Sherrit made it 3-1 2½ minutes later, and Preston picked up his second goal 20 seconds after that.

Quebec's Serge Bernier scored his 37th and 38th goals and team-mate Rejean Houle connected just 18 seconds into the game. Richie Leduc had two goals for Cleveland.

George Morrison scored his second goal of the game at 2:16 of overtime to give Minnesota its fifth straight victory. Danny O'Shea also had two goals for the winners while Bobby Hull scored his 45th of the season for Winnipeg.

Wolves' Surge Ends

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Fincups put an end to Sudbury Wolves' 12-game unbeaten streak Sunday but failed to gain ground on Toronto Marlboros in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

The third-place Fincups, playing on home ice, defeated the Wolves 4-1, while the league-leading Marlboros, also at home, bounced Kingston Canadians 7-3.

In other games Sunday, St. Catharines Black Hawks crushed London Knights 7-1 and Kitchener Rangers beat Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 8-3.

In games Tuesday, London visits Oshawa, the Fincups play host to Peterborough Petes, the Rangers meet the '67s in Ottawa and the Black Hawks travel to Kingston.

Marlies 7 Canadians 3

Craig Crawford led Marlboros with two goals while John Anderson, Bruce Boudreau, Mike McEwen, Mark Napier and John Tonelli each got one. Brad Rhines was a two-goal scorer for the Canadians, with the other Kingston marker supplied by Greg Botham.

Rangers 8 Greyhounds 3

Black Hawks 7 Knights 1

Kevin Kennery and Dave Salvian each connected twice for the Black Hawks at St. Catharines. Greg Craig, Gary McAdam and Ken Martyn got the other goals. Bill Cheropita's bid for a shutout went down the drain when Rick Martin scored for London at 7:29 of the third period.

Greyhounds 6 Generals 4

The Greyhounds pumped home three goals in the first 10 minutes of the final period and hung on for victory over the Generals. Cary Farelli scored twice for the winners. Single goals came from Bill Belsum, Paul Woods, Doug Paley and Ed Smith. Oshawa goal-getters were Brian Drumm, Bud Stefanski, Terry Angel and Glenn Kirkham.

Shariff Moves Up

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Defending champion Shariff Khan of Toronto advanced to the semi-finals of the 22nd North American Open squash championships, defeating Ken Binns of Toronto 15-10, 10-15, 15-2, 15-8 Saturday.

Khan, originally from Pakistan, has won the title the last six years. He will meet Peter Briggs of the United States in one semi-final and Vic Niedhoffer of the U.S. will meet Mexican Juan de Villafranca in the other.

Briggs defeated Gordon Anderson in the best match of the day, 16-13, 0-15, 15-7, 15-12. Niedhoffer eliminated Mohibulla Khan of Pakistan 12-15, 15-8, 15-7, 15-10 and de Villafranca downed Yusef Khan of India 18-16, 15-8, 15-13.

Steve Moysey of Toronto won his quarter-final game in the first Pan-American Cup, defeating Toronto's Barry Taylor 15-4, 1-15, 15-13, 15-12. His semi-final opponent will be Frank Satterthwaite of the U.S., a 15-10, 5-10, 15-7 winner over Clive Caldwell of Toronto.

Other semi-finalists are Jay Nelson and Gul Khan, both living in the U.S. Nelson beat American Tom Poor and Khan topped Mexican Raul Sanchez.

Everton Hangs on in First

Moores Leads Stoke City to Third

LONDON (CP) — Ian Moores, touted as a future star of the England soccer team, scored two goals Saturday to lead Stoke City into third place in the scramble for the English League title.

Stoke improved its chances with a 4-0 win over Manchester City, another of the eight teams bunched near the top of the First Division.

Everton maintained its one-point lead atop the heap with a 1-0 victory over Tottenham Hotspur on substitute Jim Pearson's goal in the 80th minute. Ipswich Town stayed on Everton's heels with a 2-0 win over Wolverhampton Wanderers. Goals came on free kicks by Kevin Beattie and Colin Wiljoen.

Moores, a big striker who has played for the England Under-23 team, is bidding for a place in England's next World Cup squad.

He scored the first goal one minute before halftime and helped set up a goal by Alan Hudson in the 66th minute. Moores then gave Stoke a 3-0 lead eight minutes from the end and Geoff Hurst added another four minutes later.

Stoke showed enough striking power to make the club a powerful contender for the title. The team is just two points behind Everton.

Arsenal became the first club for three years to win home and away against Liverpool in the same season. Alan Ball, who scored twice in Arsenal's 3-1 win at Liverpool earlier in the season, got the only two goals Saturday, the second from the penalty spot.

Derby County's run of four successive wins was ended by a 4-1 loss to Queen's Park Rangers, who scored three of their goals in the last 10 minutes.

Two of the Second Division's unbeaten home records were lost. The big shock was Manchester United's 1-0 loss to Bristol City on Don Gillies' second-half goal. Notts County lost 3-1 to Aston Villa.

Graham Fyfe tied the game for Rangers with four minutes remaining in the game. John Hazel had given Morton the lead in the 18th minute.

Celtics Thrive On 'Break'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dave Cowens was his usual overpowering self, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was frustrated once again, but coach Tommy Heinsohn wanted to talk about Jo Jo White and the Boston Celtics' fast break.

"We destroyed them with the fast break and Jo Jo ran the show beautifully," Heinsohn said Sunday after the Celtics beat Milwaukee Bucks 120-102 for their ninth consecutive National Basketball Association victory.

Cowens scored 24 points and grabbed 22 rebounds while playing just 36 minutes in the runaway. Abdul-Jabbar managed 23 points, but only six rebounds, before going to the Milwaukee bench.

"This is the best we've run the break all season," Heinsohn said. "We got good shots. That was Jo Jo's work. He was the man in the middle. He played super offence. He ran the show beautifully.

"I don't know how many points he got (20), but the way he ran the show was immense. When you do that against Milwaukee, it's a pretty good feat."

In the other games, New Orleans Jazz defeated New York Knicks 118-114, Cleveland Cavaliers whipped Detroit Pistons 116-96, Kansas City-Omaha Kings defeated Golden State Warriors 127-101, Chicago Bulls beat Washington Bullets 97-80, Philadelphia 76ers downed Houston Rockets 90-77 and Seattle SuperSonics turned back Los Angeles Lakers 119-112.

In Saturday's NBA games, Houston beat New York 95-93, Cleveland defeated Atlanta 113-109 and Detroit downed Buffalo 119-113.

Sunday's American Basketball Association action saw San Antonio beat Indiana 119-100, Virginia defeat St. Louis 109-101, New York down San Diego 126-90, Kentucky turn back Utah 96-86 and Memphis whip Denver 120-103.

Mexico Upsets U.S. Team

Ramirez Just Too Much

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Raul Ramirez took his third match in three days Sunday by whipping Roscoe Tanner of the United States as Mexico won the second-round North American Zone Davis Cup tennis competition.

Ramirez won 7-5, 7-9, 6-4, 6-2. Friday he beat Stan Smith, the No. 1 man on the U.S. team and Saturday teamed with Vicente Zarazua to win the doubles.

Ramirez' victory made the final match meaningless, since Mexico already held a 3-1 lead in the best-of-five series and will meet defending champion South Africa in the next match of the Davis Cup elimination series—a zone semi-final.

Only once did Tanner break the serve of the 6-foot-1 Mexican. That came on the 16 game of the second set when Ramirez double faulted at set point.

Ramirez, after his opening victory over Smith and his doubles triumph, said he could play five sets of tennis every day of the week, and proved it on a day when the temperature was in the high 70s.

The victory for Mexico was only its second in 23 Davis Cup matches against the U.S. Last year, Colombia eliminated the U.S. in another upset early in the competition.

Charley's Aunt: Fine Performance by Cast

By JIM SMELLE

Staff Reporter

You haven't met anyone like Charley's Aunt. She's not your typical favorite relative you love to see come visit.

This aunt is loud, boisterous, speaks her mind and even smokes a cigar. She's not bad at singing bird calls too.

But to say anything more would be to give away the plot of the stage presentation of Charley's Aunt by the Drama Club of Nicholson Catholic College of the three-act comedy which premiered Thursday night at St. Michael's Academy.

The play continues tonight and Saturday in the auditorium of the academy at 8 p.m.

It wouldn't be too unfair to say that Charley's Aunt is really a he, a fact you'd need to know if you're to credit Peter Whalen for a fine, humorous portrayal complete with quavering voice of the eccentric imposter.

Peter Thalen's performance was joined by generally fine performances from the rest of the cast, Alan Kelly as the Colonel, Sir Francis Chesney. Paul Allore as the pompous, overbearing Stephen Spettigue who hopes to marry Charley's Aunt.

John O Connor does well as Jack Chesney while the Charley who has the aunt, Don De Genova is fine in his role.

John Kot plays the butler, Brassett, while Julianna Corrigan portrays the real Charley's Aunt, Donna Lucia D'Alvadore. Playing Spettigues's ward is Lori Fobert while his niece is played by Anne Shannon. Ela Delahay, an orphan is played by Margaret Wringe.

The timing and pace of the comedy ran well with the laughs coming in the right places. The first two acts ran almost an hour each, a little long, but that's the fault of the play itself, written by Brandon Thomas rather than of the school production.

Everyone projected their voices well and no matter where you sat in the auditorium you didn't have much trouble hearing what was said by all the cast. Under Sister Mary Fleurette's direction, fine performances were generated.

The costumes and setting were to represent the London of the 1890s but it took a while for this to sink in. But this was the only major fault I found with the play.

On minor complaint I did find, one that could easily be rectified occurred in the first two acts with the action taking place in a college room at Oxford and later with a garden added outside to the room.

The indication of the gardens outside with green strips of material grouped together and blown by fan to form a bushy tree worked well but a pennant in Jack Chesney's room of all the different universities had the old English school Eton spelled Eaton.

Sussannah York: Busy On and Off Screen

NEW YORK (AP) — A star, a woman, a mother, a wife and the author of a children's book. Susannah York is all of these and none of these.

"I'm first and foremost me," she proclaimed. "Every human being is first ad foremost he, or she, and that is the most important thing about anybody.

"I don't want any labels stuck on me. I don't want people making an easy assumption about me, because the most important thing is the person, the individuality"

The blonde British actress with the throaty voice was on a promotioal our for her latest film, Gold, a drama set against South African gold mines

"It was exploited as a film about lesbians," she said. But, first and foremost, it was a film about a tired marriage, and the marriage happened to be between two women.

"For instance, Childie, whom I played—it's not that 'Childie' was a lesbian, but she was Childie. And one of many things Childie was happened to be a lesbian. First, it's her, the person."

Well, then, what kind of a person is Miss York? A successful, busy, happy and fulfilled one, thank you. "I've been incredibly lucky."

It has been smooth sailing ever since she left the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. Making her film debut in Tunes of Glory as Alec Guinness' daughter, she has appeared in such well-known films as Tom Jones, A Man for All Seasons, They Shoot Horses, Don't They? The Killing of Sister George, Sebastian, Dusfy, Country Dance and X, Y and Zee.

Her co-stars include Michael Caine, Peter O'Toole, Dirk Bogarde and Roger Moore. In a few months, she'll start filming Conduct Unbecoming in London with Michael York.

"I've had marvelous parts," she said, explaining she has won all of these parts without begging or resorting to politics.

"I'm very proud. I wouldn't dream of bowing or kowtowing to get parts. Anyway, I've had a good agent and have never had to push. I've proved myself enough now."

Miss York also has a serene private life. In her teens she married Michael Wells, a former actor who now writes plays, and they are still happily married.

"We live in a big, strange, lovely house an hour out of London in the country. It's Victorian Gothic and was built in 1850. We've put much work into it. I'm a great painter and plasterer."

There, when she is not working, she cooks, looks after their daughter, Sasha, 2, and Orlando, 1, and writes children's stories. Her first book, In Search of Unicorns, was recently published.

"Many actors turn to writing. There is a tremendous link between actors and writers. Actors often turn to writing as a new way of expression."

And as if all this is not enough, Miss York and her husband have opened a Greek-style amphitheatre on a hillside near their house. There they plan to produce two plays a year. Last summer, they staged their first production, a musical play called Long Burrow by husband Michael, and Miss York starred in it.

NEW YORK (AP) — Marilyn Monroe's lawyer has sued Norman Mailer and his publisher for $1.5 million, charging that Mailer's book Marilyn violated his rights as executor of her estate.

Lawyer Aaron Frosch said in the suit filed Monday in State Supreme Court that the book constituted "wrongful commercial exploitation" of his exclusive property rights to marketable publicity.

Besides Mailer and the publisher, Grosset and Dunlap, the suit named two other individuals and a company involved in the production and publication of the book.

A Springfield native and daughter of actor Albert Sanderson, she started in vaudeville at age 15. Her first show, Winsome Winnie, led to roles on Broadway. Among her hits were Sunshine Girl and Tangerine.

She married actor Frank Crumit in 1927. After his death in 1943, she returned to Springfield.

CUMMING, Pa. (AP) — Comedian Junior Samples, the chubby star of television's Hee Haw show, is sticking to his diet and hopes to get down to 200 pounds in the near future.

He has 81 pounds to go. Samples, 48, weighed 318 pounds when he was forced to diet by his doctor after being put in hospital for diabetes last December.

"I'm making good progress," said Samples from his home Monday, admitting that the ideal weight for his 5-foot-8 height would be about 165 pounds. "But I ain't never gonna make that. I 'spect at 200 my ribs'll be sticking out and I'll look just pitiful."

NEW YORK (AP) — Pornographic movie distributor Mickey Zaffarano has a problem. He has an X-rated flick ready for the circuit whose star, a former cheerleader and granddaughter of a Baptist preacher, is but 17 years old.

Zaffarano's problems arose when the movie's star, Jean Jennings, was confronted with a schedule of personal appearances. She broke down and confessed she was 17, not 23 as she had claimed.

Lawyers said that since Miss Jennings is under 18, producer Jason Russell could be prosecuted for contributing to the delinquency of a minor and that Miss Jennings would be treated as a "wayward minor."

This probably would not happen unless the girl's parents complained or action was taken by a group such as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

The film, shot in New York where the age limit for statutory rape is 18, includes performances by Miss Jennings in a variety of sexual acts.

USSR Likes Country Music

NEW YORK (AP) — Yerevan in Armenia is rather off the beaten path of a country-music singer. So are Tbilisi, Baku, Leningrad and Moscow.

But Sandi Burnett, who this fall performed in those cities with an Opryland troupe headed by Tennessee Ernie Ford, sums up the whole Russian tour with a broad smile and a Southernism: "Fan-tastic."

For Miss Burnett, an attractive 23-year-old native of Gulfport, Miss., the tour was just as much a voyage into the unknown as it was for Russians hearing country music for the first time.

For one thing, she said, the way Russians applaud—in unison instead of free-form—took some getting used to. So did the post-show exchanges of musical ideas with university students.

"And the people over there, they really want to get to know you. They'd line up outside the stage door for autographs and pictures, but they also wanted us to come to their homes for dinner.

"The students kept inviting us to come over and 'listen to my American records,' " she said, noting that their favorites were Bob Dylan and the Beatles. But none had country music records.

"They'd never heard country music before. The only song in the show they recognized was Sixteen Tons because it's a work song."

The tour was jointly sponsored by the United States state department, the state of Tennessee and Nashville's Opryland. How was American country music explained to the Russians?

"Well, we'd go in the university classrooms with the guitars and play a bit and our musical director would give a lecture on how country music developed over the years, from folk music to the old work songs to the blues and cowboy western songs," she said.

She said no attempt was made to sing, say, Poor Lonesome Me, in Russian, and grinned at the idea.

But she recalled that while in Leningrad, one young country music convert approached the troupe and asked the musicians to write out the words to Jackson, a Johnny Cash-June Carter hit, so he could translate it into Russian.

"We tried to explain to him that it was a boy-and-girl song, that it was a duet, but he didn't care. He said he'd fix it up so he wouldn't need a girl to sing it with him."

Miss Burnett said the troupe frequently was interviewed by Russian reporters who, in addition to asking the questions reporters everywhere ask, sometimes tried, "it seems, to catch us saying something against Russia.

"I guess it was so they could defend themselves in some way, because they're very proud of Russia. But there was nothing to catch us at, because we were having the time of our lives."

SMOKERS BEWARE

Careless smoking is a major cause of fires. Some tips: Don't smoke in bed, provide large and deep ash trays and make sure cigars, cigarettes or pipes are out before discarding them.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Tuesday, February 4

Aries (March 21-April 19) After you've reviewed the situation, you'll see you weren't entirely blameless in a misunderstanding with a loved one.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Something you're involved in with another is going to take more concerted effort by each of you to be successful.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You'll accomplish much more today with a partner or companion than you will on your own. Co-operation's the key word.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If you're doing personal decorating at home now, don't use materials or designs that are more artistic than functional.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) If you let your heart rule your head this evening, you'll make some moves you'll later regret. Use your sharp logic instead.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A chum is not in the best position to advise you regarding family finances. Her impractical solutions won't help.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You'd be wise to keep some distance between yourself and anyone working for you now. Make it a strict employer-employee relationship.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If your present budget has a little surplus, use it to pay off old obligations before buying anything new.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Feelings of a family member will be hurt. She believes you're more considerate of a friend than you are of her.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You think you'll have to beat about the bush in a situation you're reluctant to face. The direct approach is your best route.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Impulsively, you're going to do something for a friend that will dent your wallet. Reflect a bit before volunteering aid.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) A goal important to you will not be achieved on the first try. It can be reached if you're persistent enough on the second.

ROBBERY FOILED

Fertilized Egg Sticks in Tube

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss tubal pregnancy.

I recently had a tubal pregnancy and I have been unable to explain to my husband and family the way this occurs. They cannot understand why this was not diagnosed in an early stage.

Your explanation will help.—Mrs. D.L.

The manner in which the sperm and the ovum (the female egg) unite is important to understand. The sperm travels up the uterine canal to either of the two Fallopian tubes. The egg, meanwhile, has already been discharged into the Fallopian tube. The sperm and the egg meet in the tube where fertilization takes place.

Normally, the newly fertilized egg continues its descent down the tube to the uterus where it becomes attached. However, with a tubal pregnancy, something goes wrong in the tube. The path of the egg is blocked Perhaps a scarring or narrowing of the tube due to infection, old or new, is the cause of this. There may be tiny diverticula in the walls of the tube (pouches similar to those in diverticulosis in the intestines). Adhesions may be the problem.

Whatever the cause, the egg becomes entrapped in the tube where the fetus begins its growth. Early in the pregnancy, the wall of the tube, which is rather thin, often ruptures from the unaccustomed pressure, and there is attendant bleeding and acute pain.

It is not unusual for the woman, up to this point, to be unaware that she is even pregnant. So a diagnosis of tubal pregnancy has to be the exception rather than the rule. Usually recognition follows the rupture of the tube, with its attendant pain and bleeding and the expulsion of the microscopic-sized egg into the abdominal cavity.

So, for the enlightenment of your husband and your family, simply explain that the fertilized egg got stuck before it could develop normally. No fault of your own.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My mother and I are close, but I feel embarrassed about tampons. I am 15, and I'm wondering if you can help.

When I apply one do I leave the cardboard tubes on? What do I do with the string? Do I just push them up or can I break something?—P.R.

The cardboard is a guide for the insertion of the tampon. You will find at the end of the larger cardboard tube another narrower tube that you push on on to release the tampon from its cardboard casing. When you remove the cardboard tube you will see the string is suspended on the outside. Just leave it alone. That is the means for removing the tampon later.

Don't worry about "breaking something." Enclosed in all boxes of tampons you will find step-by-step directions with illustrative pictures If you read these carefully they will help

I know many daughters and mothers do not like to talk about these things. Which is unfortunate because mothers usually have much information and advice they could impart if their daughters asked them. If you really cannot talk to your mother, perhaps you could ask an aunt or a woman friend of your family's.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Which is better, hormone pills or hormone injections? Or is there no difference?

I'm told they are better given by injection because in this way they travel straight to the blood stream. But injections can become expensive since they involve a visit to the doctor's office.—Mrs. B.K.

Both routes, oral or parenteral (by injection) are effective. Some women, however, become nauseous by taking the medication orally, so many physicians prefer injection to avoid this.

However, the oral method is most commonly used. You might inquire of your doctor if he won't let you try the pills.

LONDON (CP) — A team of British mountaineers will attempt to scale the unconquered southwest face of Mount Everest late next year. Leading the 16-man team will be Chris Bonington, mountaineer and writer. Financing will be provided by Barclays Bank. Jim: "Here is a hand from the 1974 Fall Nationals which gave some East players a chance to make a most unusual defensive play."

Oswald: "It wouldn't be too many of them, because at most tables South would either be playing four diamonds or West playing four spades doubled."

Jim: "When West jumped to four spades and South refused to sell out, it was automatic for East to double. South would win the spade opening and put the king of diamonds on the table. East would take his ace and lead out two top clubs. South would ruff the second club, lead a trump to dummy's queen, take a heart finesse against East, discard one of dummy's spades on the ace of hearts, ruff a heart, ruff a club, ruff another heart to set up the last one, ruff another club, discard dummy's last spade on the last heart, ruff his three of spades in dummy and make his contract."

Oswald: "I see the unusual defensive play. East can beat the contract by letting South's king hold the first diamond."

Jim: "Let's leave it to our readers to see why this duck play will leave South one trick short. They are looking at all the cards. No expert at San Antonio looking at just his own hand and dummy made the play."

U.S. Is Seen In Key Role In Mideast

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Middle East leaders whom United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger will meet soon feel the "U.S., because of its contacts with Israel, must play the key role as Middle East peacemaker," Time magazine says.

Time says the message was expressed repeatedly to a group of 53 U.S. industrialists and journalists who, under the magazine's auspices, visited the Middle East.

"It is still our genuine hope, in fact we are pinning all our hopes, practically, on our friends the Americans, who will by now, presumably have seen what is aggressive and what is just," Time quotes King Faisal as saying.

"It would be pointless to ask the U.S. to be hostile to Israel," the magazine says President Boumedienne told the group. "But if you can reconcile your interests with those of the Arabs as well as Israel—a difficult equation—then peace will extend to the whole region."

The magazine says President Boumedienne also called on the U.S. and other major grain exporting countries to step up food shipments to countries that "are being strangled by hunger."

Trucks Sold

LONDON (AP) — The British Leyland Motor Co. announced a $31-million agreement Sunday to supply Iran with more than 2,500 trucks. The order follows a $7-million order for 300 double-decker buses.

All the trucks will be assembled in Iran by an Iranian company in which British Leyland has a share.

Funds Low

DETROIT (AP) — Unless there is an abrupt turnaround in car sales, workers at Chrysler Corp. and General Motors will exhaust speuial company-paid unemployment funds this spring, Leonard Woodcock says.

The United Auto Workers (UAW) president warned that when that happens, it will bring "substantial suffering" in communities in the United States with large numbers of jobless auto workers.

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis and two cabinet ministers will fly to Winnipeg today to participate in talks between the federal government and Syncrude Canada Ltd.

Foreign Control Worry Called Sexual Fantasy

TORONTO (CP) — A United States economist says Canada's concern with foreign ownership is comparable to "sexual fantasy of domination and control."

Robert Aliber, a University of Chicago professor and consultant to the Central Intelligence Agency, told a two-day conference on the future of Canadian nationalism on Friday that "domination and control is very much a sexual fantasy Canadians engage in when they try to understand the operation of foreign firms and their impact on Canada."

He said ownership of an industry does not affect the degree of Canadian control. Blocking takeover of Canadian firms by U.S. firms reduced competition and protected established companies.

Harvey Lazer, research director of the federal Foreign Investment Review Agency, replied: "I can't conceive of the U.S. standing for 60 per cent of its manufacturing industry being owned by Canada or Mexico."

Alan Heisey, a Canadian author and general manager of The Daily Commercial News, said Canadian newspapers are "enfeebled and enfeebling" because they are protected from foreign competition.

Walter Gordon, former federal finance minister, said he brought in legislation restricting newspaper ownership to Canadians because of attempts by European interests to buy La Presse, Montreal's largest daily, and William Loeb, a right-wing U.S. publisher, to buy the Toronto Globe and Mail.

Juneau Defends Intervention Of State in Art

TORONTO (CP) — Pierre Juneau, chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC), has criticized any assumption that government intervention in arts and communications in Canada will lead to mediocrity.

"In fact, most of the known works of art, painting, architecture, music, ballet, opera, theatre and cinema are the result either of a direct or indirect action by the state or the church," he said Saturday at a conference on Canadian nationalism sponsored by the University of Toronto law faculty.

Mr. Juneau, whose agency is responsible for regulation of Canadian content on radio and television, criticized those "who identify the free flow of information and creative works with the need of industrial enterprise to mass-market their information and entertainment products."

Doctors Say Pay Not Set by Pact

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. M. L. Mador, president of the Ontario Medical Association (OMA), says a pay agreement negotiated between the government and OMA representatives is not a binding document.

OMA members will vote today on whether doctors are to receive a raise that might result in patients paying part of their bills directly.

Dr. Mador said in an interview the agreement negotiated last spring "is not a contract—it is not a legal agreement."

"We just have an understanding," he said.

The agreement would give doctors a four-per-cent increase under the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP) effective May 1. But that increase, which follows an increase of 7.5 per cent last May, was based on "very misleading sets of figures of consumer price index and rate of inflation," Dr. Mador said.

Government statistics show Ontario doctors earn an average of $39,000 to $42,000 a year after office expenses. OHIP pays 90 per cent of their fee scale.

But Dr. Mador said average income after expenses was closer to $34,000, with expenses representing about 40 per cent of the gross income.

He said a doctor's take-home pay, after income tax of about $12,000, pension contributions of $4,000 and allowances for fringe benefits, is about $15,500.

Dr. Mador said that if the doctors throw out the agreement, the OMA immediately will draw up a new fee schedule for 1975, incorporating increases of 13 to 13.5 per cent.

If the government refuses to pay higher fees, the doctors would have to bill patients. The patients would be only partly reimbursed by OHIP.

PM Voices Sympathy For Games

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government is prepared to study "sympathetically" changes to revenue programs for the 1976 Summer Olympics as long as they fit within the existing self-financing plan, Prime Minister Trudeau said Saturday.

Ottawa will not cover any deficit that might arise, he told reporters after a two-hour meeting with Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa.

"As far as we're concerned, the deficit isn't ours—there's a clear understanding on that," he said, repeating what has been Ottawa's stand from the day Montreal set its sights on obtaining the Games.

"Our way of helping the Olympics in the past has been through the auto-financing schemes—coins, stamps, the lottery," he said. "If he (Premier Bourassa) has any other proposals in that general area, I'd be glad to hear them."

Discussion between the two men Saturday was at a "theoretical" level, Mr. Trudeau said, and no specific changes were proposed.

Davis Hits At Globe For Report

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Saturday that his Ontario government has "only begun to fight" if it has to defend its integrity from "baseless attack" over Progressive Conservative party fund-raising.

He spoke in a free-time political broadcast over the CBC-TV Ontario network, replying to revelations during the last week of letters written by Ross Shouldice, a former party fund-raiser in the Sudbury area.

He accused The Globe and Mail, which first published the 1971 letters from Mr. Shouldice to William Kelly of Toronto, Ontario party treasurer, of innuendo and irresponsible journalism.

Lewis Sees Shouldice Case Critical

OTTAWA (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party (NDP), says the Progressive Conservative government faces defeat in the next election because of its failure to call an inquiry into the activities of Ross A. Shouldice, a former Sudbury-area Conservative fund raiser.

Mr. Lewis said in an interview Saturday during a tour of eastern Ontario that the latest controversy, as well as previous ones, have left the Conservative government in "terrible trouble."

Indians to Vacate Wisconsin Estate

GRESHAM, Wis. (AP) — An agreement to end the 33-day occupation of a religious estate by militant Menominee Indians was announced by mediators Sunday.

One mediator, Artley Skenandore, said the agreement would have the Indians surrender with the understanding that the estate be converted for use as a health facility or school for Indians.

The national guard, which has kept guard around the estate, did not indicate when evacuation would begin. Skenandore said a caretaking group would occupy the property until transfer is made, probably by Feb. 22.

The Alexian Brothers, a Chicago-based Roman Catholic order that owns the estate, planned a news conference to explain the agreement.

No bomb was found. For story, see front page, second section.

Ontario to Force Action

Ambulance Services Here Must Integrate

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Director of Ontario's Ambulance Services Charles Brubacher says action must be taken to "integrate" and lower the costs of Belleville's two ambulance companies before the ministry of health will approve their 1975 budgets.

Since ambulance services were brought under provincial subsidy, they have become wholly dependent on provincial funds for both operating costs and payroll.

"It's the one lever we have that we can use to bring integration to Belleville,' said Mr. Brubacher.

In recent years, the ministry of health has been investigating services throughout the province and proposing integration in an attempt to improve service and cut costs.

At present, there are three ministry regional priorities for improvement and "Belleville is moving the slowest," to correct its problem, said Mr. Brubacher. The other two are regions centred around Morrisburg and Hawksbury. He said, the ministry is very concerned with Belleville's two services and that "a more cost-effective service must be arranged."

Once the Morrisburg situation is cleared up, regional co-ordinator Gerry Bahr will be assigned to Belleville to "evolve the most efficient service," said Mr. Brubacher.

"We have indicated to the operators in Belleville that integration is necessary but there has been some reticence on the part of Stu Meeks," proprietor of LaSalle Ambulance, said Mr. Brubacher.

"We are obligated to overcome this resistence .. we can't wait too much longer," he said. Budget approvals are due by May.

Mr. Brubacher said he expects the regional co-ordinator to arrive in Belleville "soon" to complete a "concentrated, one-week investigation of the two ambulance services. Some preliminary investigation has already been completed."

The Belleville services will be compared to a like service in a similar municipality and will be asked to match that municipality's budget. The two Belleville services last year received about $530,000 from the province.

While labor continues to comprise 90 per cent of a service's operating costs, "through integration, maximum use of regular staff and efficient use of part time staff, we can accommodate higher than normal wage raises and still stay close to the $530,000 mark," said Mr. Brubacher.

"We (ministry) will give the two an arbitrary budget and tell them to solve it any way you want but you've got two weeks to do it in," said Mr. Brubacher.

After that time if there is an "impasse," between the operators, the ministry will have to "step in with an arbitrary answer," he said.

Mr. Brubacher said integration does not necessarily mean amalgamation. He said by integrating the services, both companies would have to find common solutions to common problems.

He said the end result would be a "better service at a lower cost."

Len Steele, two thirds owner of City Ambulance, said he would not amalgamate with the LaSalle service. "Before I amalgamate, I d sell out," he said. "Buy me out or leave me alone."

"There's no way I'd consider selling out," said Mr. Meeks. "They (the ministry) are going to have to put me out."

While integration seems to be a possibility to Mr. Meeks who said he would have to sit down and talk about it, Mr. Steele said, "There's no way I'd integrate any more than we are now."

The extent of integration now is a central dispatcher at the hospital dividing the calls between the two companies.

At a November meeting, ministry officials indicated integration is a necessary step and provided Mr. Steele and Mr. Meeks with a number of alternative methods. These included one or the other taking control of the Belleville services by buying the other out or by amalgamation. A final alternative is for the province to buy out both services and implement a provincially-run service.

Mr. Brubacher preferred not to speculate on what action the ministry will take in the event the problem could not be solved locally.

Both Belleville operators believe the onus to solve the cost-cut problem is on the province's shoulders and they are prepared to wait for the government to take the lead.

Doctors Limit Fee Boost

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario doctors decided Monday to stick to a four-per-cent increase in fees agreed to last year, but will seek more when talks begin in March for the next round of increases.

Dr. M. L. Mador, president of the Ontario Medical Association (OMA) said the group's 14,000 doctors considered asking for a 13.5-per-cent increase effective May 1, but the OMA council's 300 members voted overwhelming Monday to stick with the original agreement.

The OMA and province worked out a two-year agreement last spring for a 7.75-per-cent increase last May and four-per-cent increase this May.

No decision has been made on the increase they will seek when talks with the government start March 15, Dr. Mador said.

Health Minister Frank Miller said he was delighted with the decision to stick to a four-per-cent increase.

But Dr. Mador said he thinks the government was mistaken in not agreeing to a larger increase, and predicted medical care may decline in quality because some doctors will see more patients to maintain their income.

Syncrude Talks Turn To Phones

WINNIPEG (CP) — Negotiations to provide government funds to bail out the troubled Syncrude oil sands project were to resume by telephone today, with officials hoping an agreement would be reached by this afternoon.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, looking weary after 12 hours of negotiations with provincial government and oil company executives, indicated an agreement may be near.

Some important questions remain to be solved, the minister said, but he hoped they could be settled in a series of telephone calls between the parties this morning. He declined to elaborate.

If a final agreement is reached, it will be outlined in the Commons this afternoon and in the Alberta and Ontario legislatures.

The Syncrude project in northern Alberta, owned by the multi-national oil companies, says it needs additional financing of $1 billion or the plant will be cancelled.

Salvation of the plant was left to the governments earlier Monday when Shell Canada Ltd. which had considertd becoming part of the consortium, left the meeting saying it had decided not to invest.

Public Debate to Shape Decisions

Immigration Study Outlines Four Possible Policy Aims

OTTAWA (CP) — After tabling a four-volume immigration study in the Commons Monday, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said outside the House that "in the end, there's going to have to be a lot of intuition and gut approach to this."

Mr. Andras told the Commons that the 570-page study, which outlines four possible directions for future policy, was designed as a "foundation for constructive discussion on the role future immigration policy should play."

Public debate launched by the release of the study will form the basis of a new Immigration Act the government hopes to introduce by fall, he said.

"I don't think there is any doubt that there is a sense of urgency with regard to having thought out immigration policy at a time when the population of the world is increasing at a rate of 200,000 every day," he said outside the House.

"I think it is wise for Canada to sit down and say where we intend to go with regards to population growth."

Mr. Andras said that he personally favors a "moderate-growth approach," but refused to give specific figures.

"I don't get very hung up . . . on the ultimate, absolute size of this country," he said. "I don't think there is a scientific answer to the exact size."

The major alternatives outlined in the government study are:

1. Quotas, announcing global targets for immigration, including quotas for zones or countries.

2. An annual ceiling, setting a global limit each year in consultation with the federal and provincial governments and other groups.

3. Continuing the flexible system by which immigrants are admitted on the basis of points which must add up to a total of at least 50. They are granted on the basis of education, wealth, job availability for the applicant and other factors.

4. Gearing the immigrant flow more directly to the national economy and the labor market needs.

Initial political reaction to the study was generally favorable.

Vancouver Mayor Art Phillips, a frequent critic of existing immigration policies, said the study indicates the federal government has listened to municipal complaints.

The study said that more than half of the new arrivals each year go to Vancouver, Toronto or Montreal. Over-crowding and social stress in the three cities will play an important part in setting new policy.

Mr. Andras said at a news conference Monday afternoon that the government favors a policy which would encourage immigrants to move to less-populated areas through measures such as job counselling and special incentives "rather than taking the heavy-handet approach of prohibitions and inhibitions."

Mounties' Charisma Tarnished

EDMONTON (CP) — A joint brief prepared by the Newfoundland government and the Inuit Tapirsat of Canada, representing Eskimos, says relations between police and natives in remote areas has eroded during recent years.

The brief, presented Monday to the national conference on native people and the criminal justice system, blames the erosion on the changing lifestyle of the RCMP.

But with mechanized travel and easy communication with the south, RCMP officers have withdrawn from the native communities and become remote from the people they serve.

Immigration Study Highlights

Canada's population may range from 28 to 34 million by 2001.

While the potential for racial friction exists, Canada has displayed "remarkable" tolerance towards the rising flow of non-European immigrants.

Massive new immigration growth would neither increase Canadian prosperity nor rescue under-developed countries from the problems of over-crowding and poverty.

Post-war immigration totalled 3.8 million persons, most from Europe, though increasing numbers now come from Asia and the Caribbean.

MARGARET THATCHER

Thatcher Polls More Than Heath

LONDON (AP)—Margaret Thatcher, a 49-year-old former education minister, won more votes than former prime minister Edward Heath today in a vote for leadership of the Conservative party.

But she narrowly missed getting the outright majority needed for a quick decision. A new vote of the Conservative caucus in Parliament now will be called next week.

The voting was 130 for Mrs. Thatcher, 119 for Heath and 16 for the "no-hope" candidate, Hugh Fraser.

Ford Sees Deepening Slump Before Rebound

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans face further erosion of their standard of living, higher unemployment and perpetually higher energy costs, President Ford's economic report to Congress said today.

"The American economy was built on the basis of low-cost energy" he said. "This era has now come to an end."

The report said the decline in the economy was so steep in the fourth quarter of 1974 that the administration cannot promise a quick rebound this year.

But the president's council of economic advisers, which prepared the report, still expects the economy will "move on to the road to recovery" in the second half of 1975, following another steep decline with high unemployment and high inflation in the first half.

"The most pressing concern of policy is to halt the decline in production and employment so that growth of output can resume and unemployment can be reduced," they said.

Like Ford's $319 billion fiscal 1976 budget that was submitted to Congress Monday, the 384-page economic report painted a gloomy outlook for the economy.

Ford said in the first words of his message: "The economy is in a severe recession. Unemployment is too high and will rise higher"

Unemployment is expected to rise to an average eight per cent in 1975, up from an average 5.6 per cent in 1974. Ford said the U.S. must live with higher unemployment than it would like because of the danger of inflation.

"It is vital that we look beyond the unemployment problem to the need to achieve a reduction in inflation not only in 1975 but also in 1976 and beyond," Ford said.

Ford's advisers also predicted:

—A decline in real economic output—as measured by the Gross National Product—of about three per cent on top of the 2.2 per cent decline last year.

—Inflation, as measured by the GNP, of 11 per cent at mid-year and declining to about seven per cent in the fourth quarter.

—A decline in real investment by businesses in plants and equipment of about nine per cent.

—A pickup in the housing industry to an annual construction rate of about 1.7 million units by the final quarter, compared with a current rate of about 900,000 units.

—A substantial increase in real income of Americans in the second half of the year, following a 2.5 per cent decline in 1974, the first full-year decline since 1947.

Defence Calls First Witness in Lucas Trial

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

The first of five Lucas brothers facing a series of charges following a street fight on McFarland Dr. last August testified in county court Monday.

Gordon Lucas, 33, of McFarland Dr., charged with assault causing bodily harm following the Aug. 17 incident, was the first witness to be called by the defence.

The morning session of the trial before Judge Russell C. Honey and a jury saw the prosecution complete its list of witnesses with Sgt. William Armstrong and Det. John McLaughlin of the city's police force testifying.

Gordon Lucas, in his testimony, told the court that he did not see any of his brothers strike Constable Gerry Bull with a wrench.

In the incident, Constable Bull was knocked unconscious, while city police Constables Ken Gutoskie and Paul Smith received minor injuries and had to be taken to hospital.

Gordon Lucas told the court that because of the fighting he was "groggy" for certain periods and at no time he said did he see one of his brothers strike the officer.

Gordon Lucas also testified that his main concern that day was to see that his younger brother Eric, 22, got home safely. Earlier evidence revealed that Eric, had been drinking and suffered from occasional periods of depression.

He also testified that the incident was provoked over a situation involving an injured finger of Constable Paul Smith. Gordon is accused of causing bodily harm to Constable Smith.

The street fight which began about 5 p.m. on August 17 involved a series of scuffles as more participants arrived evidence disclosed. Constables Smith and Gutoskie first on the scene were fighting with Gordon and Claude Lucas who arrived on a pick-up truck. The other officers and brothers arrived later.

The brothers are represented by defence counsel, Malcolm Robb while the attorney for the Crown is Ken Stubbington.

Those brothers charged are: Gordon, Eric and Claude, 36, assault causing bodily harm, Leonard, 37, assault causing bodily harm and possession of dangerous weapon and Larry, 25, assault causing bodily harm, possession of a dangerous weapon and assault causing bodily harm with intent to wound.

The trial continues.

Math Quiz Wednesday

The second annual BCIVS math contest will be held Wednesday, with almost 250 students in Grades 5 through 8 competing for trophies donated by Victoria and Grey Trust.

An individual plaque is awarded to the top student in each of the four grade levels and there are two team trophies — a junior plaque for Grades 5 and 6 and a senior plaque. The team score is determined by adding the scores of the top three eligible students.

Winners of last year's contest was Queen Victoria in the junior division and Harry J. Clarke in the senior division. Originator of the contest and its manager is BCI math teacher Dave Handley.

Stearns and Foster Gets $1 Million Loan

TRENTON — Stearns and Foster Canada Ltd., Trenton's newest industry, will receive a $1,000,000 loan from the Ontario Development Corporation (ODC) to build and equip its new manufacturing plant here.

It represents just under half of the cost of the $2.2 million plant now under construction on an eight-acre site west of Moore Business Forms on Douglas Rd.

An ODC official said Monday the loan was granted specifically for the construction of the new plant. It will be repaid in less than 15 years at an annual interest rate of eight per cent.

It is considered an incentive loan, granted under the Ontario Business Incentive Program, he said. The $1,000,000 figure represents the maximum loan that the government grants to industry in eastern and northern Ontario.

Under provisions of the program, a company can defer payment of the interest and-or the principle to a maximum of five years after it receives the loan.

Trenton's new plant is due for completion this November. When it opens for production, it will employ 50 people, but it is expected that number should rise to 130 within five years. By then, it is expected the plant area will have increased three-fold.

Stearns and Foster will manufacture a non-woven textile product — a form of padding made from synthetic fibres. The textile is used in disposable diapers, and hospital care and filtration products.

Concrete Construction

Concrete construction techniques have changed dramatically in recent years and much of the new technology is in use for construction of Toronto's Royal Bank Plaza. To pour concrete in winter, elaborate precautions are taken to ensure that it stays warm during the setting process. Sand and stone are heated before the concrete is mixed and the catalytic action of adding cement adds additional warmth. The forms are also pre-heated by installing diesel oil-burning heaters on the floor below and closing in the floor with plastic sheeting to contain the heat and warm the forms. After the concrete is poured and smoothed, insulated blankets are laid over the top, keeping the mixture at 50 to 60 degrees for up to 24 hours. (CP Photo

Training Courses Proposed For Tourist Resort Staff

In the form of a questionnaire, it will request comments on the courses outlined to the gathering by Ted Reid, college supervisor of community education.

Mr. Reid elaborated on courses including training classes in housekeeping, small engines and restaurant help, to begin before the start of the summer tourist season.

He explained there would be 20-30-hour courses at a cost of $6-$7.50 to each participant. Classes would require a minimum registration of six apiece and could be held on three or four Saturdays, a two- or three-day seminar or two hours an evening for two or three evenings per week at a suitable location in the county.

All accommodation, instructors and advertising would be paid for by the college, noted Mr. Reid.

He also expressed the thanks of the Stirling arena and winter carnival committee for assistance the tourist region are giving in advertising their carnival

Advertising aid has also been given the committees under the sponsorship of the Highlands of Hastings in Tweed, Madoc, Frankford, Coe Hill and Bancroft, to help increase winter business in the county.

Present during the meeting were directors and members from Gilmour, Deseronto, the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, Thurlow Township and Trenton.

Ward Named Acting Mayor

PICTON — Town council has appointed veteran councillor Bessie Ward as acting mayor in the absence of mayor Donald King. She will act when he is absent from the municipality or ill.

Councillor Richard Byers suggested action in this issue might be postponed until vacationing mayor King had an opportunity to express a possible preference.

Deputy-reeve Larry Richardson noted he had been aware that he would not be in Picton for council's February meeting but had neglected to appoint any member of council as a replacement.

He added councillor Ward is experienced after many years in office and is a logical choice.

Mrs. Ward was appointed acting mayor for Monday's session of council following the town clerk announcement that Mayor King was holidaying in Barbados.

Monitoring May Extend Life of Picton Dump

PICTON — An operation deadline of March 31, 1975, for the town dump may be extended to the end of the year if Picton council installs testing wells to monitor pollution.

John Tooley of the ministry of environment, waste management branch, met with council's public works committee last month to review conditions at the Picton land fill site and noted the approaching approval deadline.

Public works chairman Russell Alexander Monday told council the town engineer has been instructed to obtain information on costs of a garbage collection service.

He predicted the March 31 deadline will be extended until the end of the year but even with the optimum control measures required by the ministry the dump site's maximum period of use would be five years.

Councillor Alexander said it would be costly to comply with these requirements over a five-year period, observing a new packer alone would represent an expenditure of about $40,000.

Also, there is a shortage of landfill at the dump.

Town engineer David Hickman said Mr. Tooley has agreed to support an extended deadline for operation of the dump site on the basis of council's willingness to co-operate with the ministry.

Testing wells must be installed and use of the dump beyond the March 31 deadline would be contingent on satisfactory tests of the leaching action. The testing well should be installed on the site adjacent to the town creek to monitor the quality of the leachate.

Mr. Hickman reminded council landfill is needed too but can be obtained at Bloomfield where large quantities have been dredged from a mill pond by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority.

"We have to find an alternative in the next five years," he remarked, discussing the present dump site.

He observed the county launched a study but "produced no solutions."

The engineer noted the town could take the garbage to a transfer station or hire a contractor who would make the door-to-door stops then take the trash to the transfer site.

Picton's Parking Problem Divides Town Council

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Parking meters near Main Street's Town Hill swiftly are becoming "now you see 'em, now you don't" machines in Picton town council's efforts to eliminate traffic congestion.

Last fall, council's public works committee removed meters in front of stores near the top of the hill to create an extra traffic lane.

A delegation of Main St. East merchants came to council to protest elimination of the meters terming it a customer inconvenience. Shoppers, who patronized the stores, also commented on the loss of parking space.

Last month, Picton's new mayor Donald King, appointed a three-man committee to study the traffic and parking problem.

Its first recommendations included re-installation of two metered parking spaces on each side of Main St. East. Half-hour parking only will be permitted. Parking in the metered zone from the east limits of Bridge St. to the east limits of the parking meter zone will be prohibited from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. and from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. each day except Sundays and holidays.

The question of the re-appearing meters was brought to a recorded vote when councillor Norman March moved an amendment for deletion of this recommendation from the parking committee's report.

His amendment to adopt the report after deleting the recommendation was defeated in a close vote of four to three.

In support of the existing, no-meter system near the town hill were councillors Russell Alexander, Bessie Ward and Norman March. In favor of installing meters in this area again were councillors Charles Hepburn, Richard Byers, Harry Abram and deputy-reeve Larry Richardson.

"We had a lot of flack that people cannot stop here," deputy-reeve Richardson reminded council.

Councillor Alexander said the new metereless stysem had never been tried when summer traffic was at its peak.

Councillor March said both retired police chief George Pitt and new chief Charles Fletcher termed the removal of the meters one of council's best moves in years toward improving traffic flow.

"I cannot morally enforce something that hinders businessmen" stated Charles Hepburn, chairman of the parking committee as he spoke of no-stop areas near Main St. East stores.

The parking committee also recommended improvements to the Mary St. parking lot and suggested the traffic lights at the intersection of Ross and Main Streets should be placed at intermittent flasher from 9 p.m. to 8 a.m. The latter would be subject to approval by the ministry of transportation and communications.

Domtar, CGE Begin Plant Layoffs

TRENTON — By mid-week, 18 non-skilled and semi-skilled workers at Domtar Packaging Ltd. will be laid off in the wake of what company officials are calling a rapidly deteriorating demand for Domtar's cardboard paper.

A company spokesman said Monday the first of the 18 men was laid off at the first of the week. All will be out of work by Wednesday.

The number is an increase over the 15 first projected when company manager Frank MacKenzie announced the planned layoffs more than a week ago.

At present, said the spokesman, the layoff is indefinite and he "couldn't venture a guess" when the men will be recalled for full-time employment.

He said some of the 18 men may be called in to fill in for men on summer vacations. However, the practice will likely not start till mid-June.

The plant originally employed 130 workers.

In another Trenton plant, a layoff of 38 Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. employees came into effect Monday, reducing the plant's workforce to 200 from the normal 250.

A layoff of 14 employees had been previously announced by the company.

A company spokesman has blamed the layoffs on a two-week shutdown at each of four of the plant's major buyers. The company makes small electrical motors for sump pumps and household appliances.

Study Ordered For New Office

PICTON — Town council's finance committee will obtain cost figures for new town office headquarters and report to council's regular meeting in March.

Picton town clerk Andrew Jarvis announced a motion for the study during Monday's council session.

Bancroft Streets May Get Parking Meters

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Correspondent

BANCROFT — The dilemma of establishing a workable parking lot bylaw for the village of Bancroft claimed the attention of the local council for more than three hours Monday during the regular February meeting.

A new bylaw has been necessitated by the purchase of land for the creation of a new off-street parking lot on the east side of Hastings St. N. The parking lot was originated in the spring of 1973 when the village council purchased two pieces of property for the lot and a local merchants' group arranged for the purchase of a third piece.

The parking lot has been used by village residents and tourists since June of 1973 and no repayment has been made yet.

At the moment the village is committed to spend approximately $80,000 for the new lot and the council is faced with finding a method to recoup the expenditure.

If there is no alternative plan we'll have to go to meters," said village reeve Russell Hawley. "We're one of the few villages our size in Ontario that doesn't have meters on the commercial streets."

Originally, the council and the businessmen had hoped to assess each downtown business for the cost of the number of parking spaces that each was deficient. However, after discussion with the village solicitor it was decided that this method would probably be unmanageable.

After the lengthy discussion, council decided to call a meeting of area businessmen to be tentatively set for Feb. 20.

Cartier's General Store Last in Demorestville

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

DEMORESTVILLE — Once enjoying a population of over 1,700, the one-time bustling village of Demorestville with its array of factories, shops, taverns and hotels, now is only a memory. Over a century ago, according to reliable reports, there were as many as six general stores in operation. Now, only one remains.

Carter's General Store, owned and operated by Kenneth Carter and his wife, Phyllis, has been in the Carter family for 61 years. Mr. Carter recalls that his father first purchased the store in 1914.

Few renovations have been made, and the interior of the store still retains a country atmosphere.

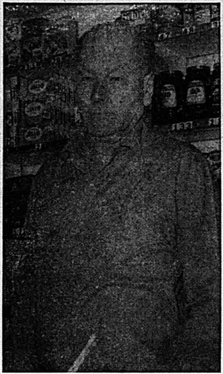
The store continues to enjoy the old country tradition of being a favorite rendezvous for village residents. Mr. Carter admits, however, that the store is not as much a gathering place as it was in former years. He attributes this to "a changing of the times", with television, stereo and radio keeping people entertained at home.

Mr. Carter enjoys reminiscing about the early days of a store keeper. He says that years ago there was very little meat, vegetables and milk sold as most people were able to procure these items from their farms.

"This has all changed", commented Mr. Carter. "No one today has time to go out and milk a cow before going to work."

Despite inflation, Mr. Carter observes that people today seem to ignore prices. "They don't even look at the price any more. If they want it, they buy it!"

The general store, which is open six days a week from early morning until late evening, and two hours every Sunday, leaves little time for the Carters to take a holiday.



Surviving the Times

There was a time when six corner stores were peppered throughout Demorestville. Now Carter's General Store is the last of the breed. The store has been in the Carter family for 61 years.

Olympic Image

A moment out from contemplating whether the Olympics go off as planned in Montreal next year — doubtless they will, against wind and tide and against labor's intransigence — to consider some of the aesthetics of such an event.

Uniforms for instance, considering the marvellous parade that opens the games, the young men and the women from many lands dressed supposedly in the best their respective country's designers can come up with.

Canada's athletes last time around in red and white with a maple leaf motif.

And what impact did that have?

The word is "vulgar." Yes, the Canadians, British athlete Chris Brasher says in his book Munich 72, seem to have a weakness for what he terms vulgarity of sartorial taste.

There's more, but that is the essence of his comment. It's all there in black and white, although it was the colors and the motif that seem to have hurt poor old Brasher's eyes, leaving him with a bad case of myopia or something.

Yet if that were his reaction in Munich and in other places where Canada has performed, there is no harm in taking note — once we have finished seeing red, that is, and gnashing our teeth.

Color is all very fine, but maybe there is something in the whole effect that needs toning down, or dispensed with in favor of another color, design or whatever. Like the Mountie uniform that for so long the Miss Dominion of Canada representative was obliged to wear. It suited neither the young lady nor the country in that particular circumstance. The same premise may apply in the case of the uniforms our athletes have been wearing. It is the kind of criticism too which should be avoided if possible on home ground next year.

Focus on Royalty

The motives of William Hamilton, the Scots MP and anti-monarchist in finally getting it all together in a book called "My Queen and I" are, by his own hand, perfectly clear.

He says in the book that it is "my last ambition to be incarcerated in the Tower of London like anti-monarchists of earlier ages."

The man is on an ego trip, like many another of one-track mind and rebellious nature.

Mr. Hamilton has the look of a comic and it may be this is his way of letting it all hang out, as they say. Some of what he says may raise a chuckle but many will regard his effort as cheap and opinionated.

As when he takes a crack at the Queen's "impeccable, genteel English accent" appealing perhaps to English aristocrats and class-conscious Britons, "but not rugged Canadians of mid-European extraction."

The Queen has been warmly received by Canadians of many backgrounds, and Mr. Hamilton's gratuitous words are unlikely to cut much ice among those same "rugged Canadians."

In any event we are not sure that an accent can be impeccable and genteel at the same time. Impeccable yes, but genteel, which suggests an element of affectation, hardly.

If Mr. Hamilton makes it to the Tower, perhaps they will provide him with a copy of the Oxford dictionary, to while away the lonely hours.

Where the British are concerned, Mr. Hamilton is good for a laugh in the midst of uncertain times — remembering, incidentally, that the Royal family is one of those few elements of stability where all else seems to be faltering.

Mine to Reopen

News that the Faraday uranium mine in Bancroft will be reopening this spring is of particular significance to the economy of this area. It is also an indication of the enormous overall potential in this country which, properly exploited and managed, is one of the prime hedges against recessionary influences. It means jobs and mention has been made of an available market in Italy. There is some concern about the strain the enterprise may impose on local services, and this is something that will have to be tackled along the way. By and large though this is good news for Bancroft and North Hastings.

British Leader Talks Big

Aid for Ottawa and Advice for U.S. from Harold Wilson

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

It's sad to watch British Prime Minister Harold Wilson offering to mediate for Canada in our search for growing trade with the European Common Market.

It's even sadder to hear him pontificate in Washington about the new initiatives and concepts needed to solve international economic problems when the Britain which he rules is an economic shambles and getting worse, due in part to reactionary socialist policies.

Put this together with the fact his own government is pledged to a national referendum whether Britain should stay in the European Common Market or not, and we can see Harold Wilson is far out-of-line in offering Canada any assistance.

The mess of Labor government back home is one which has plagued the British since the end of the Second World War when the Attlee Laborite regime defeated the Churchill wartime coalition government, mainly through massive and continuous nationalization of industry.

Under successive Labor governments and those Tory ones which maintained the nationalized companies, firms placed under public control have shown horrendous deficits and have lost the British hundreds of millions of pounds.

The Wilson government recently took over the British shipbuilding industry. This is a move which can only be retrogressive, given the fact shipbuilding's main crises in Britain have been trade unions engaged in historic feather-bedding and management slow to compete with foreign technological change in the shipyards.

We listen to any advice at all from the British socialist leader at our peril.

Moreover his own record of blowing personally hot and cold on Britain in Europe is less than savory, from enthusiast for it in the mid-1960s to bitter critic especially because his arch-political enemy, Ted Heath, as Conservative prime minister, was moving Britain into the European Common Market.

His reasons appear to have been very personal relating to his long feud with Ted Heath, who himself was determined to take Britain into Europe after the late president Charles de Gaulle rebuffed him and former Tory prime minister Harold Macmillan in 1963.

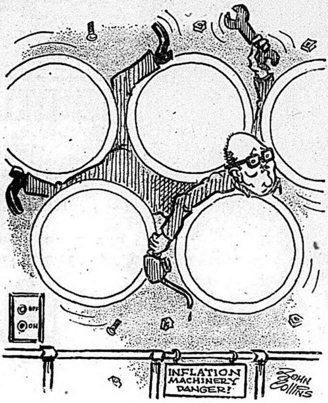
In addition, Mr. Wilson makes this kind of offer to Canada from a Labor party which is seriously split over Britain staying in the European Common Market.

In fact, the British have great and growing reservations about their place in Europe. Value-added taxes and reduced tariff barriers on highly competitive European consumer goods in Britain, have done much to push British cost-of-living above 20 per cent.

Growing British opposition to the rising consumer costs resulting from their country in Europe are entirely justified.

If the British economy itself were better managed, the cold shock of entering Europe would not have been as bad. In a country where a gallon of gasoline is creeping toward the $2 mark and the tax burden is very heavy indeed, the extra burden of paying more for British goods in competition with European ones, is a hard one for many British consumers to bear.

Given all this, it would seem Canadian exporters will seek ECM markets where they can, not counting too much on major growth in Canada-UK trade, and not at all on any kind of help from Mr. Wilson on assisting us with Common Market business.



Modern Times

Ontario Lottery

Money Leaving Country Should Now Remain at Home

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The Irish came first. Then New York and a couple of other states. Next Quebec. Then the western provinces. And now Ontario is trailing along.

We are to have our own lottery. One of our very own.

Just when it will be and other details aren't known yet.

But we are going to have it and soon.

For this we have the word, as announced in the house, of new Minister of Culture and Recreation Bob Welch.

There will be those who will say about time.

For years now we have been watching millions of dollars going overseas to the Irish Hospital Sweepstake.

Not so much went to other lotteries until Loterie Olympique Canada came along. But it has been estimated that Ontarioans were buying at least $20 million worth of tickets for each of these draws.

It became very logical that Ontario should get in on this bonanza.

And so now we are going to do it.

Aside from such crass facts that some $40 million or so a year is expected to be moved into recreational and cultural development as a consequence of this mass gamble there are a couple of other points worth noting.

One is the changing mores of the province.

Only a few years ago an Ontario government wouldn't have dared to have a mass lottery. It would have been afraid of current opinion.

But hardly a word of protest, if any, is being heard about this new venture.

For this we probably have to thank the Irish with an assist from Jean Drapeau.

A second point is that the government has come up with a strategem to counter objections from those who have been conducting smaller lotteries throughout the province.

It will give these organizations the opportunity to sell tickets for the big bonanza and thereby make money for their projects.

Fear of these smaller groups was actually the main obstacle in front of a government lottery. Now the feeling is this may be licked.

Religion on Upswing in U.S.

The Christian Science Monitor

To readers of last week's Gallup poll results on the growing influence of religion in America, the following words may sound like an oratorical flourish from the 19th-century America in which Wendell Phillips declaimed them:

"One on God's side is a majority!"

But, the idea of the words still speaks to Americans — and others — who realize that a nation's religious strength does not depend so much on the number of believers, as on their faithfulness to their beliefs.

The question is whether the quality of religious thought and convictions are rising in the United States along with the poll figures on those who think "religion as a whole is increasing its influence on American life.

After a steep decline during the '60s, the proportion has grown from 14 percent in 1970 to 31 percent in 1974. The largest gain was among young adults, from 14 percent to 37 percent.

The same period has seen a widely publicized rise in unorthodox religious groups, some of them sincerely searching some of them worshipping false gods indeed. The net effect on "religion as a whole" is not yet known.

Certainly the established denominations' re-examination of the primacy of individual regeneration in meeting society's problems has been valuable. The recent national awakening to the necessity of individual integrity in exercising governmental power has shown the influence of essentially religious principles — whether so designated or not.

Looking Backward

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

50 YEARS AGO

February 4, 1925.

From two to three hundred licences for making home brew are in force in Belleville, the Customs and Inland Revenue Department advised today. It is believed there are also some home brewers who have failed to take out licences.

Representatives of Ontario ridings from Northumberland to Leeds met today at the YMCA to arrange for meetings next week in every provincial riding in the interests of the Ontario Temperance Act and prohibition.

George Richards of Stirling made an heroic effort to stop his team of horses running away last night and when thrown from his sleigh held on to the reins from the upper bridge to the vicinity of the Crystal Hotel. He was dragged all the way in the snow, uninjured and released the lines only when he saw the futility of trying to stop the horses.

40 YEARS AGO

February 4, 1935.

Belleville Cheese Board members on Saturday went on record as favoring the immediate formation of an Association of United Cheese Boards of Ontario. It is hoped that combined action on necessary legislation for the good of the industry will be thus achieved.

Five hundred and two members were obtained by the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Concert Association in last week's campaign to complete the subscription lists to bring possibly three programs to Belleville this winter.

The Intelligencer:

I was pleasantly surprised to read that Belleville's self appointed financial watchdog has started to bark.

In serving notice of motion that he will propose a citizen's committee to review all civic service remunerations Alderman Corke said "I still say the average alderman is getting paid about $3 an hour — which is not acceptable in this day and age for people." Hear, hear Alderman Corke — I fully agree.

Good show, Alderman Corke, but don't stop at the aldermen — after all the hours they put in stem from the number of committees they really don't have to sit on. Real citizen participation would relieve them of this chore.

Market Refuses to Play Dead As Stocks Bounce Back in '75

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

By its performance last month, the stock market seems to be saying that reports of its death are greatly exaggerated.

January's sharp rise in stock prices, accompanied by heavy trading volume, shows that the market still has the capacity to respond to good news as well as bad.

But anyone seeking a definitive reason for the recovery is likely to end up befuddled by the variety of theories. Here are some of them:

—Some economists say that most economic indicators point to the end of the business slump, possibly to be followed by a pick-up later in 1975.

In their view, the stock market is fulfilling its classic role in foreshadowing business conditions as they may exist six to nine months in the future.

—Other analysts believe that the level of interest rates is the key factor, because businesses can borrow and spend more freely (thus increasing their earning power) when money is cheap, but must curtail their operations when borrowing costs are as high as they were in late 1974.

"There's absolutely nothing like falling interest rates to stimulate a stock market," says Robert C. Stone of McEwen Securities Ltd. of Toronto.

The fall in interest rates was emphasized by the action of the chartered banks in introducing successive cuts in their prime lending rates—the latest being a full percentage point reduction to 9.5 per cent effective Feb. 1 at certain banks.

—Still other observers give all the credit to that stock-market leader, International Business Machines, which won its appeal against a year-old conviction in a civil anti-trust suit in the U.S. courts.

Shares of IBM had fallen 32 per cent in market value since the anti-trust suit was launched, and their decline had had a ripple effect that helped to depress the entire market.

—Then there are the chartists who dismiss all such developments as irrelevant, and argue instead that stock-market trends go in pre-ordained cycles.

One widely accepted interpretation of the cycle theory is that the market has completed its downward leg and is entering a two-year uptrend. (After that, look out).

—The typical investor recognized that good stocks were cheap in historical terms, and was waiing for convincing evidence of a stock-market turnaround. When that came, investors were ready to buy; figures show that personal savings in Canadian banks are unusually high.

Now that the turn-around seems to have been established, it would be unrealistic to anticipate an uninterrupted advance in stock prices.

One view is that the market is by no means out of trouble yet. If the U.S. Congress defeats President Gerald Ford's tax-cut proposals, confidence could vanish.

And it remains to be seen whether Canadian and U.S. business will respond to lower interest rates by expanding their activities, or whether the threat of recession will dictate a course of caution.

Written Word Taking a Beating

Ottawa Journal

There are enough weak-minded dictionary-makers in the English-speaking world to ensure that every war against every abomination of the language will eventually be lost. Thus, "presently" becomes mistaken for "currently", injuries are "sustained" instead of merely received and every suffix known to man enjoys open season on every noun.

But is it possible that this one, found in a recent newspaper column about tax credits, could survive and gain respectability? "To determine the total tax credity, the claimant must add the credits for which he is eligible and then deduct...'

That's right, credity. Perhaps it is a misconceived twin for "liability" in which case it should have died before birth. While the difference between credity and a plain old credit defies understanding, who is to say that credity some day won't be used to describe someone with more than the usual level of achievement, as in "He was a credity to his race."

That can anyone say, except that credity not only lacks creativism but adds up to a debity.

M.O. is in Doghouse for Warning Visitors Away from 'Flu Outbreak

Brantford Expositor

There is a topic for widespread debate in the news that the medical officer of Florida's Pinellas County, which includes St. Petersburg, is under attack by tourism officials and operators for having warned intending visitors to stay away during a flu epidemic that has taken 30 lives.

His critics claim that he should have kept silent to avoid harming tourist revenue at the height of the winter season.

A parallel is the typhoid epidemic in the Swiss ski resort of Zermatt a few years ago when a sewage line break contaminated the drinking water supply. The authorities hushed it up, some visitors died and hundreds of others went home to various countries, one to Brantford, unaware that they might be germ carriers.

Such situations are not new. Nearly 100 years ago Norway's Henrik Ibsen wrote a play, An Enemy of the People, about a doctor in a small resort town who found that the drinking water was being polluted by effluents from a tannery. The title indicates how his call for honesty was received.

This excellent play, so apt to current campaigns against environmental pollution, might be considered by Brantford Drama League, or one of our high school drama groups, for production next season.

Ottawa's Doubletalk on Inflation

Editor,
Intelligencer:

The taxpaying people of Canada, as well as all other citizens feeling the cross fire of inflationary crisis penetrating every age group in all walks of life — have a fundamental right in expecting leadership and example from their government and parliamentarians.

Just a few short months ago, most members of the House of Commons were running for re-election, from what was then one of the shortest lived parliaments in Canadian history (1973 - 74) Manifest in the governments cry was 'give us a strong majority government and we will give you strong leadership, unfettered by compromising and delaying opposition tactics'. Robt. Stanfield, as leader of the PC. party, dramatized inflation as Public Enemy No. One, and heralded a campaign on "Wage and Price Controls".

Among the first business of the newly-elected majority Government, was the announcement in Parliament by Finance Minister John Turner: "Wage and Price Restraints Are Urged", in fact he went on to say the first stage involves talks with leaders of labor and business, to find out what they would accept as 'reasonable attempts to hold down wages and prices — this should be done by February, he said.

But Christmas was coming, and the Government could not wait for February. They hauled in Santa Claus, and in the spirit of good old St. Nicholas with most members agreeing — decided to award themselves a 50 per cent increase in their annual remunerations, plus a 50 per cent hike in their tax free allowance with the further provision that such exorbitant increases be made retroactive to last July's election.

Now can anyone really remember that far back, one candidate, specially campaigning for re-election, uttering a word about how underpaid he was and that among his qualifications to stem the tidal wave of inflation would be a first priority to enlarge his largesse at the taxpayers expense? Your correspondent can't, and am sure 22 million other Canadians don't either.

In recent years the youth of the Nation have been blamed for a lot of things. The perpetration of this untimely money grab by Parliament is certainly not to be laid to their door. For Prime Minister Trudeau is not a young man, even if he boasts a young wife, Stanfield and Sharp are above the half century mark in age, if not in wisdom and judgement.

But one man, the youngest of all members of the opposition Conservative Party — apparently recognized not only the direct cost to the Federal Treasury involved — but also the far reaching consequences in unleashing further the flood gates of inflation to all sectors of the economy of the nation — showed the courage and conviction to dare to break rank and call out against the big hike, Sean O'Sullivan MP for Hamilton-Wentworth — re-elected to Parliament at the youthful age of 22—spoke for his constituents and all concerned Canadians from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Here at last appears a bright hope for Canada's future.

Once before, in parliamentary history, a young man rose to become Prime Minister of Britain, that was in 1783, he was the younger Wm. Pitt (not quite 25) when he took the reigns of Government in difficult times, and gave the people of England beneficial leadership for some 17 years.

Perhaps there is yet time, that we in this great country of ours may learn to earn the bountifulness of our natural blessed wealth, with spirited unselfish leadership in the right direction.

Church Union Meeting Called

TORONTO CP —Anglicans and United Churchmen meet again this week in still another attempt to reconcile differences on doctrine and practice that for 32 years have blocked formation of one huge Protestant church for Canada.

Also participating, though somewhat impatiently on the sidelines, is a small denomination with a few lingering doubts but willing to accept almost anything the two giants can agree upon that would bring about a new manifestation of the Christian church.

Out of the week-long, high-level discussions almost certainly will come a recommendation that will push farther into the future — by at least [illegible] — an organic union of three churches embracing, if there is no breakaway, about 3.7 million members.

Meeting, first in separate sessions and then in a joint session Thursday are the national executives of the Anglican Church of Canada, the United Church of Canada and the Christian Church Disciples of Christ.

To be discussed are proposed revisions to the plan of union accepted in November, 1972, by all three churches as a basis for study. If all hurdles, including national referenda of memberships, were surmounted, this would set up the Church of Christ in Canada, taking in an estimated 1.5 million Anglicans, 2.2 million United Churchmen and 7,000 Disciples.

Many Anglicans and some United Churchmen have reservations about the plan; reservations so strong that a new time-table for acceptance or rejection has been drawn up by the committee on union and joint mission on which all three churches are represented.

The committee's recommendation, Executive Secretary Rev. Robert Craig said in an interview Sunday, "is to push the timetable forward two years to revise the plan of union, study it for 18 months to deal with it in 1979 and to ask the churches to re-commit themselves to, the ongoing netotiations."

Those negotiations opened in 1943 at the instigation of the Anglican Church which later had second thoughts, said Dr. Craig, although "the talks have never gone backward; they slowed down from time to time."

Out of the discussions came in 1965 the principles of union in which it was said by the Anglican and United churches that they had achieved unanimous agreement in all the essentials of Christian faith.

The general commission on church union, formed in 1967, took five years to produce plan of union Draft I which was succeeded by plan of union in 1972. This was a proposed statement of faith, an outline of liturgical principles, a statement on government of the proposed new church and the polity of the church and the ministry.

The Christian Church, which joined the talks in 1969, and the United Church accepted the idea of an episcopate with the national church to be headed by a president and two vice-presidents.

Basis in the plan, said Dr. Craig, is that each congregation will be permitted to "do its own thing" until, in time, all differences would be swept away.

The United Church, formed in 1925 of a union of the Methodist Church, most of the Congregational Church and part of the Presbyterian Church, is accustomed to union and views itself as a united and a uniting church. It is governed by a general council.

A congregational denomination, the Christian Church had its beginnings in Kentucky in the early 1800s. The Canadian church seeks full organic union and, said Dr. Craig, if talks between the two major churches collapse, probably would not seek a simple merger with the United Church.

Its Canadian head is Rev. Robert K. Leland of Guelph, Ont.

Many United Churchmen don't like the idea, among other points of disagreement with Anglicans, of having bishops. Vocal is Rev. William Morris of Centennial United Church, Toronto, who has said he will start his own church if union goes through.

Breaking Down Barriers: Effective Help for Alcoholics

Spadina Project

Dr. Martha Sanchez-Craig (right) heads Spadina Project, a rehabilitative halfway house for both male and female alcoholics in Toronto. Since the halfway house opened a few months ago, the doctor and her staff have noticed that the two sexes enjoy each other's company and this experiment could well be the turning point in dealing with alcoholics in a home-like atmosphere. (CP Photo)

TORONTO (CP) — Instead of segregating men and women alcoholics during rehabilitation, the Ontario Alcoholism and Drug Research Foundation is treating them together at a halfway house here.

Dr. Martha Sanchez-Craig, who heads the program entitled the Spadina Project, said it is not normal for men and women to be separated and this experiment could well be the turning point in dealing with alcoholics effectively in a home-like atmosphere.

"How often are males and females segregated today?" she asked. "They work together, spend their leisure time with one another. We have an idea that bringing them under one roof would break down the old idea that alcoholism is a man's domain. In simpler terms, it makes the treatment acceptable to both men and women."

Since the halfway house opened a few months ago, the doctor and her staff have noticed that the two sexes enjoy each other's companionship.

"At first there was a certain degree of shyness on the part of both the men and women. But so far there has been no disruption. On the contrary, with women around, the men's grooming has improved and their manners seem to have become more polished," she said.

The project doesn't provide individual counselling or therapy. Instead, the staff aims to teach residents problem-solving strategies they can apply to problems.

"Such strategies are designed to teach a resident new ways of coping with inter-personal situations that are constant problems to the alcoholic," said Dr. Sanchez-Craig.

These might be described as a failure by the alcoholic to form positive, active relationships with other people.

Staff therapists show residents how to analyse the way in which they deal with a problem or with other individuals, and then suggest alternative and more positive approaches.

Dr. Sanchez-Craig hesitated at referring to residents as skid road cases, but the description comes distressingly close.

"For women who come here, there has been a series of losses. For some it's been the loss of family, a lover, or a good job. From that, she's been caught up in a series of emotional and economic disasters so that the street or hostel becomes her home, her life," she said.

The alcoholic is interviewed and is told about the policies and programs of the house.

"We suggest that he or she go home or wherever and think it over seriously before committing themselves. By the time alcoholics get here, they have lost so much, including their jobs," said the doctor.

"But most important, they have lost the ability to cope with problems of daily living. In the residence, we hope to turn that tide," she said.

BILLY

As soon as you see Billy you know he's a happy boy.

That smile is typical, for Billy is almost always cheerful.

Anglo-Saxon in descent, 3-year-old Billy is a healthy little fellow with dark eyes, blonde curly hair and fair skin. He has had two operations to correct turned in eyes. They still turn a bit but are gradually improving.

Billy's development has been slow and he is considerably behind the average for his age. He has just started to walk and he'd still rather crawl. He is very vocal but only a few words of his chatter are understandable.

Billy is an easy, lovable child in his foster home. He loves the attention he gets from several teenager in the family as well as from his foster parents.

Though a cuddly boy he's not a demanding one. As long as he can see the family activity in the same room or watch people through the window Billy is happy.

He loves to go for a drive.

Billy has a good appetite and feeds himself, using his left hand. He sleeps soundly all night.

He will concentrate for surprisingly long periods on a toy if it has wheels.

Billy needs a family who will appreciate his cheerful disposition and not worry over his slow development.

To inquire about adopting Billy, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2.

Vienna Tailors a Vanishing Breed

VIENNA (AP) — Tailors are a vanishing breed in Vienna, where archdukes and other nobility were once counted among the best-dressed of the world.

Only a generation ago suits and dresses were worn for years and in many cases were handed down to sons and daughters.

Aduard Kastner, chairman of Vienna's dwindling tailors' guild, said that in today's throw-it-away society suits and dresses are worn for a fairly short time, partly for reasons of fashion.

Ready-made clothes are the answer to this trend.

Kastner said only 18 boys in Vienna out of a population of 1.7 million have started as tailors' apprentices in the last three years.

The number of tailor shops has also declined drastically. Vienna had 16,922 such shops in 1925, but only 3,949 in 1963 and only 1,712 a year ago.

The young especially like to shop in large department stores. Ready-made clothes can be altered to fit reasonably well in a short time while a tailor needs about 35 hours to make an overcoat.

Reflecting the changing times, young boys clamor for apprenticeships as car mechanics.

"This is a trend which has been going on for quite a few years," said Dr. Hedwig Weihs of the District Employment Service.

Forty-seven per cent of the boys taking up apprenticeship go into the metal-working branch. Retail trade apprenticeships are second on the list of preferred jobs, but here only 11 per cent applied.

Another trend is toward white-collar jobs.

An employee in Austria can be either a white-collar worker, a skilled worker or a laborer. Skilled workers and laborers often make more money than white-collar workers but tend to feel inferior.

As a result, a number of firms offer white-collar status to workers in order to fill vacancies. In some cases it may mean social advantages such as longer holidays or more sick benefits, despite the fact that strong unions often more than compensate for this, giving workers a better income.

Of 862 persons polled in a survey, 86 per cent thought a skilled worker had more trade experience and quicker wits, but 71 per cent also said a clerical employee had more prestige, and 93 per cent thought he had the softer job.

Children Make Life Joyless

Dear Doris: When I read your answer to Divorcee With Children, I felt they ought to spare that divorcee what I went through when I met a man with untrained children. This can bring her tears and a hell-like existence, and could make life miserable for her own trained children.

The man's flimsy promises to train his children after they are married are just hot air. If he has failed so far he will fail afterworads; and if he should try to, his children will only rebel, saying, "It's that new women he brought in" — and thus brew hate and trouble. I m going through this so I know.

I have tried to show them love but they only tear up the turf more. If I praise them for things well done they refuse to do a good job the next time. If I tell them somethings looks good on them they refuse to wear it. When I told the girls their hairdo was lovely they immediately went and washed and combed it out — the price of the professional hairdo being lost.

I am ashamed that I was fooled by such a marriage. I still love my husband for the same fine qualities I saw in him before, but the rebellious response from the family can drive joy out. It can almost drive you to hate the one you love.

Heartaches.

Dear Heartaches: So there it is. I hope Divorcee With Children is reading this. We have often said you don't marry a man to reform him; neither do you marry him and his family with the thought of reforming the whole kaboodle. If you are determined to try, you should seek the help of the best child behaviorist you know — probably a social worker in your local child care agency.

Dear Doris: Please would you send me, too, a list of several Canadian and U.S. publishers who may provide a market for illustrated rhymes and poems for children?

Jean.

Dear Jean: I am sending the names of books listing Canadian and American publishers and their requirements.

Incidentally, if you want to make a good impression on editors, don't send anything written on the back of a torn envelope, like this note of yours to me. Paper may be scarece, but writing stories on one side of a clean sheet of paper still has not gone out of style!

Confidential to Boys Anonymous: You need more confidence in order to over come your fear of dances. You don't need lessons in order to do modern dances. You just need the self-confidence to get out on the floor and swing with the music. Try it — you'll like it! Practically everyone else on the floor learned to dance by the same method.

Draws for Book

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Jane Faulkner, wife of Hugh Faulkner, secretary of state, is working on a book of caricatures for a political history of Canada. Her last book, The House on the Hill, published in 1972, featured caricatures of contemporary politicians which she drew herself.

Rape Victims Silent; Crime Not Reported

WINNIPEG (CP) — Most rape victims don't tell anyone about their attack but tend to bottle up their feelings of outrage, Winnipeg psychologist Jean Chatterson said Friday.

She said a typical victim simply goes home, takes a bath and cries alone.

Later, when the victim realizes she needs counselling, she may turn to the police, Ms. Chatterson said, but probably only 10 per cent of the rapes that occur in Canada are reported to police.

Ms. Chatterson, who works at Klinic, a rape crisis centre in Winnipeg, said rape is "probably one of the most traumatic events that happen in a woman's life."

"Most of the clients I have had thought that they would die," Ms. Chatterson told a group discussion on rape legislation at the second annual conference on Women and the Law.

She said the Winnipeg centre gets three or four rape victims a month. None of the victims had previously reported their attack to police, she said, and none wanted to go to the police.

Some of the victims had been raped in their own home and their feeling of shock was greater as a result. The youngest victim was 12 years old. Invariably, the victims become more fearful of men.

When Ms. Chatterson asked how many of the estimated 75 women present had been raped or nearly raped, about 10 raised their hands.

Jeff Ginden, a Winnipeg defence lawyer, said while the rape victim testifying at a trial feels pressure and embarrassment, a more important consideration is that justice be done.

The meeting said in a resolution that defence counsel should not be allowed to inquire into the moral integrity of rape complainants, and the news media should not publish names of victims.

The group, comprised mostly of women, backed Justice Minister Otto Lang's proposal that greater use be made of Criminal Code provisions on changing the site of rape trials, to protect the victim.

It also supported Mr. Lang's proposals on excluding the public from preliminary hearings and from the trial, or from some portions of the trial, so women won't face the trauma of testifying in public.

Mr. Lang said four months ago he is considering a move to ensure that a woman can testify and be cross-examined in private.

The meeting also said police departments should allow a rape victim to have a person of her own choice present at a police interview, and should promptly contact a social agency dealing with rape.

Blame Rice Cakes

TOKYO (AP) — Large sticky rice cakes—a traditional Japanese New Year's delicacy—were blamed for the deaths of 14 persons by suffocation. Police said the cakes served in a soup with vegetables and chicken lodged in victims' throats.

Ann Landers

These Girls Infuriate Boys

Dear Ann Landers: You'll be hearing plenty about that letter from the 18-year-old "fun-loving" virgin who is so proud of herself for keeping "everything intact." It seems her boy friend wants her to give in, but she is determined to take her virginity to the marriage bed. I quote: "I've already told him that if the torture gets too much, he can shove off. Bu he still sticks like flypaper."

In high school we called those types "Professional Virgins." They drove guys crazy, flirting and teasing. They went just as far as they could without crossing the line—with no regard whatever for the agony and frustration of the poor fellow who was expected to "cool it" on demand.

Girls who behave that way are extremely selfish. Moreover, they usually hate men and use their bodies to punish them. If I were in that dude's place I'd shove off. No girl is better than a tease.—In The Know

Dear In: You are right about the mail. I heard plenty about "the tease" and most of the letters came from high school and college students (males) who called her names the papers wouldn't print. Thanks for your letter. It was the best of the bunch.

Der Ann Landers: Re your column about purse-snatchers: After having had mine snatched four times, I decided the best way to avoid a fifth such occurrence was not to carry one.

My keys, change, and a few dollar bills go into one pocket, my lipstick and compact and hankie go into another. My credit cards I leave home unless I intend to go shopping, then I put the two or three I might need in my shoe.

I haven't been robbed since and I feel a lot safer. These days a junkie would just as soon kill you for your pocketbook as look at you. It's amazing how much stuff women carry in their purses that they really don't need. Sign me—Fearless and Happier

Dear F and H: I agree. Just for the fun of it, ladies, look inside your purse right now and you'll discover the writer is correct. Too many of us are slaves to habit. The habit of carrying a purse can be broken if a woman puts her mind to it.

Dear Ann Landers: There is this neat girl I've known for quite a while. She is cool, with it, and has lots of friends. Everyone enjoys having her around. She's the kind your mother would love. The problem:

Her grammar is something you have to hear to believe. This chick is a high school sophomore yet she says things like, "Me and him went skating," or, "We was walking arm in arm." This afternoon she was showing me two poems she had written and asked if I would tell her "which is worser?"

Is there any hope for this girl? What can be done to get her to speak decent English? How did she get to be a high school sophomore when she couldn't pass a fourth-grade English grammar test? Please answer these questions. I'd like to help her.—Embarrassed Friend

Dear Friend: I'd like an answer to that last question myself. I receive letters every day from high school students whose grammar (and spelling) is out of this world.

The only solution for your friend is to get private tutoring, work like a dog, and keep at it until she is able to overcome her deeply ingrained speech habits. I hope she is willing to do it because if she isn't she is destined to go through life sounding like an ignoramus.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

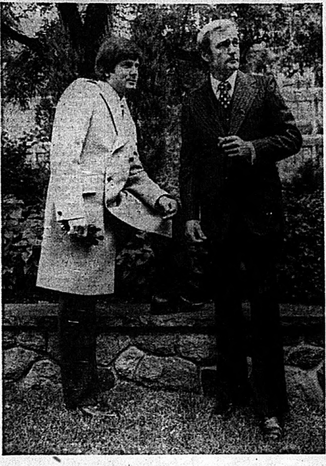
The Peacock Period in Men's Fashions is Over

TORONTO (CP) — Men's fashions have gradually been returning to the classic look since the "Peacock" period a few years ago, and the traditonal look will once again prevail.

Jack Ritchie, president of the Men's Clothing Manufacturers' Association of Ontario, says the three-piece suit will be popular, with matching or contrasting vest. "Soft flannels take to pin and chalk stripes and tweeds come in bold checks."

The association feels there are only two basic kinds of fashion: high fashion garments made for men who can wear them, and the more traditional conservative look for men who do not feel or look right in very wide lapels, the long vent or the long vest.

The association, comprising 12 manufacturers in the Toronto - Hamilton area, was founded in 1919, originally to conduct labor negotiations. However, its main function now is working for the betterment of fine tailoring and conducting seminars across Canada.



The Classic Look

Vested Interest

A navy polyester-and-wool vest adds interest to this one-button suit in blue Donegal twist wool from the Fall collection of the Men's Clothing Manufacturers Association of Ontario. Men's fashions will be more traditional this year, in contrast to the "Peacock" period of a few years ago.

Trench Style

Vests Are In

Abortion Law Changes 'Risky'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve says she has great misgivings about an easing of Canadian laws on abortion.

Changing the abortion laws would affect "the most intimate aspects of our civilizaton," Mrs. Sauve told the Canadian Conference on Women and the Law on Saturday nght. "To qualify any such change as a step forward, or backward, is a risky proposition."

The federal minister said any law that legislators might draft now would only be permissive and unsatisfactory, because the legislators don't know just when in pregnancy a foetus becomes a human person.

Mrs. Sauve said a legislator in a democratic society is not a referee. The legislator's prime role is to protect individual rights, to ensure social peace and to promote progress in the community.

Some people in the audience registered disagreement with parts of Mrs. Sauve's speech, hissing when the minister argued there is a moral parallel between permissive abortion laws and euthanasia.

The convention earlier endorsed by a wide margin the removal of abortion laws from the Criminal Code, reaffirming a stand taken at the group's first annual convention last year in Windsor, Ont.

The conference, which drew about 600 participants, most of them women, wns highly critical of abortion laws and passed a resolution calling for the resignation of justice minster Otto Lang.

Mrs. Sauve told the banquet audience it appears the studies done on various aspects of the legal abortion issue have only left opponents and proponents farther apart.

Whether the approach is "medical, psychological, sociological, demographic or religious, none by itself seems to offer sufficent basis for settling the question to the satisfaction of all.

"It is not the legislator's role to take sides for or against abortion, and even less to formulate a law that would justify one side as against the other.

"His precise responsibility is to enable people who do not share the same views to live according to their convictions and consciences while respecting the freedom of others."

At the conclusion of the three-day conference Sunday, a permanent organization was established to work to improve the status of women in Canada, and specifically those working in the field of law.

Dr. Lynn MacDonald, a Toronto sociologist, told delegates that while pay disparities are costing Canadian women thousands of dollars a year employers don't rectify the situation unless they are forced.

"It would be expensive to pay women what they are worth," she said. "It's a question of power."

Dr. MacDonald produced a table of statistics showing the average annual income for full and part-time workers in Canada in 1973 was estimated at $8,310 for males and $3,591 for females.

By comparison, the average 1965 earnings were $4,551 for males and $1,857 for females. The differential between the sexes, which a decade ago was $2,694, by 1973 had reached $4,719.

First Big Date

Dan Gerber brought roses, a heart-shaped box of chocolates—and six dozen egsg.

His date, Sandy Allen, who is seven-foot-five, said she was flattered.

The eggs were a practical gift, Dan said, because he lives on a 350-acre Flora, Ill., farm where his family raises hogs, cattle and chickens.

The date included lunch at a Shelbyville restaurant, bowling, shopping downtown in the city of 15,000 and dinner at a restaurant in Indianapolis, about 25 miles northwest of here.

They were a striking couple, she at "seven-five going on seven-six," and he "just" seven-two.

The date came about when Dan read a newspaper article about Miss Allen and was encouraged by friends to ask her out.

Dan's sister, Judy Bryan, on Saturday drove him the 200 miles to Miss Allen's home in the family truck because "my legs get cramped when I have to drive myself for over 50 miles," he explained.

Evaluating the success of the date, Sandy, 19, said: "I think two people over seven feet tall can have a normal date if they can put their minds to it. I'm having a good time despite all the fuss."

Gerber, 22, said he would like to go out with Miss Allen again if it can be arranged. "The difficulty for both of us is travelling," he said. "She doesn't drive, and I can't drive long distances."

Fantasy Leaves Fashion

PARIS (AP) — The Paris designers in their spring couture collections have thrown out the fantasy, feathers and huge shapes borrowed from ready-to-wear. The clothes are in general elegant, proper and in some cases on the matronly side.

The exception is Yves Saint Laurent, who always manages to revive some off-beat classic like the peajacket or Cossack pants and convince his customers they should spend a fortune on it.

This time, Yves has rediscovered the tee-shirt with a vengeance His are in striped silk jersey.

Several designers have revived the sailor look. Jean-Louis Scherrer even shows nautical caps. Dior has a good-looking sailor suit.

In general, however, the clothes remind you of nothing special.

Emmanuel Ungaro probably has shown the most prophetic collection of all. Viewers regarded it with mixed emotions, but the clothes are bound to catch on.

Clothes this year seem to be shrinking. The pencil is the newest silhouette, even though most women are not shaped like pencils.

Reminders of the late 1950s and early 1960s are appearing, the real couture look represented by tidy pastel shantung suits and sleevless dresses with waistlines and straight skirts.

Prints are over-all only, never in splotches. The favorite is pastel flowers all running together. Dior features a spectacular dotted impressionist print. Dresses all come with matching triangular shawls or capelets.

Without any doubt, the most important element of selling a home is placing the right value on it. When you get right down to it, it's the price, more than anything else, which will dictate how fast (or slow); how profitably (or unprofitably) it will sell.

What is the best selling price? National experience has proven conclusively that if your property is priced at inception within 5% above fair market value range, the chance of making a clean, top dollar sale during the early stages is TEN TIMES greater than otherwise.

Buyers buy by comparison. Properties not competing favorably do not sell. Overpricing at inception causes properties to become shopworn; valuable time and buyers are lost forever. Ultimately, all properties sell for their true value by comparison. How do you arrive at this "5% plus" key value? Drop into our office if you're thinking of selling your home and we'll show you.

No Bridge Over Canal Is Planned

TORONTO (CP) — A bridge at Port Robinson near Welland, Ont., which was destroyed in a shipping accident Aug. 25, will not be rebuilt.

Jean Marchand, federal minister of transport, and John Rhodes, Ontario's minister of transportation and communications, also said in a joint news release Monday that a tunnel will not be built under the Welland Canal.

"Given the substantial costs of any of the alternatives considered (from a minimum of $8 to $10 million for a lift bridge to a possible $30 million or more for a tunnel) and the immense requirements for investment in transportation facilities in Ontario and in Canada, the limited usefulness and low-rate utilization of a bridge at that particular point on the canal do not justify any other conclusion," the release stated.

A temporary pedestrian crossing using two floating docks now is in place across the 200-foot gap, but will have to be removed when navigation resumes April 1.

Seaway president Paul Normandeau said Monday that the authority will pay to maintain a ferry service with the provision it is able to pull out with 60 days notice. He said a ferry service may not be justified if few persons use it.

Boats Allowed To Dump Waste

TORONTO (CP) — United States pleasure craft on the Great Lakes no longer require holding tanks for waste disposal under new U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulations, Bernard Newman (L—Windsor-Walkerville) told the Ontario legislature Monday.

He urged Ontario environment Minister William Newman to protest the change which would allow boaters to dump sewage if it had been "chopped up" and chlorinated.

The minister said he was unaware of the change but would look into the matter.

No Decision

TORONTO (CP) — A proposal to dump Metropolitan Toronto's garbage in Hope Township remains up in the air.

Replying to a question from Liberal Leader Robert Nixon in the legislature Monday, Environment Minister William Newman said his ministry will be making no announcement on the proposal during the current session.

Mr. Newman said an application by CP Rail to pick up Toronto's garbage and ship it 50 miles to Hope Township is still in the planning stages.

Ban Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission proposes a ban on subliminal advertising on television stations.

The commission said Monday it will hear views at an Ottawa public hearing March 11 on a proposed change in regulations that would outlaw subliminal commercials on television.

Accept Code

OTTAWA (CP) — Roger Decarie, president of the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada said Monday he has issued instructions to end a postal code boycott.

Union members have been supporting the boycott imposed by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) last April during the national postal strike.

Mr. Decarie said the issue of reclassification of a coder worker position has been resolved and he could see no need to continue his union's support.

Jail Full

TORONTO (CP) — Seventy prisoners who arrived at the Toronto jail Friday night to serve weekend sentences were signed in and immediately released because there was no room for them, a spokesman said Monday.

Man Charged

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Police charged David Joseph Conroy, 23, of Peterborough with attempted murder after a man wanted in connection with the beating of a woman on Saturday turned himself in Monday.

Deputy Chief James Armstrong said a man walked into police headquarters Monday morning with his father.

Doreen Wellink, 41, of Peterborough is in critical condition in hospital with a fractured skull. She was was found unconscious Saturday afternoon and has been unable to give details of the incident.

Irvine Annoyed

Federal Policies Called 'Disgrace'

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government's housing policies and programs for the next fiscal year are a "disgrace," Housing Minister Donald Irvine told the Ontario legislature Monday.

Reporting on a weekend federal-provincial housing conference in Ottawa, Mr. Irvine said tht federal government is not giving housing the priority it deserves.

"Do you not accept any responsibility yourself for the decline in the number of housing starts in Ontario?" Opposition Leader Robert Nixon asked.

Mr. Irvine replied by blaming declining housing starts on inflation and insufficient federal money to provinces and municipalities.

He said his ministry still hopes to meet its announced goal of 100,000 new housing starts by the end of the fiscal year, March 31, and blamed the media for incorrectly stating the province will fall well short.

He claimed Ontario leads North America in housing starts.

"Just how far are you behind in your projected housing starts?" asked Vernon Singer (L—Toronto-Downsview).

"We're ahead of the game," Mr Irvine replied. "We still have time to achieve our target."

He rejected a suggestion by Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto-High Park) that the government suspend its land speculation tax to spur housing.

"I'm all for the land speculation tax," he said.

The Ottawa conference was disappointing, he added, because the provinces received no indication they will be granted additional say in new housing programs.

"They're dumping 60 per cent of their housing budget into Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

"There will be more duplication of programs and unnecessary expense.

"They are so far off base in their housing programs for 1975-76 that they are a disgrace."

More Join Indian Occupation

OTTAWA (CP) — More Indians have joined a small group of natives occupying an abandoned government building along the Ottawa River, dimming National Capital Commission hopes the building would be evacuated by Wednesday.

The commission over the weekend worked out agreement with about 12 remaining Indians that they would go home after occupying the building since Sept. 30

But the agreement appeared to be on shaky ground Monday when others moved in.

The building was occupied by about 200 members of the Native People's Caravan last September. The group took part in a demonstration on Parliament Hill.

No Help

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Monday he would consider intervening personally in the one-month-old strike by Royal Canadian Mint employees if it would help.

But indications are that his presence would have "quite the contrary-effect," he said in the Commons.

He told John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) that federal mediators are ready to step in if the two sides return to the bargaining table.

"I only hope the matter will resolve itself."

Levi Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Without a dissenting vote, the Senate Judiciary Committee Monday approved the nomination of Edward Levi to be attorney-general of the United States.

Levi, 63, is president of the University of Chicago and formerly was dean of its law school.

No Special Hockey Watch

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario will not keep closer watch on incidents of violence in hockey games for possible criminal charges following action resulting from a National Hockey League match in Minnesota, Attorney-General John Clement said Monday.

Mr. Clement said police are instructed to be on the alert for wilfull violence in all sports, but it was difficult to draw the line in many events.

"To direct all those efforts to one particular sport would be very difficult," Mr. Clement said.

Loss of Licences To Be Compulsory

TORONTO (CP) — A bill to enforce compulsory suspension of driver's licences for convictions of impaired, careless or dangerous driving and other traffic offences under the Criminal Code was given approval in principle in the legislature Monday.

The amendments to the province's Highway Traffic Act, if approved, would end the practice of judges granting restricted licences for work purposes to individuals convicted of such offences.

John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communications, told the legislature that one major problem with existing laws is that "in the courts there has not been consistency in application."

The proposed law would shorten the period of suspension to three months for first offences and six months for subsequent convictions within five years.

Under existing law, suspensions of up to six months for impaired driving, first offence and one year for convictions involving injuries, deaths or major property damage, are allowed.

Opposition members of the legislature generally supported the legislation, faulting it only for not being stricter on impaired drivers.

Many proposed bolstering the laws with education programs in schools and signs on highways and washrooms of beverage rooms.

Fred Young (NDP—Yorkview) urged a ban on liquor and beer advertising on television. He said the highway death rate among teenagers more than doubled after the drinking age was lowered to 18 from 21.

The bill also allows school bus drivers to use flashing lights to halt cars in speed zones under 30 m.p.h.—a measure long advocated by many school boards and safety organizations.

Patchwork Controls Of Noise Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Proposed anti-noise legislation would transform Ontario into a patchwork quilt of differing controls on noise levels, opposition members of the legislature predicted Monday.

Bill 190, attacked by Patrick Lawlor (NDP—Lakeshore) as a "milk sop measure" if approved, would allow municipalities to pass bylaws setting allowable noise levels.

Fred Young (NDP—Yorkview) said small municipalities would not have resources to enforie such a bylaw, and urged Environmtnt Minister William Newman ta set a mandatory decible level for the province to prevent situations where municipalities would not be able to enforce controls in neighboring jurisdictions.

Fred Burr (NDP—Sandwich Riverside), long-time supporter of anti-noise legislation, said wide confusion would result from varying bylaws.

He chided the government for not acting sooner in light of information which shows "one out of every five workers in the United States is slowly going deaf because of noise in his place of work."

He said a 1969 meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science reported that noise causes stress and tension "makes people irritable, unsociable and quarrelsome, and that noise can cause seizure in some cases of epilepsy."

Mr. Newman, defending the legislation, said a model bylaw would be made available soon for consideration by municipalities.

Starr Admits Delays In Compensation System

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Starr, chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board (WCB) of Ontario, told the legislature's committee on resources development Monday that he is aware of delays in dealing with compensation claims and promised to improve the system.

He said the board has implemented a new claims system and is still trying to sort out claim files. Adding to administrative difficulties, he said, was recruitment of new adjudication officers.

The board received 143,000 claims for compensation in 1974 and paid out $214 million, compared with $186 million in benefits in 1973 and about $160 million in 1972.

Labor Minister John MacBeth blamed inflation for difficulty in maintaining levels of benefit awards.

The WCB falls under Mr. MacBeth's ministry which, in turn, comes under review by the resources development committee. Discussion on the WCB's most recent report continues in committee.

Committee members told WCB officials during the committee hearing that pensions tied to the cost of living, toll-free telephone inquiries and more rehabilitation centres would improve services.

Committee member Floyd Laughren (NDP—Nickel Belt) suggested the WCB be abolished and replaced by a universal insurance system, giving every resident coverage against loss of income due to injury.

Ted Bounsall (NDP—Windsor West) suggested tying compensation pension payments to the cost of living. The WCB should take an additional one-third of one per cent from employers to pay for indexing.

But board officials said it would cost the board $80 million to introduce such a plan.

Bud Germa (NDP—Sudbury) and James Bullbrook (L—Sarnia) said recipients are being forced to spend money on long-distance telephone calls to the WCB because they encounter problems.

Mr. Bullbrook also complained about doctors who did not send medical reports to WCB fast enough, causing patients to call Toronto to find out why cheques had not arrived.

The committee heard the WCB rehabilitation centre in Toronto referred to in glowing terms. One administrator said the WCB in Ontario is recognized as a "world leader" in rehabilitation.

City Approves $4.25 Weekly Pay Hike for Crossing Guards

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

The city's 39 school crossing guards had their pay boosted by $4.25 a week by city council at its Monday meeting.

The previous rate of $37 a week was sufficient to qualify guards for unemployment insurance benefits.

Based on an average 15-hour week, the new rate of $41.25 a week, effective Jan. 1, is the equivalent of $2.75 an hour.

In his report to council, city manager Wilbur Purcell noted that prior to Jan. 1, 1975, senior citizens between 65 and 69 were penalized by the federal government through a reduction in their Canada Pension Plan pensions if their income was more than $1,140 a year. This was eliminated Jan. 1, he said.

Also, Mr. Purcell reported, the minimum necessary to qualify for unemployment insurance benefits was raised to $37 a week and guards salaries were raised to that level effective Jan. 1.

The city manager reported the crossing guards' duties all combine to justify the recom- was attended by 35 of the 39 on the payroll.

After looking into the matter, Mr. Purcell concluded: "The responsibility, the traffic hazards, the inconvenience of cold or wet weather and the short work shifts related to the crossing guads' duties all combine the justify the recommendation that the salary could be related to that paid temporary recreation-arena employees. These employees now are being paid $2.75 an hour for 1975.

Property Standards Law To Get Public Scrutiny

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

Belleville's proposed property standards bylaw was produced in draft form at Monday's meeting of city council.

The 15-page, single-spaced document on legal-size paper specifies in detail the levels of maintenance and repair that must be met by property owners in the city.

Failure to meet these levels could lead to prosecution and fines of up to $500 a day or result in the city taking the required remedial action at the expense of the property owner.

Such a bylaw, it was noted, does not require approval of the Ontario Municipal Board. If passed by council it would go into effect on the date of council's choosing.

At Monday's council meeting it was decided that copies of the draft law be circulated for comment to the medical officer of health, city engineer, city solicitor, Quinte Homebuilders' Association, Quinte Real Estate Board and the Chamber of Commerce.

Also, at the suggestion of Alderman Stu Meeks, copies of the bylaw will be available to the general public at the Corby and east end libraries.

Future Businessman

The Junior Achievement movement held a workshop open house Monday night at St Thomas' Parish Hall. Grade 9 Centennial Secondary student, Bruce Potts is shown framed by wooden handles which will be assembled with fabric material to be made into women's carry-all purses. The boys do the carpentry work involved while the girls do the sewing and stitching.

Council Rejects Salary Committee

Alderman Ben Corke's motion to set up a committee to study and make recommendations on the salaries of elected members of city council and committee members was narrowly defeated in city council Monday.

Earlier in the council session, Ian Reilly, representing organized labor in the city and first vice-president of the Quinte District Labor Council, made a formal proposal for labor representation on the committee — if it were established. Speaking for his motion, Ald. Corke agreed. Earlier this year, labor representatives had strongly objected to their lack of representation on any city board or committee.

Ald. Corke's proposal for a salary review committee, seconded by Ald. Arthur Keegan, was lost, however, on a tie vote with the mayor in the chair.

In debating the motion, Ald. Jack Ireland proposed it be tabled for a three-month period, until such time as other local labor problems had been sorted out. His motion was also lost.

Bomb Threat Call Empties City Hall

City council's regular Monday session had an unexpected 45-minute adjournment when Mayor Robin Jeffrey ordered City Hall cleared at about 4.50 p.m.

The imperatively wagging finger of Police Chief Douglas Crosbie caught the mayor's attention and, after a hurried conference, the mayor ordered the building cleared.

On the way out Chief Crosbie explained a telephoned bomb threat had been received and he and a team of city police would have to search the building.

The caller, reportedly speaking with a foreign accent, reached Telephone Answering Service after the regular switchboard had shut down for the day. He said a bomb set to explode at 5 p.m. had been planted at City Hall.

Chief Crosbie and a team of officers arrived at about 4.50; the building was cleared and they went to work.

By 5.30 nothing had exploded and nothing suspicious had been found. The building was reopened and council resumed its session.

Potstra Named Telecare Head

Peter Potstra this week was named director of Belleville's Telecare service.

The service caters to people who want to talk over the telephone in time of need.

Mr. Potstra has been an active member of the group for five years and has served for the past year on Telecare's governing committee as chairman.

Building Sites Called Hazard to Children

Vera Heimbach, unsuccessful candidate in December's civic election, again appeared before council Monday to protest two situations in the city's east end.

Building sites at Bridge St. and Haig Rd., she said, are a hazard to young children passing them on their way to and from school.

This, she said, had been brought to the attention of the builder last November, and immediate action was promised. "Nothing has been done," she said. The matter was referred to the city manager for action.

Also, Mrs. Heimbach said the north entrance to Bayview School was unmarked and a hazard to children attending the school. "Drivers have no way of knowing the entrance is there until they're right on top of it," Mrs. Heimbach said.

Traffic committee chairman Ald. Jack Ireland said his committee had discussed the matter and would check it further.

Young Denied Water Tests

Clarence Young was told at city council Monday that results of water tests on the bayfront were "none of your business."

Mr. Young, defeated aldermanic candidate in December's civic elections, appeared as a delegation of one to ask Alderman Stu Meeks about results of tests he had observed Ald. Meeks making. "Those results are none of your business,' Ald. Meeks retorted.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey interrupted to ask Ald. Meeks if the tests he made were for himself, on his own time. "Yes," said the alderman. "Then that's that," said the mayor.

Meeks Wants Club Opened

City council Monday heard a request from Alderman Stu Meeks that the Wharf Street Debating Club be opened for skaters on the harbor and that lights along the shoreline be turned on in the evening. The requests were turned over to recreation man George Zegouras for action.

Meeting Minutes Now Available

At the suggestion of civic activist W. C. Hockley, minutes of city council meetings will be made available to interested citizens at Belleville's two public libraries.

Responding to Mr. Hockley's submission to Monday's meeting of city council, Mayor Robin Jeffrey said his suggestion was "certainly a reasonable idea".

Fire Department Major Concern

Sidney Township Council Monday authorized the purchase of a fully-equipped fire truck at a cost of $40,000. John Cormack, township fire commissioner, gave council a lengthy report on department operation with particular interest paid to the possible construction of a new fire hall in the Bayside area. The department has been a growth priority of council in recent times with the township experiencing strong residential growth in the southern portion of the municipality.

Class Creation

Six classes in "creative stitchery" — embroidery — gave Grade 7 and 8 boys and girls at Stirling Senior Public School a chance to express themselves last fall. Each student contributed a square on a theme that was decided by class vote. This one, now sewn into a banner by instructor Pat Mertl, is The Future. Mrs. Mertl, teaching under an Ontario Arts Council grant, will sew the work of each class into a banner to be hung in the school. "I was amazed at how well the boys did, once they got started," the instructor said. "Some even invented their own stitches."

'Kampus Kapers'

School Bringing Back Old Favorites

Kampus Kapers, Belleville Collegiate's annual variety show, will offer its 1975 version Feb. 21 and 22 at 7.30 p.m. in the school auditorium. This will be the 29th year of the show, which began as Boy's Night under Homer (Red) Townsend just after the war.

The acts this year include some old favorites as well as new items. The BCI girls' gymnastic team (Bay of Quinte champions for the last five years and COSSA champions for the last four) will offer their brand of calisthenics.

For the third consecutive year, Professor Ludwig von Wilhelm will conduct the BCI Chamber Music Kazoo Ensemble in a movement from Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusik.

The school cheerleaders will demonstrate their style and the staff of the school will produce their own play — something to do with Shakespeare this year.

Among the new performers are Swamp Water, a musical group and Sweet Georgia Brown — a review of how BCI girls' basketball team won the Junior COSSA championship. Maribeth Cronk will play the piano and Mary Wonnacott will sing, and the concert band, conducted by Diane Morris, will perform.

Karen Wishart will be mistress of ceremonies and Paul Woodley will be master of ceremonies. Malcolm Ewashkin is producer and executive producer is Dave Handley. Russ Leal's marketing class has designed the programs. Admission both nights is $1.50.

City Delays Takeover Of Band Practice Hall

The future of a practice hall for the Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps remains uncertain as council, at Mayor Robin Jeffrey's request, delayed a decision to take over the old St. George's Mission for use as a warehouse by the recreation-arena department.

At its meeting Jan. 6, council approved a resolution authorizing the recreation-arena committee to use the main floor of the building as a storage facility.

However, at the Jan. 20 meeting of council, the yardmen band requested they be permitted to continue using the Station St. building for their activities. The request was set aside for two weeks.

Monday, the mayor asked for a further delay in reaching a decision, stating there was a possibility of purchasing another property.

Sidney Endorses Land Resolution

Sidney Township Council Monday night endorsed a resolution recognizing Belleville and area as eligible for Ontario Home Action Program aid.

The program provides subsidies for major sewer and water servicing projects locating in and around developed urban centres.

"If the province accepts the resolution, such servicing would serve to reduce the shortage of serviced land," said Sidney Reeve Gord Wilman.

The motion was brought before Sidney and Thurlow townships and the city of Belleville on behalf of the Quinte Home Builders Association.

"We're going to be up against this (need for services) sooner or later," said Councillor Reg. McCurdy. "We might as well apply now and if we can get it subsidized, so much the better."

Belleville council on Monday tabled its copy of the resolution for two weeks until more information is available.

Runacres Defends Education Centre

Members of the Rotary Club and three members of the Rotary-sponsored Interact Club, Belleville's youth service organization, toured the Hastings County Board of Education Centre Monday.

Eric Runacres, director of education, related the history of the $55 million operation during the Rotary luncheon meeting at the Kiwanis Centre.

"We don't want a medal for it," he commented. "We want you to know it's here and we have people who can put out."

The centre is located in the former 64-year-old Queen Alexander Public School at 156 Ann St., a 45,000 square-foot building converted at a cost of $42.92 a square foot. "I think the ratepayers got a bargain,' remarked Mr. Runacres.

He pointed out it was constructed "without any additional cost to the taxpayer." Money was raised through various sources, including the sale of old buildings under the board's jurisdiction, and no funds earmarked for the schools were used, he said.

The necessity for centralization was evident when the board began in 1969 and the education staff was located in five different locations, he said.

Through centralization, there is an "annual saving of $50,000 in co-ordinating the services offered," noted Mr. Runacres.

In addition, the existing staff performed most of the reconstruction, resulting in another saving of $120,00, he said.

This has produced a pride in the building by those who work there. "Everyone of the staff had a had in what was done," he said.

Mr. Runacres said about 1,000 teachers and other educators utilize the centre daily. Two-thirds of the building houses the business operation and one-third is used for conference facilities.

He described it as a "very functional — and very basic building." About 80 people are employed in the various departments.

Palmer Looks Ahead

Groh Escapes With the Title

HONOLULU (AP) — The disappointment of still another victory that escaped Arnold Palmer is forgotten but he is seeking his next golf title as eagerly as ever.

"I've had disappointments before,' said Palmer, 45, after he had charged into a late tie for the top, then let obscure Gary Groh escape with the title Monday in the $220,000 Hawaiian open golf tournament.

"I'm not gonna quit or give up just because I lost a golf tournament," Palmer said. "I've lost a lot of golf tournaments. And I've had my disappointments before. . ."

Palmer said he's looking forward to the 90-hole, five-day Bob Hope Desert Classic in Palm Springs, Calif., which begins Wednesday. It's the last title Palmer won two years ago, a tournament he has won five times and one he admits holds a special attraction for him.

But while Palmer is looking to the next event, the 30-year-old Groh, a career struggler whose previous big cheque was for $4,000, is almost unbelievably stealing glances at the $44,000 prize he picked up with the victory.

"This plans my life for the next two years," Groh said.

Groh has been a non-exempt player all his career. He's always faced the problems of attempting to win his way into the tournaments through the Monday qualifying rounds.

Now he's exempt for two years. No more Mondays. He eliminated that problem with a final-round 68, four under par on the water-logged, 7,154-yard Waialae Country Club course, a lush layout turned into a quagmire by torrential rains which washed out one day's play.

He clinched it with an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole that gave him a 274 total, 14 under par. Al Geiberger also birdied the 18th to claim second with a 69 and a 275 total.

Palmer could do no better than third after he'd moved into a tie with only two holes to play. He had a closing-round 71 for 276. Australian veteran Bruce Crampton and Lou Graham followed at 277.

Share of First For Kilmer Rink

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — Corrine Kilmer of St. Catharines won twice Monday to grab a share of first place in the Ontario women's curling championships.

Defeating Joan Mathers of Toronto 6-4 and Marilyn Archer of Kirkland Lake 11-5, the Kilmer rink pulled even with Mathers, each with 3-2 won-lost records.

The winning rink moves on to the national final at Moncton, N.B., Feb. 23-28.

Ranked behind them with 2-2 records are defending champion Dawn Ventura of Ottawa, Bea Cole of London and Elaine Tetley of Thunder Bay with the Archer rink winless and last in four outings.

The final round of the three-day championship is scheduled today with Tetley playing Kilmer, Archer meeting Ventura and Cole tackling Mathers.

St. Catherines stole a pair in the 10th and final end in beating Toronto when Mathers missed a wide open takeout with her last rock. Other results in the first round Monday had Tetley beating Archer 9-5 and Ventura dropping Cole 8-4.

Perhaps the key match of the final so far came in the second round of the day when Mathers defeated Ventura 9-7 by scoring three on the ninth end to go one up and then stealing one on the 10th when Ventura missed a draw for shot rock.

With both leadng rocks nudging the four-foot circle, it took two measurements to give the end and the match to Mathers.

KiKlmer went into the standings tie with her 11-5 win over Archer in that round and Cole nipped Tetley 7-6 on the first extra-end encounter of the competition so far.

Seven A's Headed For Arbitration

OAKLAND (AP) — Seven members of the three-time world champion Oakland A's, including Reggie Jackson and Sal Bando, say they will take their salary demands to arbitration for the second time in two years, the San Francisco Examiner reports.

Also headed for arbitration, the newspaper said, are pitcher Rollie Fingers, the 1974 World Series Most Valuable Player; 19-game winner Ken Holtzman; clutch hitter Joe Rudi; first baseman-catcher Gene Tenace, and veteran catcher and World Series hero Ray Fosse.

The seven were reported to be preparing to file for arbitration this week and planned to present their demands during the week of Feb. 17.

Jackson, The Examiner said, is believed to have raised his sights to $175,000 a year and perhaps $200,000, taking his cue from the multi-million-dollar deal Jim (Catfish) Hunter got with New York Yankees after A's owner Charles Finley's failure to fulfil all contract provisions made Hunter a free agent.

Jackson, asked during the weekend whether he'd received his contract for the coming season, said : "I received one but I don't care to discuss it. It's too depressing."

Finley offered the left-handed slugger $100,000 for the 1974 season but Jackson went to arbitration and got another $35,000. Now, after a third straight world championship, he thinks he's worth a lot more.

Sal Bando feels the same way about himself.

"I got the same ($100,000) contract as last year," he said, "and I'm not going to settle for that."

Pride the Thing Says John Mackey

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — John Mackey, a former professional football player, told a federal court judge Monday that it hurt his pride to sit on the bench.

"Salary wasn't the most important thing," Mackey testified at the outset of a lawsuit aimed at giving players more freedom in signing with a team. "It was pride. They couldn't pay me enough for sitting on the bench."

Sixteen current and former National Football League players are challenging the league's Rozelle Rule. The case was brought as an anti-trust action against the league and its 26 teams.

The rule covers cases in which a player declines to sign a contract and plays out his option year, thus becoming a free agent and eligible to negotiate with other teams. If two clubs don't agree on terms, commissioner Pete Rozelle can decide which players or draft choices go to the team losing the player.

Sylvia Burka – On the Way Home

3 Dropped from Team

WINNIPEG (CP) — Three speedskaters dropped from Canada's national team Monday have been disciplined because of "strictly skating-related problems," an official of the Canadian Amateur Speedskating Association (CASA) says.

Sylvia Burka of Winnipeg, Gerald Cassan of Ottawa and Andrew Barron of Edmonton will return to Canada immediately from Inzel, West Germany, and will not represent Canada in international competitions this season.

The team is using Inzel as a base for attending competitions in Europe in preparation for championships later in the winter.

Donald Gordon of Winnipeg, chairman of CASA's international speedskating committee, said in an interview Monday night that the move related to problems on the ice.

In an earlier statement, Gordon had said the step was taken because of a number of actions detrimental to the team, but had declined to go into details.

The three, who have been receiving financial assistance for their training, will receive no further monetary support from CASA this year, but will have a chance to try for the team next year. They will also be permitted to compete in the Canadian championships this spring.

Riesen Favored

TORONTO (CP) — World Championship Tennis (WC) officials have made Marty Riessen of the United States top seed in this year's $64,000 Rothmans International tournament, which begins Monday in Toronto.

Riessen's top seeding follows by a week his victory in the U.S. Professional Indoor tennis championships in Philadelphia.

The international tournament, to be held at the Canadian National Exhibition, is part of the WCT tour and will invite one-third of the touring 84 players.

Kings Top '76ers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sophomore Larry McNeill scored 26 points and pulled down 18 rebounds Monday night to lead Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 100-87 win over Philadelphia '76ers in a National Basketball Association game.

With McNeill working the inside and Nate Archibald driving through and shooting over the '76ers, Kansas City - Omaha jumped out to a 20-15 first-period lead.

The Kings outscored the '76ers 8-2 to open the second quarter and never trailed. Doug Collins led Philadelphia with 24 points.

In the American Basketball Association, Virginia Squires defeated San Diego Conquistadors 107-92 and Utah Stars clipped New York Nets 111-106.

Jo Jo White scored 29 points as the Celtics ran off their 10th consecutive win and their 20th on the road against only three losses. The loss snapped Detroit's seven-game home winning streak.

Don Nelson added 19 to the Boston ottal, including the 10,000th point of his career, while Bob Lanier had 27 and Dave Bing 26 for the Pistons.

Deficit For Riders

REGINA (CP)—High salary increases for players, an unusual number of injuries and lost ticket sales because of a players strike combined to produce a deficit for Saskatchewan Roughriders last fall for the first time since 1960.

Roughrider president Allan Sangster told the community-owned team's annual meeting Monday that the club lost $86,911, reducing its reserve fund to $554,713.

The non-profit operation was unable to absorb an increase to $1.2-million from $915,882 in the cost of salaries, travelling and team maintenance, Sangster said.

Auditor Harold Kay said salaries alone increased by $180,000.

The club's financial statement showed that football operations last year lost $211,271 in 1974 and $106,254 in 1973.

However, community fund-raising activities and interest on the reserve whittled down the 1974 loss and produced a small net surplus in 1973.

'It's a Sad Day for Me' — Geoffrion Resigns

ATLANTA (AP) — Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, who used his colorful French-Canadian personality to sell hockey in the Deep South, resigned as coach of Atlanta Flames Monday night, and refused to divulge his reason.

"It's a personal thing and that's all there is to it,' Geoffrion said.

Cliff Fletcher, general manager of the National Hockey League team, said Fred Creighton of Brandon, Man., a veteran minor league coach, will replace The Boomer as Flames' coach. Geoffrion will remain with the team as an assistant to Fletcher.

"It's a sad day for me," Geoffrion said. "I have to make this decision. I got more pleasure out of coaching the Atlanta Flames for 2½ years than I did playing for the Montreal Canadiens or coaching for the New York Rangers.

BERNIE GEOFFRION

"But even though I love the game so, I have my reasons and I had to make the decision, and I guarantee you that Cliff won't regret it."

The 44-year-old hockey Hall of Famer was a popular sports figure in Atlanta, where he constantly helped lure large crowds to watch an expansion team.

The Flames set an NHL record of 78 points for a first-year expansion club in 1972-73 and last season reached the playoffs, losing in the first round to the ultimate Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers.

Atlanta is in a fight for a playoff berth this season, currently last in the four-team Patrick Division race, only one point behind third-place New York Islanders. Atlanta has a 22-20-10 record.

Geoffrion's over-all record as Flames' coach was 77-92-39. H coached New York Rangers during the 1968-69 season, compiling a 22-18-3 mark before resigning because of a stomach ailment.

He said Monday his health was not a factor in his resignation.

Creighton, 41, will be making his coaching debut in the NHL Wednesday night when the Flames meet Boston Bruins on home ice.

As a minor league coach, Creighton never had a losing campaign 12 seasons. He carried Charlotte Checkers to three championships in the Eastern Hockey League and won a Central Hockey League title as general manager-coach of Omaha, the Flames' farm club.

His three-year record at Omaha was 92-68-33.

Junior Players

Verbal Agreement For Pros, CAHA

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) has reached tentative agreement with both the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association on drafting of under-age junior players it was learned Monday.

CAHA administrative director Pierre Turmel said a verbal agreement between the CAHA and the two professional leagues prohibits signing of junior players until they have "ended their junior hockey eligibility."

"In the past the NHL and the WHA have signed 18-and 19-year-old players" when they have had two and one years respectively remaining in junior ranks, he said.

Drafting of junior players by the professional leagues takes place every June and Mr. Turmel says he hopes a formal agreement can be signed before that time.

Last year, 12 of the 77 junior players drafted by the NHL were under 20 while five of the 35 players signed by the WHA were not yet 20—the age when junior eligibility ends.

Mr. Turmel said no definitive date had been set for the signing of the tentative agreement but CAHA officials are hoping it may be sometime in March.

When there's an accomplished young bowler in the family, mom is kept busy sewing crests on the bowling shirt. And when your 10-year-old daughter comes up with an 802 triple, pride goes into every stitch. Mrs. Cecil Fradette gets to work with the needle and thread while Kelly pauses between games.

Kelly Scores Sizzling 802

Thanks to the efforts of secretaries of the 38 five-pin bowling leagues in the city, regular reports on scores and standings are a feature of the sports pages.

Youth Bowling Council (YBC) programs at Belleville Bowl-O-Drome and Brunswick Belleville Bowl are included in the weekly coverage. And it has taken one of the younger members of the talented youth bowling fraternity to make five-pinners of all ages take notice.

Ten-year-old Kelly Fradette, bowling in the Bantam A section at the Bowl-O-Drome, topped the 800 triple mark recently.

Kelly opened with a 258 score, followed up with a whopping 327 and closed out with 217.

Participating in the YBC for the past three years, Kelly comes by her interest in bowling honestly. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Fradette, Charles St., Kelly gets plenty of encouragement from the family, especially 17-year-old Debbie and mom (Nora) who also bowl regularly.

Kelly sports a 156 average on the season and when she isn't spilling the pins, the sports enthusiast has many other interests to keep her busy.

A Grade 5 student at Queen Victoria Public School, she is a member of the school volleyball team and also finds time to take part in gymnastics and a junior girls' hockey program. In the summer, she's an outfielder in the Belleville Minor Softball Association operation.

With all this activity, something had to go. Kelly no longer has time for another pursuit: square dancing.

But whatever the future holds for young Kelly Fradette, it's a cinch she'll always remember that 802 triple.

Then, of course, there's that 327 single. And before that, a 290 single.

Stands Second Overall at Hamilton

Archery Titles for Loyalist

For the second consecutive year, the Loyalist College Archery club has placed second over all in the Ontario Colleges Athletic Association annual tournament.

This year's tournament, held at Mohawk College in Hamilton on Saturday, saw the local entry come up with a very impressive showing.

After missing the men's event by only nine points, the college took top honors in the mixed event and had the top male and female competitor for the day.

In the mixed event Loyalist tabulated 1,507 points with Mohawk next checking in with 1,132 points.

Mohawk, also for the second year in a row was the over-all winner, edging out the Loyalist teams.

Staff supervisor for the archers, Rob Stinson who has been working with the team felt: "The men's team didn't shoot what they have been in practice. I think that if they had have, we would have won."

Coach Armstrong agreed with Stinson about the men's shooting but felt "the butterflies' caused by nervousness played a part in the "trouble."

For several of the members of both teams, tournament shooting was an entirely new thing and with the amount of concentration involved to come up with consistent shooting "the first is always the hardest."

Out of a possible 270 points and 30 arrows from 20 yards and another 30 arrows from 30 yards Armstrong shot a 228 and a 256 for a 484 total.

Kinnear, one of the top women shooters in the province, had a 232 and a 242 score for a total of 474, higher than the second place male.

Armstrong's solution for the problem of nerves for next year's tournament will be: " a lot more competition before the big one."

This year's talent, coupled with next year's experience with the added possibility of a women's team should make the Loyalist club strong.

Gas House Hockey

3 Teams Battle For Second Place

A couple of races tightened in the Gas House Hockey League after Monday night's action in the battle for second place in the standings just one point separates Rollins Lumber from Chuckwagon Foods and Belleville Generals. Rollins have 26 points and Chuckwagon and the Generals have 25.

Chuckwagon was the only one of the three that played Monday night and they downed Jim's Pizzeria 4-2. The loss by Jim's tightened things up in the mid-section of the standings. The Pizzeria has 16 points, Constellation Carpets has 15 and the Belleville Yardmen have 12. Constellaton and the Yardmen battled to a 2-2 tie. In the other game, Stanley Structures picked up their 18th win of the season and Art's Esso took their 15th loss as the Structuremen coasted to a 5-3 victory.

Steve Sully and Terry Hiddleston replied for Jim's.

Dave Pound, Tom MacDonald and Warren Rushlow scored for Art's.

Pat Mullins and Terry Rapell got one apiece for the Yardmen and Ken Vos and Myles McDonnell tallied for Constellation.

Salter Scores Three

Rod Salter was the winning margin Sunday as he scored three goals to lead the Bearcats to a 6-3 win over the Falcons in Northern Electric Hockey League action.

In the other league game Sunday, the Rebels downed the Yankees 5-1.

Salter also drew an assist in his club's victory. Grant Sage had a goal and three assists and Terry Casselman and Larry Lupenette added singles.

Bill Dugeon scored two of the Rebels five goals with single markers going to Doug McCrory, Bruce Pascoe and Tom MacDonald.

Wayne Brown scored the only goal of the game for the Yankees.

Intell Bonspiel

4 Rinks Unbeaten

Going into this morning's action only four rinks were undefeated in the Annual Intelligencer Bonspiel at the Quinte Curling Club. Kathy Brown and Lorna Bennett, both from Belleville, have recorded perfect 3-0 records and Sally Lambert, of Napanee and Kay O'Neill, of Kingston-Cataraqui, also have 3-0 records.

Last year, Lambert was the first event winner of the compeitition, Bennett won the third event and O'Neill won the fourth event.

Of the 24 rinks involved, 19 are from out of town. Some are from as far away as the Toronto Crickett Club and Guelph.

The four undefeated rinks face off this afternoon and the two winners meet tonight at 7 to decide the first event winner.

BANCROFT — Bancroft's Junior "D" Jets lost two games this week-end and have dropped to a second place tie with the Haliburton Huskies in the Ontario Hockey Association's Central League standings.

In Sunday's game, against Haliburton, the local Jets who were playing with a short team dropped a 7-5 decision.

For the local Jets Mike Siydock put in the three goals with singles from Jimmy Goodwin and Dana Neuman.

Penalty Pays Off

FRANKFORD (Special) — Penalized 24 seconds apart in the late minutes of an Ontario Hockey Association Junior C match, here, Sunday night, Frankford Huskies' Al MacIntosh and Joey Edwards teamed up when they returned to the ice and combined talents to produce the winning goal in a 5-4 thriller.

Edwards got the gate at 12:24 and MacIntosh followed at 12:48. MacIntosh was back on the ice only eight seconds when he took a pass from Edwards and sank the winner, sending Lindsay Muskies home on the short end.

Other marksmen for the winners were Edwards, Curt McLean, Gary Payne and Jean Doucette.

Steve Lytle, Jim Humphrey, Steve Richardson and Don Eastman scored for Muskies.

Huskies, with 11 wins and a tie in their last 13 outings, will meet Port Perry in first round playoff action. Dates for the best of seven set will be announced tonight. In other playoff series, Cobourg and Bowmanville hook up while Lindsay is matched against Port Hope.

'Toronto Experience' Helps Pully's Kings

NEW YORK (CP) — The "Toronto experience" coming out of Punch Imlach's crucible in the 1960s has a lot to do with the current success of Los Angeles Kings.

Pulford ended his playing career in Los Angeles in 1972 to become a full-time coach. He lasted 14 years with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Obviously, the Kings reflect Pulford's style, Harper said in an interview.

Pulford, 39 and grey at the temples, rebuilt slowly in Los Angeles and this season put it all together.

Harper still can remember the nights he played against Pulford when the Montreal-Toronto game was the hottest show in town.

"He was a plugger, a fellow who kept in there fighting, who always was a nuisance for opposing defencemen," Harper said. "We've got forwards that are just like that. Our whole team . . . they just don't give up and hat's very much the way Pulford played."

Harper, who made the All-Star team for the first time this year, played 10 years with Montreal Canadiens. He was shipped to Los Angeles in 1972.

Harper had played on five Stanley Cup championships teams, Pulford on four.

Pete Stemkowski, another ex-Leaf playing with New York Rangers, always has a story about how hard it was in Toronto whenever a younger player starts to wilt from one of coach Emile (Cat) Francis' workouts.

"You never knew with Punch how long a workout might last," Stemkowski recalls. "It might last 90 minutes or all day."

Pulford admits that the Toronto experience "influences my thinking to a certain degree." Philadelphia plays a close type of hockey not too different from the way we play."

The Canadiens and the Kings are locked in a tight struggle for the lead in the Norris Division. Each has lost only nine games with five-eighths of the schedule completed. On the road, they have the best records in the National Hockey League—four losses apiece.

Pulford said one of the reasons the Kings do so well on the road is that their style is consistent.

"I think some teams, when they are on the road, tend to play a little more open because they are not in front of their own fans. And when teams play that way it sort of helps us play our system.

Most of the losses for Los Angeles this season have been close ones.
cloe ones.

"That's the way this team has been all season," Harper said. "They don't give up even when they're down. They just keep playing fundamentally good hockey and not worrying about the big spectacular play to try to tie the score. . . ."

A big plus, of course, has been goalie Rogatien Vachon. "He just has never had a bad game all season," Harper said, adding that Vachon is as good as some of the great goalies he has seen.

"I don't think I can remember Terry Sawchuk or Jacques Plante or Glen Hall—some of the great ones that played a few years ago—that were any better than Rogie is today. He's as good as any of them are."

Quebec's Bernier Can't Match Hull

LOS ANGELES (CP) — A big week didn't save Serge Bernier of Quebec Nordiques from losing ground to Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets last week in their battle for the World Hockey Association scoring title.

Bernier picked up three goals and four assists to bring his season's totals to 35 goals and 37 assists, but fell another point behind Hull, who has held or shared the weekly scoring lead since Dec. 2.

Hull produced four goals and four assists, bringing his totals to 45 goals and 37 assists, good for a three-point change.

The only other change among the league's top 10 scorers was the addition of Marc Tardif of Quebec, who climbed into a 10th-place tie with Frank Hughes of Houston.

Veteran Gordie Howe reached the 20-goal plateau for the 24th time in the last 26 seasons when he scored for Houston against Chicago Cougars on Feb. 1. Howe sat out the other two seasons.

Gilbert Closing In On Ratelle's Record

MONTREAL (CP) — Right winger Rod Gilbert returned with a flourish this weekend after a bout with the flu and continued his assault on the New York Rangers record book.

After missing four National Hockey League games, Gilbert returned to action Saturday night in Chicago against the Black Hawks but failed to earn a point for the first time in nine games.

But the 33-year-old's skating legs showed no ill effects at home Sunday afternoon as he scored four goals against Detroit Red Wings in a 5-5 tie.

It was the second four-goal game of Gilbert's career, the first coming in Montreal Feb. 24, 1968, in a 6-1 win over the Canadiens.

Gilbert, 33, already owns Ranger club records for most career goals with 334, assists with 485, points with 819, 20-goal seasons with 10 and 30-point seasons with 12.

He has 29 goals and 36 assists for 65 points in 47 games this season, good for eighth place in the scoring race.

If he can maintain the pace of the last 10 games—better than two points a game—he is certain to break the Ranger record of 109 points in a season, set by line-mate Jean Ratelle in 1971-72.

Meanwhile, centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins looms on the threshold of his fifth straight 100-point season. Esposito boasts a league-leading 47 goals which, combined with 49 assists, give him 96 points.

Four more points also will give Esposito his sixth 100-point year in the last seven.

The goaltending race saw a change at the top for the first time since early in the season as Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers recorded his ninth shutout and checked in with a 1.97 goals-against average.

Rogie Vachon of Los Angeles Kings, meanwhile, slipped to a 2.03 average as the Kings club average moved upward to 2.20, second behind Philadelphia's 2.12.

Parent is used to the hot competition for the Vezina Trophy after he and Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks last year became the first netminders from opposing teams to share the award. It goes to the goalkeepers having played a minimum of 25 games for the club with the fewest goal scored against it during the season.

Gray Preparing To Defend Title

TORONTO (CP) — Clyde Gray, Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight boxing champion, announced Monday he will defend his Canadian title March 3 in Calgary, after a six-month absence from the ring.

Gray, 27, said he will face Marc Gervais of Quebec City, now rated second in Canada.

Also on the card would be Johnny Summerhays of Brantford, Ont., defending his Canadian lightweight title against Danny Stokes of Toronto.

The match was announced as Gray was considering retirement from fighting because of a lack of opponents.

"Six months is a long layoff," he said. "I was getting ready to pack it in and go back to Sydney, N.S., my home area. . . .

"But I've kept in shape and I'm feeling great."

3 Named to Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Herman, Earl Averill and Bucky Harris were elected to baseball's Hall of Fame by the veterans committee Monday.

They joined home-run slugger Ralph Kiner, elected by the Baseball Writers Association of America last week, and will be inducted in ceremonies Aug. 18 at Cooperstown, N.Y.

Warren Giles, chairman of the board of the Hall of Fame and former president of the National League, made the announcement. The committee judges persons out of the game 25 years or more.

Herman, a second baseman, played for Chicago Cubs, Brooklyn Dodgers, Boston Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates from 1931 through 1947. He compiled a .304 batting average and later managed Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Red Sox as well as several minor league teams.

Averill, an outfielder, came up with Cleveland Indians in 1929 and also played with Detroit Tigers and Boston Braves through 1941.

He batted .318 in the major leagues and had a son, Earl Jr., who also played in the majors from 1956 through 1963.

Harris was an infielder with Washington Senators and Detroit Tigers from 1919 through 1931 and also was a major league manager with Washington, Detroit, Red Sox, Philadelphia Phillies and York Yankees.

As a player he batted .274 and holds the major league record for most putouts in a season by a second baseman, 479 in 1922. But Giles said Harris was elected in the capacity of manager rather than player.

He won pennants in his first two seasons as a manager with the Senators in 1924 and 1925 and piloted the Yankees to the American League pennant in 1947. His teams won the World Series in 1924 and 1947.

Dudley and Favell Head Lacrosse League Draft

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — National Hockey League players Doug Favell and Rick Dudley head a list of 150 players drafted Monday by the six teams in the revamped National Lacrosse League.

League president Gerry Patterson said Favell, Dudley and Michel Blanchard were designated special bonus picks in the universal draft, which included players not already protected.

Favell, selected by Philadelphia, is a goalie for the NHL's Toronto Maple Leafs and was a forward last season with Philadelphia Wings of the NLL.

Dudley, chosen by Long Island, plays hockey for Buffalo Sabres and was a first-team all-star last season with Rochester of the NLL, scoring 81 goals in 28 games.

Blanchard was selected by Montreal.

The first player chosen was Dave Durant, who scored 42 goals and 69 assists in 24 games with Coquitlam, B.C., Adanacs, to win the Western Lacrosse Association scoring championship.

Other first-round draft choices were: Al Lewthwaite, Boston; Ken Winzoski, Montreal; Greg Thomas, Maryland; Doug Hayes, Long Island, and Derek Forbes, Philadelphia.

Greg Thomas, from Peterborough, Ont., is a goalie who played at Coquitlam, and Derek Forbes, a six-foot, two-inch, 215-pound defenceman, played with Toronto Shooting Stars of the Ontario Lacrosse Association Major series 1973 and spent six games with Maryland Arrows.

Philadelphia Wings, Maryland Arrows and Les Quebecois of Montreal are the only teams returning from last season.

Bruce Norris, who operates Detroit Red Wings of the NHL, shifted his Toronto Tomahawks to the Nassau Coliseum in Uniondale, N.Y., where they become the Long Island Tomahawks.

The other new teams are Quebec Caribous, operated by developer Victor Germaine and Roger Barre, an automotive industrial executive, and an unnamed Boston team owned by Boston businessman Jim Herscott.

Why Is Mother Bell Like Mafia? They Both Dislike Mouthy Morty

TORONTO (CP) — Morty Shulman must have a wider spectrum of non-friends than anyone around. Just a short list would include such diverse institutions as the governments of Ontario and Canada, the Seafarers' International Union, Bell Canada and the Mafia.

There is also some question about how many tears will be shed by his New Democratic Party colleagues when Dr. Morton Shulman, the pistol-toting, millionaire MPP, carries out his intention to quit when the Ontario legislature is dissolved for a general election this year.

Party discipline doesn't concern Morty much, just as it didn't when he was holding down a patronage job—in an earlier, Conservative incarnation—and got himself bounced as Toronto's chief coroner for disobeying orders and embarrassing the administration with an election coming up.

Shaking up the establishment - government or medical or whatever—is what he does best, especially if he's malfeasance. If the accompanying headlines put less flamboyant party colleagues in the shade, that's just too bad.

Morty Shulman is an improbable socialist—connoisseur of fine wines, collector of expensive objets d'art, market sharpshooter (he has been called on to testify in court as an expert on esoteric trading practices), traveller to far-off lands.

Add to these his roles as family physician, author, social critic, columnist, Mafia-watcher and all-round hair-shirt of entrenched power, and he comes out as likely the most multi-faceted of all the long list of Canadian lawmakers.

Does this round of activities keep Morty running hard enough? Not in the least. He admitted in a recent interview that he really wants to be Ontario's attorney-general, the fact that he's without legal training bothering him not at all.

In fact, he said, it was when he could not pin NDP leader Stephen Lewis to a commitment for the job before the 1971 general election that he decided he wouldn't run in another.

The leader and the backbench member for Toronto High Park do not form a mutual admiration society. Dr. Shulman holds the well-publicized view that he thinks Mr. Lewis is the wrong man for the leadership.

Mr. Lewis sides with those who consider that Morty's scatter-gun approach to the task of shooting down miscreants has a high cost in credibility. The doctor occasionally falls on his face in acting as a combination Ralph Nader and Sir Galahad.

"Sure, I lose credibility," Morty once acknowledged cheerfully. "I'm prepared to get clobbered once a week if I can get somewhere once a month."

The realities of political statistics may be thawing the chill of the party orthodoxy. At a recent NDP conference, one stalwart was heard to observe grudgingly that it's too bad "the son of a bitch" won't be running again.

This may have less to do with affection than with the fact that Morty, for all his consigning of te socialist catechism to the wastebasket, bounced in with the biggest margin of any NDP candidate—7,241—in the last election.

Whether or not the more sober political element loves him—and that doesn't bother him any—Morty has given the public a one-man circus for 10 years or so.

What other legislator has let his whiskers grow and sneaked into a smelter to sample the air pollution first-hand?

Or written a book (Anyone Can Make a Million) that sold one million copies and brought him $175,000?

Or spent such a franzied 19 months as Toronto's chief coroner that he inspired a TV series (Wojeck) about a crusading coroner?

Or travelled to Sicily, home of the Mafia, to see what he could find out (nothing) about its operations in Ontario?

Or run down a tiger with an automobile in India and had it turned into a rug?

Or had a hilarious fight with Bell Canada because they wouldn't let a call recorder be attached to a telephone listed under the name of his dog Lise?

The author of all these assorted doings—and a list of others as long as your arm—is a shortish, slim man who wears a diffident look and a guileless smile. Beneath the innocent exterior, a lot of zeal for the public welfare is boiling.

One of his favorite targets is the Mafia, which he believes to be big in Ontario though Conservative cabinet members won't even say the word publicly.

A royal commission on crime in Italian-dominated sectors of the construction industry, instigated by a tub-thumping Shulman crusade, reported late in 1974 that organized crime did have its tentacles in the industry at the time Morty was shouting but that the attendant hubbub had driven it out. It cited lines between supposed Mafia figures and some in the industry.

Dr. Shulman said he agrees that the construction industry now is "clean" but added that in Ontario organized crime is expanding, in such fields as loan - sharking, gambling, bookmaking, heroin and —a late-blooming enterprise—the pornography business.

"The Mafia is very big in pornography," he said.

Where does Morty get all his inside dope? He named some names in beating the drums for his royal commission and, if someone on the shady side of the street comes up with a broken leg or head, he often has an explanation for the man's troubles.

He obviously has excellent tipsters, many inside the government. He's also reported to keep—or have kept—a private investigator on his payroll and is known to spend more money on his work than he gets as an MPP.

When he was sniffing after construction crime, he took the advice of police and for a time carried a gun. Recently, he began toting it again after stirring up another hornet's nest over charges of thuggery in the SIU and cosiness between that muscular union and the federal Liberals.

By means unknown, he came up with a transcript of a talk between SIU President Roman Gralewicz and federal Labor Minister John Munro, recorded by Metropolitan Toronto police. The legal roars over that one are still rattling around the courts.

He has his ligher moments.

Sitting in as a newscaster over Toronto station CITY-TV once, he broadcast a flash that the old city hall—which occupies about a block downtown—had been stolen. At the close of the program, he reported it had been seen about 40 miles away and police believed an attempt was being made to smuggle it across the United States border.

The only reaction was several people asking him in the next few days whether they'd heard anything more of the city hall, which led him to suspect that people will believe anything.

What will he do now?

"It's time to do something else. I may do some writing, work out some other career. One thing, I don't imagine I'll be offered any big company directorships."

Shulman Will Quit

Morty Shulman must have a wider spectrum of non-friends than anyone around. A short list includes the governments of Canada and Ontario, the Seafarer's International Union, Bell Canada and the Mafia. There is also some question about how many tears will be shed by his New Democratic Party colleagues when he carries out his intention to quit when the Ontario legislature is dissolved for a general election this year. Dr. Shulman may do some writing when he retires from politics. (CP Photo)

Two Hyatt Regency Hotels Have Spectacular Lobbies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Franciscans and tourists alike are flocking to a downtown hotel just to ogle the lobby and its spectacular contents.

There's one something like it in Atlanta, Ga., where the architect who designed them has his headquarters. He is John Portman, and his eyepopping brainchildren share the name Hyatt Rgeney.

From the outside, from a certain angle, the 20-storey hotel looks like a stretched accordion set on end. Or is it a typewriter? Or a cash register on its ear?

But it's the lobby that has almost everybody standing stock still, staring in disbelief.

The triangular lobby is longer at its extremities than a football field, with a skylight topping its gallery-flanked upper reaches 170 feet overhead. Full-size trees and thousands of potted, hanging plants—15,000 ivy plants alone—decorate the lofty balconies.

The lobby floor is a mix of chrysanthemums, a huge sculpture, a glass-smooth reflectin pool, a brook that babbles, live birds, bars and a "sidewalk" cafe. The 18-months-old hotel at the foot of Market Street "is by all odds the most exhilarating, uninhibited and altogether spectacular space in the history" of this traditionally indifferent city, wrote local architecuralt critic Allan Temko.

Tour guides bring busloads of gaping non-guests to parade through the lobby.

"We get calls all the time," said Lonnie Calhoun, in charge of the hotel's public relations. "Everybody's welcome to visit here.

"We have had tours through even from the Soviet Union, architects, scientists, engineers. They've come from all over the world—Japan, Germany, all over. They all say it's the most spectacular building they've ever seen.'

She said the $50-million hotel enjoyed the most successful month in its brief existence in October — 100-jer-cent occupancy, with lines waiting at the reservation desk. The hotel has 840 rooms and rates range from $36 for a single to $200 for the executive suite.

Sun Soon May Heat Our Homes

FREDERICTON (CP) — Canadians may soon turn to solar energy to heat their homes as traditional energy sources increase in price, says Verne Ireton, an associate professor of mechanical engineering at University of New Brunswick.

Prof. Ireton said, "In the field of solar energy, the development is just beginning."

He said it will be possible to build a house in New Brunswick next spring incorporating solar energy collection for hot water and comfort heating.

One unit that has been developed, the Thomason solaris system, allows water to trickle over corrugated metal painted black.

Light passes through glass installed above the absorbing surface, heating the water.

The heated water is collected in a large storage bin containing fist-sized rocks. The energy is extracted from it to heat the house, using hot air.

Solar energy could provide about two-thirds of the energy needed to heat a house. He suggested an electrically-operated heat pump be used to supply the remainder of the energy.

"With current technology, it seems . . . that for Fredericton a desirable system could be flat plate collectors in a closed loop through which an antifreeze solution is pumped."

A flat plate collector unit is made up of a large panel of tubes. A solution of water and antifreeze is heated by the sun's rays as it passes through the tubes in the glass—covered black collector unit.

Shipbuilder Recalls Day Bluenose Lost

SHELBURNE, N.S. (CP) — James H. Harding recalls a day when a vessel took the measure of the famed racing schooner Bluenose.

Harding, master shipbuilder now retired in this south-western Nova Scotia port, built Haligonian from a design by the late William J. Roue, the creator of Bluenose.

Haligonian left the ways in 1925 and soon engaged in a sailing duel with Bluenose and her crafty skipper, the late Angus Walters, who always claimed Bluenose was never beaten.

That first race was a defeat for Haligonian.

"The sails didn't fit well and I didn't like the way she was ballasted," Mr. Harding said.

A little later, a grounding created the need for the shipbuilder to give Haligonian a new keel and at that time the schooner was refitted with proper sails and ballast.

In a subsequent Lunenburg fishermen's race, Haligonian scored a nine-minute victory over her illustrious opponent.

It was one of the few defeats Bluenose ever suffered and she was never beaten in an international series against U.S. opponents.

Mr. Harding, 90, recalled his career as a master shipbuilder, beginning in 1900 when as a 17-year-old he began crafting at the McGill yards in Shelburne.

"At that time, wooden vessels were in demand."

Practically all ships built at the yard were powered by sail—three-masted schooners were the order of the day.

Many of Mr. Harding's ships were built for use in the Bay of Fundy and Newfoundland areas while others eventrally carried cargoes of lumber in the West Indies and dried fish to Spain.

In 1903 he helped build the first auxiliary-powered fishing craft in Nova Scotia. The Arbutus, a 55-ton schooner, was fitted with a steeple-compound engine that ran on kerosene.

The shipyard turned out many of these boats for the sealing industry in the Bering Sea. They were delivered by way of a long voyage around Cape Horn to the West Coast.

In 1914, yard owner Joseph McGill died and Mr. Harding set up a yard of his own and named it Shelburne Shipbuilders. It was here that he gained his shipbuilding prowess.

The first vessel off the ways was a ferry boat for the Bay of Fundy crossing between Yarmouth, N.S., and Saint John, N.B., and as the First World War deepened the yard busied itself turning out ships.

In 1917, three three-masted schooners totalling 1,300 tons were launched, a Nova Scotia record.

One of the largest was the 400-ton Helen Mathers, which eventually blundered onto rocks at Herring Cove and became a total loss.

One of Mr. Harding's favorites was the 306-ton Flower dew, built in 1918 for Harvey and Co. of St. John's, Nfld.

"She turned out to be quite a handsome schooner and I became very proud of her," the builder said.

He turned out only one square-rigger in his career, the auxiliary-powered Paul Simone which he designed and built for the French government.

The boom in ship construction ended after the First World War. There was a job of refitting a 600-ton steamer and later he built two large fishing schooners, Dorothy O and Ethyl Ryan, for Newfoundland fishing concerns.

Because of the scarcity of building work, Mr. Harding and his workers turned more and more to refits and repairs

The builder particularly recalled a job he hated—converting an old freighter into a salvage wrecker.

The vessel was in terrible shape

"I was so disgusted when I got at her that I called up the owner and told him that I would like to have the work but I didn't think she was worth repairing."

Mr. Harding was told to do the job anyway and "the darn thing, I got her done . . . and the very first job that she got, she paid for herself."

By the mid-1920s Shelburne shipbuilders were deeply involved in building yachts for customers in the United States. It was at this time that naval architect and Bluenose creator Roue began designing yachts to be built by Mr. Harding's yard.

Prohibition brought more business as the Shelburne yard turned out craft used to run hard liquor into the U.S.

The fastest among these was the James Bee, which hit 27 knots on her trial run-fast enough to outdistance any government vessel.

"Among the rum-runners, the Flora Ann was one of the best I ever built," Harding said. Among other things, it had a steel deckhouse which gave a bit of added comfort in a gunfight.

Energy Gluttons

PARIS (AP) — "We are all energy gluttons without knowing it," the government told French citizens in a color advertisement launching a countrywide publicity campaign to save energy. The full-page ad in France Soir, the country's largest newspaper, showed a fire-spewing dragon belching out its energy resources in a cloud of smoke.

Top Diversion Hard to Stop

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister John MacBeth said Monday that employees might suffer from legislation prohibiting employers in service industries from diverting gratuities into wages.

Replying in the legislature to questions by Donald MacDonald (NDP—York South), Mr. MacBeth said he is not in favor of such practices.

He said legislation banning employers from pooling gratuities and using them as part payment for wages would bring increased pressure for changes in the minimum wage law, but said he would re-examine the situation.

He told reporters outside the house later there appears to be little the government can do.

Mr. MacDonald said in the legislature that the Labor Relations Act might be changed "to specify that gratuities which are either added to the bill or which are voluntarily granted and kept by management shall be treated as a trust and not as the pool out of which they pay wages."

Outside the legislature, Mr. MacBeth said all the law now requires is that employees be paid at least the minimum wage of $2.25 an hour. The minimum will be raised to $2.40 May 1.

Cab Service To Continue

TORONTO (CP) — The city of Peterborough will take over operation of the province's experimental Trans-Cab project in that community Feb. 8, John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communication announced Monday.

He said the service, which transports passengers in taxis between their homes or offices and nearby fixed-route bus stops, has operated successfully, decreasing public transit deficits to 59 cents a passenger from 67.

Prices Good

OTTAWA (CP) — Prices may fluctuate byu p to $3 a bushel but wheat farmers can expect good prices for some time, Otto Lang said Monday.

Mr. Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, reiterated in the Commons that farmers probably will be asked to produce another big crop this year. Although wheat markets were always volatie, there was no large world surplus and long-range interests favored a build-up of supplies.

Joan of Arc Role Should Suit Miss Reinking

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan of Arc has come down through the ages a heroine known for audacity, pluck, determination and chronic celestial visions.

Ann Reinking lists among her own traits adaptability, poise, persistence and an occasional nightmare.

Miss Reinking is preparing to portray the Maid of Orleans in a Broadway musical of prime career importance. Until now the Reinking forte has been much dancing, some singing and no acting.

"You can't stand still in one spot, no matter how good it is," she said. "You have to do something new, keep trying."

In true show-business tradition, Ann almost didn't get the chance to demonstrate dramatic potential. At her first audition the director wrote "no call-back" after her name.

He reconsidered, Ann later [illegible] "because he couldn't find anyone else that whole [illegible]." So, along with several others, she was summoned back.

After singing four songs from the score and reading some lines from the book, she got the nod to be Joel Grey's leading lady in Good Time Charley. The musical is due Feb. 24 at the Palace theatre following a tryout tour.

It centres upon the feeble princeling whom Joan inspired into becoming France's Charles VII—a character well-suited to Grey's insouciant, mercurial skills.

As for suitability as Joan, the lissome 25-year-old brunette has deliberately avoided looking at filmed performances by others so that she can find her own way.

"Since getting the part I've done a lot of reading about her. One thing I know—she had common sense, was pretty realistic and definitely believed in her voices.

"I'm hopeful the needed characteristics are inside of me, naturally."

Her Episcopalian upbringing provided "some exposure to religious fervor" which helps her to understand total pious obsession. The famous trial and immolation won't occur on stage—"I make a decent exit and come back once later to help Charles again."

Ann even saw a certain rightness for the part in her dominantly dancing background—"In those days dancing was popular and Joan did a lot of dancing herself."

In the musical, however, the only planned dancing for her will be a brief whirl during one of the triumphant battl scenes. Which is fortunate, in view of a mishap Miss Reinking suffered shortly after signing her contract for the part.

During a performance of Over Here!, a lively musical about the Second World War home front in which she had been gyrating since last October, Miss Reinking fell and cracked a vertebra.

Convalescence didn't affect the rehearsal schedule for Good Time Charley. She probably wouldn't have let it under any circumstances. Behind frequent laughter and banter, lurks resolute purpose.

"I did it on my own," Miss Reinking recalled of her arrival in New York from Seattle seven years ago in pursuit of an ambition that began when she saw ballet for the first time at age 10.

Ann has five brothers and a sister and her parents weren't happy about her desire for dancing lessons. An aunt who had nurtured operatic ambitions of her own came through with birthday benevolence, however, and subsequent events justified the gift.

"I never stopped classes after that," Miss Reinking said "and went after scholarships." By the teen years she was with the San Francisco Ballet Company.

"I'd announced when I was 13 that I wanted to go to New York instead of college—that gave my parents plenty of time to get conditioned."

She worked as a waitress for six months, "saved my money and flew to New York." A month later she was in the front line of the ballet corps at Radio City Musical Hall.

"When the curtain went up I had no idea the place was that big. All I could see was a million and one exit signs."

She moved on to a tour in Fiddler on the Roof, having decided road work would be "a marvelous way to break in, learn the ropes and get all the giggles out of you."

Once was enough, however, and aside from some stock turns and a brief marriage, Miss Reinking has concentrated on Broadway in such items as Wild and Wonderful, Cabaret, Pippin and Over Here!

Every once in a while Miss Reinking has a recurrent dream about having to go into a show suddenly without cue, preparation or proper costume.

"I don't let it worry me. I think everybody has something like that."

Actress Picks Canada for Study

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Awarded a national drama bursary, a leading New Zealand actress has elected to study theatre in Canada. The choice of Canada rather than Britain has been cited as an indication in current judgments on where the most interesting initiatives are taking place.

Lee Grant is one of New Zealand's most experienced and versatile actresses. She has played many leading roles for the Mercury Theatre in Auckland, one of the few firmly-established fully-professional theatre companies in New Zealand.

Awarded a $4,000 three-month overseas study bursary by the Queen Elizabeth II Arts Council, Miss Grant has opted to visit Canada later this year, particularly to study developments in Montreal and Quebec.

Her choice has brought comment on the standards of Canadian performances of the classics, and on acting, directing and designing talent, and on Canadian radio, television and film stadards.

Miss Grant intends to look at the French-language theatre and hopes to study the radio drama production system in Toronto.

Born in England, Miss Grant made her professional debut in dancing after winning a scholarship to the Royal Academy of Dancing.

Then she switched to musical comedy and played in several shows in England. But spinal trouble forced her to give up the stage until some time after the family shifted to Australia. There she spent some time as a cabaret singer on the nightclub circuit.

It was as a singer that she first became known when she moved again to New Zealand. But her engagement for serious acting roles at the Mercury Theatre ushered in a completely different career.

The mother of two daughters, Lee Grant has performed on radio and television as well as on the stage. She is so vivid a personality and one who puts so much concentrated thought into her work, that her visit to Canada is bound to make an impact on New Zealand theatre on her return.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Wednesday, Feb. 5

Aries (March 21-April 19) It's good to be optimistic regarding the outcome of events. It's equally important that your optimism is based upon fact.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A worthwhile opportunity will come through another. If you're not on the ball, you'll not realize its full benefits.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Weigh issues carefully before major decisions or you're likely to make an error in judgment difficult to rectify.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Work now for that which offers you an immediate return for your efforts, rather than banking on what the future may bring.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll be disappointed with some friends at this time if you expect more than they can give. Appreciate them for themselves.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be of service because you're needed, not because you think it will impress another. A job well done is your reward.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You have some good ideas but don't depend on others to supply the muscle. Success comes only if you do it yourself.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You still have impractical urges to spend beyond your means. Pull in your horns today or you'll be sorry.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have a tendency today to exaggerate a bit. It may make a more colorful tale, but you won't be believed.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be generous within reasonable bounds to one who needs your help now. Don't boast of your noble deed.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You still have to keep a tight rein financially. Don't spend foolishly for things unessential to your practical needs.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't deal in half-measures now or perform less than you know you're capable of. Set your sights on victory.

Are Many Causes Of Easy Bruising

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you explain to me a condition called "purpura?" Is there a cure for it, or anything to help it?—Mrs. W.M.

This is a blood coagulation problem in which easy bruising occurs. The usual cause is a deficiency of blood platelets, one of the essential blood clotting constituents of blood.

Other causes of the purplish-red spots on the skin can be a deficiency of vitamin C (scurvy), infections, certain allergies or anemias. Purpura can also be caused by an overactive spleen, the organ which regulates production of key blood constituents.

However, in many cases, purpura can appear without any apparent cause. a condition known as idiopathic thrombocytopenia.

Treatment of purpura ranges from use of steroid drugs to actual removal of the spleen in cases where the cause can be linked to overactivity of that organ.

In other cases where factors such as allergy, sensitivity to certain medicines, or infection, are causes, then treatment of the cause is necessary.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am bothered with diverticulosis. Constipation seems to cause it to recur. I have been taking a bulk provider to relieve the constipation but am wondering if it is wise to take it once a day in the presence of the two problems.—E.S.

You can safely take the medication daily. It is important to have adequate bulk in the diet for both constipation and diverticulosis.

If your medication is not helping enough, you might try one of the several stool softener preparations on the market.

More roughage in the diet might be helpful.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I recently had a kidney x-ray, and the result was negative except for a light formation of calcium. The doctor said not to worry because there is no danger.

Is there any way to dissolve the calcium from the kidney?—L.G.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there anything that can be done for arterial hardening in other parts of the body, something for which nothing can be done?

Incidentally, are there any blood thinners which are beneficial in general arterial hardening? My family has a solid history of this type of thing, and I would like very much to prevent or delay any such occurrence

I have had all sorts of tests, but no one will even suggest anything in the way of a preventative.—Mrs. E.L.M.

Arterial hardening (arteriosclerosis) is generalized usually, but may be more evident in certain areas, such as the extremities, the heart, kidneys and eyes.

If there is evidence of impaired blood flow, then thinners (anticoagulants) may be helpful in preventing more clotting, but they will not reverse the basic process of arterial hardening.

Extensive arteriosclerosis is often a family affair. But there is most certainly something you can do to keep the condition from getting worse. This goes for anyone, not just those who have it running through the family.

What you can do is control your cholesterol intake, keep a watch over your blood pressure and trim off excess weight. However, prevention should begin rather early in life. Once the process of arterial hardening has begun, little can be done to undo the damage.

Good Luck Lone Hope For Poor

ROME (AP) — "The roulette wheel of the poor is spinning faster than ever," reported Lietta Tornabuoni, newspaper columnist and observer of Italian habits.

She referred to the weekly national lottery, now booming, despite or perhaps because of, the country's worst economic crisis since the Second World War.

"Lotteries and contests have always prospered in poor countries, above all in black economic periods," Miss Tornabuoni wrote in the Turin newspaper La Stampa.

Social critics call the lottery "the tax on hope." While dodging other taxes with inventiveness bordering on genius, Italians seem willing to put more and more of their lire into the hope tax.

As the business crisis has deepened, the amount spent for lottery tickets has risen, climaxing with a record 5.2 billion lire, the equivalent of $8.1 million, one weekend in December.

Called Totocalcio, the lottery is based on each Sunday's slate of professional soccer games. Calcio is Italian for soccer.

A ticket costs the equivalent of 30 cents and on two Sundays this year several Italians, always anonymous, have been made richer by as much as $500,000.

Until the recent hard times, when Italians have been hit by an inflation rate of nearly 25 per cent, the lottery achieved its greatest success in the lean economic years of the 1950s.

Then busmen and barmen regularly plunked down 200 lire with the dream of becoming playboys.

But these visions are outdated, said Giulio Nascimbeni, columnist of Milan's Corriere della Serra.

"The psychologists maintain that the hope of making money without lifting a finger is part of human nature. But now it is a matter of the more elementary instinct of survival.

"Visions of villas by the sea and eternal cruises have given way to more prosaic things, such as paying the rent."

The bulk of Totocalcio's weekly gross goes directly to Italy's Olympic and sports program.

Lottery winnings are technically not taxable, but winners have learned that discretion is the better part of valor. One man who broadcast his good luck and deposited his good fortune in a bank soon found the tax auditor at his heels for "past evasions."

Things started out badly for South. East's king of diamonds held the first trick and he returned the eight. South could play either the jack or nine of diamonds, but whichever one he played would be covered by West. So South could count two diamond losers, plus the ace of hearts and a possible club.

He could handle that club loser by leading a heart toward his hand and finessing the 10 spot. If East held the jack, South's contract would come home; if East didn't, South would be only one down because while he would lose two hearts he would be able to get rid of his losing club later.

South didn't like this play and decided to give the opponents a chance to go wrong. He drew trumps with two leads and threw West in with his last diamond.

West had to decide between a club and a heart lead. Had he guessed the club South might well have gone down two, but as happens so often, West guessed wrong and led the four of hearts.

This took care of all South's problems in hearts and clubs and he made his rather doubtful contract.

Tax Bill to Be Passed By Weekend Says PC

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's 287-page omnibus tax bill might be passed by the end of this week, freeing the revenue department to begin mailing 1974 income tax rebates.

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative financial critic, said Monday night his party wants to debate the bill thoroughly but won't stall indefinitely for changes it wants.

"We don't want to hold it back," he said in an interview. "Perhaps by the end of the week we'll be finished."

The bill includes personal income tax cuts and other measures that apply to 1974 tax returns, already in the hands of taxpayers across the country. The deadline for filing is April 30.

But rebates for those qualifying, and sending in their returns early, cannot be mailed until the bill is passed, the government says.

It wants the opposition to speed passage and get rebate cheques moving.

Mr. Stevens questioned whether the bill must be passed to mail rebates.

"It's a technical thing but I think they could bend the rules enough to do it. . . . They seem to be using it as a tactical manoeuvre to pressure us to push the bill through. In any case . . . we won't filibuster it."

He said the Conservatives want to make a series of points before the bill is approved. It was still awaiting second reading Monday night.

Debate began one week ago, but was interrupted one full day for other business.

"For one thing, we're not satisfied with the $1,000 interest deduction," Mr. Stevens said.

It exempts all taxpayers from paying income tax on the first $1,000 interest income from savings deposits, bonds, dividends

But the amount is reduced by any interest a taxpayer pays out on loans, wiping it out altogether for anyone paying more than $1,000 in interest payments.

"This is unfair—it makes two classes of taxpayers," Mr. Stevens said.

The Conservatives also want amendments to delete controversial clauses applying income tax to royalties paid by resource companies to provincial governments.

"This whole federal-provincial resource dispute should be resolved by negotiation between Ottawa, the provinces and the (oil and gas) companies involved," he said.

"The Income Tax Act shouldn't be used as a bludgeon to impose a solution."

He said the Conservatives also will ask for a new clause indexing the capital gains tax rates to the rise in the cost of living.

This is already in effect for personal income taxes and should be extended to capital gains, he argued.

In addition, he said, Conservative MPs will ask for a clearer explanation of the home-ownership savings plan proposed in the bill. It allows first-time home-buyers to save $1,000 tax-free annually, up to a $10,000 maximum, toward the purchase of a new home.

As drafted, the bill contains loopholes that would open benefits to people who already own homes, he said.

"We're not opposed to this—as many people should benefit as possible—we just want to see if this was what they (the government) intended."

The income tax cuts in the bill range from $150 to $500 for 1974, rising to $200 and $750 for 1975.

Mr. Stevens, co-ordinating debate for his party, has called for an additional $500-million 1975 tax cut, a further break of $60 to $150 for individual taxpayers.

He said he does not expect Finance Minister John Turner to act on his suggestion immediately but it might be taken into account in March or April if the government brings down "a mini-budget" to adjust to economic changes.

Bonnie Prince Charlie Denies He's Bearded Fulham Phantom

LONDON (AP) — There he goes, the black-bearded Phantom of Fulham, flitting bat-like through London's shadowy alleys en route to another romantic rendezvous.

The Phantom, says a Paris publication, is none other than the young man destined to be King Charles III of England.

"What a marvellous idea," was the instant reaction of His Royal Highness to the report of nocturnal jaunts to the apartment of a girl friend in the district of Fulham.

Typically, Prince Charles saw one comic drawback to the disguise he cheerfully denied. False beards, he said, often blow away.

Britain's Royal Family doesn't generally comment on the gossip and rumor that constantly pursue their private lives.

But the free-wheeling 1970s have prompted a less-rigid royalty, given to a frankness unthinkable a decade ago.

Charles, at 26, has long been resigned to stories that portray him as an uncrowned Casanova.

"I suppose I must accept that what happens to me can be newsworthy, regardless of the context," he said in a recent interview. "Anyway, the time to get anxious is when nobody's interested at all."

That fate is unlikely to overtake Charles Philip Arthur George Windsor, Prince of Wales, Duke of Cornwall, Earl of Chester, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles and Great Steward of Scotland.

He's a multi-millionaire through ownership of vast estates and possibly the world's most eligible bachelor.

He can shoot, play polo and speak Welsh. He's a jet pilot, cellist, world traveller, scholar, parachutist, scuba diver, actor, businessman, naval officer—and humorist.

His humor can leap barriers.

Deep down in a coal mine in Nottinghamshire, he was introduced to a group of begrimed workers who took a sullen attitude to the royal visitor. One grumbled that he had lost his false teeth, which had fallen on a conveyor belt.

"Ah," said Charles, "I thought I passed a grin coming in."

That brought grins all round.

The prince hates questions about his image. "Am I some kind of washing powder, with a special blue whitener?" he once asked.

In Australia, pursued by reporters, he announced his intention of founding the SPCR—Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Royalty.

Charles was asked early in January if he had a particular woman in mind as a future partner.

"No," he replied "I wouldn't say anybody in particular at this moment."

A source close to Buckingham Palace said there were no obvious candidates among Europe's dwindling royalty, although "there are about 25 princesses between the ages of 19 and 27."

Of his two namesakes who sat on the English throne, the first had his head chopped off as a tyrant and the second went into the history books as "the merry monarch."

The future Charles III says he would prefer to be known simply as "a reasonable human being."

Neilsen Suspects House Phones Bugged

OTTAWA (CP) — Yukon MP Erik Nielsen asked Commons Speaker James Jerome Monday to inquire whether telephones in the Parliament buildings are being bugged.

Rising on a question of privilege in the Commons, the Conservative member said he believes a telephone conversation he had with a constituent earlier in the day was perhaps monitored or taped.

"It was not my imagination nor an echo," Mr. Nielsen said.

Mr. Nielsen, a lawyer, has raised the same question in previous Parliaments. At one point, the government asked a Commons committee to look into Mr. Nielsen's statements but he himself declined to appear on grounds the government had too severely limited the witnesses that might be called.

Mr. Jerome promised a swift investigation of the Commons telephone system. He said he hopes the explanation will be a technical fault.

Mr. Nielsen said he had been speaking with a person from the Yukon concerning a number of bills dealing with the territory.

"There was a disconnect . . . and then a repeat of my conversation as well as that of the constituent for about six to 10 seconds." said Mr. Nielsen.

Mr. Nielsen said the RCMP has admitted in the past "tapping several hundred calls, so it can happen here."

He also said that Prime Minister Trudeau had refused on national security grounds to give any information on monitoring of phone calls by the Defence Research Board.

It is important that MPs know whether their calls are being taped, Mr. Nielsen said.

Mr. Jerome agreed it was "a very important subject" and promised to look into the matter and report back either to the Commons or Mr. Nielsen.

Sunday Drama on CBC Protested as Indecent

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative William Scott has asked Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner to investigate complaints that a Sunday night CBC television program contained indecent material.

Mr. Scott (Victoria-Haliburton) complained in the Commons Monday that Performance, a weekly drama program, is too crude for television.

"I've seen portions of three out of four of them and they've been disgusting all the way through," he said later in an interview.

He said the latest program contained one section where a woman describes vividly how she had intercourse with her employer

Mr. Scott said his 12-year-old daughter was watching the program, when the objectionable sequence took place. The program started at 9 p.m. in Ontario.

He said he had numerous complaints from constituents and is waiting for Mr. Faulkner's reply.

Number Getting $20,000 Increases Fourteen-fold

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of federal civil servants earning $20,000 a year or more rose by almost 1,300 per cent in the last six years, statistics tabled in the Commons Monday indicate.

The figures show that 16,868 civil servants in 29 government departments were earning at least $20,000 a year last fall compared with about 1,225 in 1968 and 1969.

Danson Says Housing Prices Will Move Closer to Costs

WINNIPEG (CP) — Barnett Danson, federal minister of urban affairs, said Monday that housing prices soon will be more closely in line with production costs.

Mr. Danson told the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (Hudac) that mortgage rates have been reduced and prices stabilized by federal assistance to moderate and low-income buyers.

He said those planning to buy a new home have no reason to delay.

Land prices, after rising for two years at a rate that could not be justified in terms of costs, are due to roll back, Mr. Danson added.

He said a marked shift is expected away from expensive houses to low and medium-price ranges which is where the federal government will focus its support.

He said the federal government goal of at least 210,000 housing starts for 1975 is modest one compared with 268,529 starts in 1973 and 222,123 in 1974. But the economy would be overheated if starts rose above the 250,000 level.

Mr. Danson also pointed out that inflationary forces have moderated in the last few weeks with a decline in interest rates. Housing prices in many areas are also dropping, or at least levelling off.

He said the federal government is committed to launching a national warranty program for home buyers, which likely will be administered by a board on which the industry's voice will be something less than 49 per cent.

Representatives of government and consumer groups would make up the balance of the board. Mr. Danson said, however, he does not want to give the impression that such a scheme can be implemented overnight.

The conference was told that an industry-initiated warranty program to protect buyers of new homes will be launched in Alberta next month. Qualified builders, who have shown they are financially stable, are currently being registered under the plan.

Klaus Springer, chairman of Hudac's Alberta council, said in cases of bankruptcy or fraud by builders, the consumer will be protected to a maximum of $20,000 per unit against the loss of his deposit and down payment.

The scheme will also guarantee the normal one-year builder's warranty and will protect the owner against loss from major structural defects during the ensuing four years. The limit on the four-year guarantee will be $20,000.

A major aim is to provide conciliation in disputes between homeowners and builders. The homeowner will be able to get an inspector to investigate a grievance for $50, which will be returned if the complaint proves justified.

Ships' 7,000,000 Tons Of Sewage 1 Pct. of Total

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons learned Monday that crews of ships plying the Great Lakes will flush an estimated seven million tons of human sewage into the waterway during the next five years.

The estimate, contained in a written answer tabled in the House, is based on the "usual 32 gallons of flush water per person per day."

The information was tabled by Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve for Bob Brisco (PC—Kootenay West). It said crews provide less than one per cent of all the waste entering the lakes.

The Conservative MP asked a series of questions on measures that would stop the waste from entering Great Lakes waters.

Mrs. Sauve's answer said it is estimated that the average costs of putting waste holding tanks on ships ranges between $23,000 for new tugs to $74,000 for new lake ships.

The cost for existing tugs would be $28,000 and $81,500 for existing lakers.

If proposed Great Lakes sewage discharge regulations are put into force this year, 12 shore reception facilities for the discharge of ships' sewage will be built in the next five years, said the answer. The cost of these facilities would be $2.5 million plus any land costs.

In the next five years there might be shipboard secondary treatment plants. These would cost in the neighborhood of $80,000 each.

Quebec Gives Games Okay

QUEBEC (CP) — The original concept of installations for the 1976 summer Games, including a permanent Olympic Village, was given the go-ahead Tuesday by a Quebec national assembly committee as it adjourned three weeks of hearings into costs and construction of the Games site.

Despite proposals for a temporary village to house Olympic athletes, the committee acknowledged a permanent structure is the only viable solution since the minimum $20-million cost of a temporary building would be non-recoverable after the Olympics. In any case, the committee said, there would be insufficient time to complete a temporary village on time at this stage.

The committee agreed the concept of the permanent village has the possibility of recovering the building costs—estimated now at $55 million—by way of the sale of converted condominiums following the Games.

Even with a renegotiated contract between the Olympic organizing committee and the builders of the village—cutting losses to a maximum of $10 million—there was no "real choice" left but to back the project, Municipal Affairs Minister Victor Goldbloom said.

3 Governments Invest
Aid Pledged To Syncrude

OTTAWA (CP)—Faced with the threat of losing development of the vast Athabasca oil sands, the federal, Alberta and Ontario governments announced Tuesday they will invest $600 million in the proposed Syncrude Canada Ltd. extraction plant.

Announcement of the heavy government investment in the plant came following two months of negotiations between governments and oil companies and a threat by Syncrude to close shop unless it found additional financing of $1 billion.

That additional financing has been found in a compromise between the companies and the governments, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said in the House Tuesday.

Ottawa will pour $300 million into the venture, Alberta $200 million and Ontario $100 million, the minister said in a statement.

But the three oil companies that own Syncrude—Imperial Oil Ltd., Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. and Canada-Cities Service Ltd.—will have to invest an additional $400 million on top of the $1 billion they say they already have tied up in the project.

Syncrude President Frank Spragins said in Edmonton Tuesday night the company can live with the arrangement and the project "is now in a full-go position."

"I think there is one objective," he said, "that is to make Canada self-sufficient in oil."

But the Alberta legislature was not nearly so satisfied, as cries of "bad deal" rang through the chamber when Premier Peter Lougheed announced the arrangement and Alberta's participation.

The announcement, made simultaneously in the Ontario and Alberta legislatures, said the investment will give Ottawa 15 per cent of the Syncrude shares, Alberta 10 per cent and Ontario five.

Although that will leave the three oil companies with 70 per cent control of the project, Mr. Macdonald said outside the Commons majority public ownership still is possible.

Alberta will provide half the additional $400 million company investment through bonds that can be converted into 10 per cent of the Syncrude shares at a later date.

In addition, the Alberta government acquired an option on 20 per cent of the consortium's shares in a tax and royalty agreement negotiated more than a year ago.

If Alberta does pick up another 30 per cent of the shares, the governments will hold 60 per cent of Syncrude and the oil companits 40 per cent, Mr. Macdonald said.

Hoarding of Change Advocated by Labor

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Ian Reilly, vice president of the Quinte District Labor Council, says he will bring the federal government "to its knees" by hanging onto $10 in change.

Mr. Reilly said at a labor meeting Tuesday, "in support of striking workers employed at the mint, we should work to heighten the country's coin shortage."

He suggested each council member go down to the bank and purchase $10 in coins and "hold onto it until the strike is settled." Mint workers have been on strike for three weeks "and the federal treasury board (negotiators for the government) is making no effort to get the men back."

Labor Council president Doug Sword said he personally had purchased $19 in coins for the purpose.

"If every member of the council did this, we'd be hanging onto an awful lot of change," said Mr. Reilly.

A resolution was passed by the group endorsing the scheme.

The public service alliance — of which mint workers are members — is said to have $11,000 in "hoarded coins." The union has 150,000 members.

The alliance, in its newsletter this week, urged all members to hoard coins to "accelerate a settlement."

Gregory Says Kennedy Slain In CIA Plot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comedian Dick Gregory gave the Rockefeller commission what he said Tuesday was new evidence that President John F. Kennedy was the victim of a Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) assassination plot.

Gregory's claim was based on amateur movie film of the assassination and on a newspaper photograph made soon afterward. Both had been examined previously by investigators including the Warren commission, which conducted the official government investigation of Kennedy's death.

A spokesman for the Rockefeller commission, created by President Ford to investigate allegations of domestic spying by the CIA, said "we will consider every bit" of evidence presented by Gregory and two associates.

Rail Rate Increase Cut Back

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission rolled back today the entire 25-per-cent rail freight rate increase filed more than two months ago by the railways.

However, the commission left the door open to the railways to file increases immediately amounting to about 12.5 per cent. The commission indicated it would allow the new rate immediately without the normal 30-day waiting period.

The commission ruling extends the original time for filing the 25-per-cent rate increase so that the full increase will not take effect until March 1. The railways have been charging the full rate since Jan. 26.

The decision follows an intricate series of legal moves arising from a commission ruling more than a month ago permitting half the 25-per-cent increase to come into force Jan. 1. The rest was postponed to March 1.

The rate increases affect about 52,000 shippers and 22 per cent of rail freight traffic.

Labor Council Favors Tunnel

by COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A tunnel under the Bay of Quinte is the Quinte District Labor Council's answer to the problem of replacing the swing bridge connecting Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

The labor council passed a resolution Tuesday endorsing the tunnel approach and asked that the tunnel be located in line with the Loyalist Wallbridge Rd.

"Tunnel construction creates more jobs than high level bridge construction," said Ian Reilly, first vice president of the labor group.

"It'll cut out the snow plow operator, when it's built, though," quipped another council member.

"They'll still need someone there full time to make sure no one gets stuck," Mr. Reilly returned.

The tunel concept will be the labor position at any of the public meetings scheduled to be held for public input, said Doug Sword, president of the labor council.

Native People Expect Action Following Edmonton Conference

EDMONTON (CP) — Federal and provincial justice ministers were told Tuesday that Canada's native people expect them to act on policy changes recommended by the national conference on native people and the criminal justice system.

The ministers were to attend a public meeting here today to discuss proposals contained in reports compiled by 12 conference workshop committees during the last two days.

Gloria George, vice-president of the Native Council of Canada, told a news conference that native delegates expect government officials to take action on the conference proposals.

"The money is there for many projects but until now most people haven't known that," said Ms. George. "Native people are not going to forget about this conference. We want some action."

A report by the Inuit (Eskimo) workshop recommends 10 major changes in training for the RCMP, including orientation of officers in Inuit homes and approval of officers by northern community councils.

The Inuit report also demands abolition of what it calls discriminatory RCMP regulations which discourage Inuit and native people from joining the RCMP special constable program.

The report says a minimum height requirement is one of the major problems because "Inuits are not tall people."

Another workshop report recommends that Section 91 of the British North America Act, which restricts laws applicable on Indian reserves to federal and band statutes, be enforced by the federal government.

The report says for the last 100 years the federal government has ignored the section and allowed provinces to enforce provincial laws on Indian reserves.

Quebec Uranium Plans Make Trudeau Uneasy

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is opposed to nuclear projects which would compete with the Canadian-built Candu reactor, Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday.

But he did not rule out tht possibility of Ottawa approval for the proposed construction of an enriched-uranium plant by French interests in Quebec.

He said in the Commons that a summary of federal requirements, including foreign investment restrictions and safeguards on export of nuclear materials, has been forwarded to Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa, whose government is considering the possibility of building an enriched-uranium plant at James Bay.

The Candu reactor, which Mr. Trudeau termed the best in the world, uses natural uranium. Most foreign-built reactors use enriched uranium.

Tuesday, the prime minister fielded a barrage of Commons questions on the proposal, prompted by publication of a memo from Energy Minister Donald Macdonald to the prime minister, expressing concern over the Quebec proposal. The leaked memo apparently was sent in mid-November to Premier Bourassa before his trip to France.

Outside the Commons, he said Ottawa is not enthusiastic about the proposal but will listen to arguments in its favor. He doubted that Quebec and France would sign any pact without federal clearance.

Heath Quits Conservative Leadership Race After Rebuff

LONDON (CP) — Conservative members of Parliament snatched the party leadership from Edward Heath Tuesday in a surprise vote that gives Margaret Thatcher a chance to become Britain's first woman party leader.

Heath, prime minister from 1970 to 1974, dropped out of the leadership battle hours after Mrs. Thatcher, 49, beat him in the first round of the contes.

But the former education minister still has a hard fight for victory. Longtime Heath backer William Whitelaw, 56, announced that he will be on the second leadership ballot next Tuesday.

Whitelaw, who used to be Heath's state secretary for Northern Ireland and now is party chairman, bills himself as the candidate who can reconcile Heath loyalists with the Conservative right wing that formed Mrs. Thatcher's power base.

A second ballot is needed because Mrs. Thatcher's first-vote win fell short of the clear majority of the 276 MPs necessary for victory.

She got 130 votes to Heath's 119. Another 16 went to MP Hugh Fraser—never a serious threat—and 11 other Tory MPs abstained.

For Heath, 58, the vote spelled the end of a 10-year turn as leader which began to sour in labor strife and inflation while he still was head of government, and collapsed with two electoral defeats to Labor last year.

Technically, Heath is leader until the party hierarchy approves the MPs' eventual choice. But he already has passed leadership duties to Conservative finance critic Robert Carr.

Mrs. Thatcher, the grocer's daughter who became a tax lawyer and minister in Heath's cabinet, said her voting strength was a surprise.

"It was a few more than we had dared to hope," she said.

Of her chances in next Tuesday's ballot: "I believe we can win."

Marmora Briefs

Borrowing Bylaw Passed

A borrowing bylaw of $80,000 was decided upon at Saturday afternoon's Marmora and Lake Townships Council meeting in case it became necessary to obtain a bank loan during the reconstruction of the boundary road and other tentatively scheduled road improvements.

Library Budget Discussed

Howard Bleecker, chairman of the Marmora — Deloro — Marmora and Lake Union Public Library Board, presented the board's 1975 budget requirements at the recent townships council meeting.

Because of increased usage by residents of the townships, the board felt an adjustment in the levy from $500 to $700 was warranted. To correspond, Marmora Village's portion would be altered by a similar amount to $1,400 while Deloro Village's levy would remain the same.

Mr. Bleecker reported that Marmora Village has 127 adult and 100 children users; Deloro Village has 42 adults and 75 children readers and Marmora and Lake Townships have 103 adults and 95 children using the libraries, for a grand total of 542.

Roads Prompt Meeting

Marmora and Lake Townships Council will meet Saturday, Feb. 15, to decide how the municipality's road bylaw allotment of $99,375 will be spent this ye ar.

Road committee chairman John Wilkes commented that there is a big road list to do this year and wonderd if the O'Connor-Ridgeway road might not have to be done over two years.

The townships' road engineer has authorized a start on the O'Connor-Ridgeway road whenever the property is clear of all encumbrances. Council decided to turn the matter over to the municipality's legal counsel to clear the title and then register the deed to the road allowance.

Bill Must be Paid

Doris Bingham will be required by Marmora and Lake Townships Council to pay a $20 snowplowing bill which she has been withholding in protest against the lack of road repairs which she said had been promised.

Commenting that the present council could not be responsible for what last year's council did not do, Reeve Ritchie Wells promised that the matter of a broken culvert would be looked into later in the spring.

Mrs. Bingham said she had lost a day's work when the culvert caved in, trapping her car.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to only one call for assistance in the 4-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today.

Tuesday, Feb. 4 11:18 a.m. — Quinte Body Shop, 200 Front St. hole burned through fire pot of oil burner, little damage.

Education Centre Figures Corrected

In a story which appeared on the first page of the second section of Tuesday's Intelligencer, there were three errors in figures included in a story about the Rotary Club's Monday tour of the Hastings County Board of Education Centre at 156 Ann St.

Eric Runacres, director of education, confirmed a mention of the $55 million operation referred not just to the building itself, but to the plant, buildings and sites around the county under the board's jurisdiction.

In addition, the cost of converting the former 64-year-old Queen Alexandra Public School, a 45,000 square-foot building was $14.92 a foot for a total cost of about $675,000.

"It is the least expensive administration centre built in Ontario on a square-foot basis," pointed out Mr. Runacres. This was determined from a provincial survey, he added.

Also, about 1,000 teachers and other educators have utilized centre facilities since September, he noted. An average of about 50 people use the building for conferences and workshops each day.

Morris To Take Sabbatical

E. T. Morris, a superintendent with the Hastings county board of education has been granted sabbatical leave for the 1975-76 school year. He will attend the University of Sussex near Brighton for a master of arts course in curriculum development and educational technology.

The course, says Mr. Morris, deals with the management of innovation and is given in co-operation with Brighton Polytechnical Institute where the technological aspects will be taught. Only 12 students are admitted annually to the course which compresses two years of master's degree work into one year.

Mr. Morris, who already holds one master's degree, was superintendent with the Trenton Board of Education before the formation of the county board in 1969. He now is superintendent of special services, conerned with special education, research and development.

Permit Bylaw Amended

PICTON — Picton town council has amended a bylaw requiring building permits for all construction and repairs over $100.

Councillors agreed permits should not be required unless improvement or construction costs total $500 or more.

The bylaw was amended after councillor Richard Byers pointed out the $100 figure was "inordinately low".

He said the building inspector is forced to spend a great deal of time visiting homes where minor repairs such as new steps are under way. This limits the time left for inspection of major alterations.

"The bylaw is now merely an annoyance," observed Mr. Byers during a council meeting this week.

Picton deputy - reeve Larry Richardson observed many of the building permits granted by council in 1974 were for small repair jobs.

Council voted to amend the figure of $100 to $500 as a requirement for permits.

Picton Cemetery Grant Carries Two Conditions

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Picton town council has agreed to grant $7,500 to the Glenwood Cemetery Company this year with monthly reports by the cemetery board to council as a provision. The grant cannot be approved until an agreement for these reports has been prepared by the town clerk.

The decision followed a meeting last week between cemetery board members and council's finance committee.

The session was called after a board spokesman Lindsay district Judge George Inrig, addressed council in January requesting an annual grant of $10,000, for the cemetery company as it was without funds for operation.

He said without the grant the board would be foced to turn the cemetery over to the town for maintenance and operation.

Chairman of council's finance committee, Bessie Ward, said the grant of $7,500, would be paid to the cemetery company in seven equal monthly installments beginning April 1, 1975.

Committee member Harry Abram added the services of the public works department also had been pledged informally to assist in grading, piling and chipping of cemetery roads.

Several councillors stressed the grant should not be made unless council is permitted a voice in cemetery board action.

Although town clerk Andrew Jarvis was named as council's appointee to the board it was suggested one representative could not exercise any effective control.

Town solicitor Jack Ward expressed concern in making a donation of this size to a private corporation.

"This organization can do as it likes," he noted.

He said the board " requires a push to do most anything" and is "not a very ongoing, active organization."

He commented council is entitled to assurance on paper of regular meetings of the board and of written reports to council.

The solicitor added a number of local residents have lost enthusiasm for upkeep of the cemetery through the years as they watched its deterioration.

"If you are giving them $7,500, you ought to have some say about what they are doing with it," said Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson.

He commented the cemetery board does not meet often enough and seems to oversee poorly.

Finance chairman Bessie Ward estimated operation of the cemetery could cost the town from $30,00 to $35,00 annually if it became council's responsibility.

Councillor Harry Abram predicted the public would demand increased service if the town operated the cemetery.

The cemetery board has funds invested on a long-term basis but at low interest rates that do not offer sufficient assistance to ward operating costs.

"You may very well have it all to say if you push them too hard. They will dump it in your lap," cautioned councillor Harry Abram as council's wish for a voice in the board's operation was mentioned.

Councillor Bessie Ward volunteered to serve with Mr. Jarvis as a town representative to the cemetery board.

Post-surgical Life Can Be Handled

TRENTON — Part of the work the association Vernon Wannamaker heads is simple. It provides essentially technical advice to someone who has had his bowels or kidneys removed.

The other part isn't es easily accomplished. Mr. Wannamaker, president of the Quinte Area Ostomy Association says many people find it difficult to adjust to their new condition.

Many fear that their activities, whether they be social or physical, will be severely curtailed.

This need not be the case, said Mr. Wannamaker Tuesday.

Part of his vocation is to explain to someone who is about to, or has had an operation to remove a damaged or diseased organ, that life will not change radically. There will be differences however.

"We try to get people familiar with the new mode of life that they will have to adopt," he said.

Himself an ostomate, Mr. Wannamaker said only ostomates counsel under provisions set down by the association. It now has 30 members in the Quinte area and is less than a year old.

Given the youth of the Quinte branch, and despite what he says is the 8.5 million ostomates in North America, the public knows little or nothing about the problems they face. The local branch is currently engaged in a drive to make Quinte communities aware of the association.

To a lesser extent, general practitioners and other members of the medical profession are not fully aware of an ostomate's problems, said Mr. Wannamaker.

Mr. Wannamaker emphasized that his group is not called in to counsel anyone without the consent of the therapist or surgeon dealing with the patient.

"In no way do we interfere with the medical profession," he said. "On his (a doctor's) instructions we go.

"And we certainly don't violate the doctor's instructions."

The association now is in the process of training additional counsellors under the direction of the group's medical board of advisors. It hopes to expand its medical board to aid in what it considers to be its prime purpose — rehabilitation.

Broadfoot Heads Revue

TRENTON — The Trenton Rotary Club is sponsoring the appearance of Canadian comedian David Broadfoot as headliner in Take a Beaver to Lunch.

The comedy revue is scheduled for Trenton High School auditorium Wednesday, March 5.

On the same bill is Carol Robinson from the 1974 season Andy Williams Summer Show. She has also appeared with Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster on Canadian television.

Learning Young

Vic Jackett of Stirling takes his brood of young skaters across the ice during their skating lessons. Leading the group is Tracy McCrory, 4. Troy Flemming is next in line and three-year-old Tina Pitman brings up the rear.

Trappers Rejected

PICTON — Picton town council has refused to support a resolution forwarded by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority (PERCA) for endorsement of a predator control program through hiring of trappers.

The PERCA pointed out in a letter to council, that the ministry of natural resources in Napanee now is pursuing such a program to eliminate "problem animals" in areas where severe livestock losses are reported.

"If a trapper were here what would he trap?" asked councillor Charles Hepburn.

He suggested more dogs than wolves would be snared and suggested a wolf bounty as a better solution to the problem.

Divers Seek Grant

Tom Bryant, left, and his brother Gerry of Henry St. Stirling, appeared before Stirling council this week to ask for support for themselves and four others in getting a govern ment grant to carry out a work project in the village this summer. Trained divers, the two teenagers are seen checking over their diving equipment.

Byers Unsuccessful in Bid To Block Chief's Allowance

PICTON — Town council this week passed a bylaw providing a retirement allowance for retired police chief George Pitt after a recorded vote was called by Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson.

Deputy-reeve Richardson requested the recorded vote after councillor Richard Byers moved the bylaw granting chief Pitt $100 a month for life should not receive third reading.

"I oppose this bylaw on a number of grounds," said councillor Byers.

"Council should decide what it is doing here and why. It occurs to me there can be only two reasons," he said.

He added the pension supplement could represent either appreciation for services rendered or a consensus the existing pension is inadequate.

"Council should distinguish which reason," he stressed.

He said council should ask if the retired chief's pension is inadequate and, if so, if this would be council's responsibility.

Councillor Byers added it would be difficult (to assess what is adequate and said this is not council's responsibility.

He noted a standard of adequacy might be altered in the years ahead should the retired chief take other employment.

"Are we encouraging existing employees to look at their pension and ask themselves why they should pay into them if the town will look after them—anyway?," he questioned.

Councillor Byers said if the ex-chief's retirement allowance, in fact is a token of appreciation it should be presented at once, either as a gold watch or a lump sum of money.

He suggested a lump figure of $5,000.

"It should be paid now, once and for all and then we don't have to deal with it next year and the year after and with all those who will line up behind," he observed.

Councillor Norman March said the retired police chief did take out OMERS (Ontario Municipal Employeers Retirement Services) but the plan was not available in time for him to contribute for the needed years to gather the full amount.

Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson pointed out in a vote at the January session of council the pension supplement was approved by a vote of 5-to-3. Two supporters, Mayor Donald King and reeve Ross Cronkwright, were not in attendance at this month's council meeting when the issue was raised again.

The deputy-reeve expressed concern that the bylaw might be defeated in a vote not truly representative of council's intent.

A motion by councillor Byers against carrying the bylaw to third reading before the whole council was defeated in a recorded vote of five to one.

The retired police chief will receive his first monthly retirement allowance of $100 on March 1, 1975 and it will continue until his death.

Skating Class Includes Many Three-year-olds

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Reporter

STIRLING — Scott Mathieson doesn't go for that kid stuff when it comes to skating. Vic Jackett, 167 Edward St., Stirling, who is his skating instructor, had to call him back to his own class the other day after he had taken off like a shot along with older skaters down to the far end of the Stirling rink. Scott is three years old.

Mr. Jackett has been teaching little people to skate here for six seasons. Most of his students are four to six years old, but he has had them down to two years of age. The day he was interviewed there were several who were there. Each year he has about 25 tots to teach.

"I came down here to skate on my day off, and the girls were trying to run a skating program," Mr. Jackett said, "and I gave them a hand. I took the smaller ones because I am not skilled with fancy figures."

"I have no books to guide me. My own family is exceptionally good at skating, and I observe youngsters doing what I figure is wrong and try to correct them," Mr. Jackett said. "The big approach to skating is to try to get them balanced."

Mr. Jackett said that the youngsters are skating reasonably well in six weeks, but it actually takes three years to develop them. When they are seven or eight they move on to the intermediate class, depending upon their ability.
Take 2

The intermediate classes are instructed by Lee Anne Bryant, Marjorie Potts, and Eleanor Bailey. They have been doing this for about eight years for free. About 100 youngsters each year take advantage of these free lessons at the Stirling arena.

Mrs. Bailey and Mrs Potts teach the intermediates backwards skating, how to cut corners, the beginning fundamentals of figure skating, "how to look good on the ice."

Mrs. Bryant instructs the fundamentals of figure skating, spirals and spins. "We are not going to turn out a bunch of Olympic stars," she said, "but if they are really good we recommend they go to Belleville for training."

Neighbors Rebuild Fire-ravaged Home

MARMORA — So far 30 people have volunteered to rebuild the McGrath home three miles north of Marmora on Cordova Rd., which was destroyed by fire two weeks ago.

This Friday evening a dance will be held in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, Marmora, to raise funds to assist the family, which lost almost everything. Mr. McGrath said there was $5,000 insurance on the house, and "you can't build much with that."

Bill Doyle, along with Harold Carman and Jim Hughes have been spearheading the drive to get assistance for the family, and said "The more people we get out for the benefit dance, the better. Everybody is welcome."

"We have got perhaps five good violinists, three good piano players, and other musicians," they said. "We are trying to arrange it so nobody is tied up for the evening."

The cost is $5 per couple, and the bar opens at 8.30 with dancing starting at 9. Ladies are asked to bring items for lunch.

Two days after the fire neighbors started to rebuild. Most of it is going up by voluntary help, said Mr. Doyle. He said Clarence Revoy, a retired carpenter, has volunteered to work for a week.
Take 2

Ed Anstay, of Pickering, who buys beef cattle from Mr. McGrath, has provided a trailer for Joe, his wife, Thelma, and son, Dennis, 6, to live in while the house is rebuilt.

Educational Progress

A relationship between human nature and teaching methods in Ontario — say in North Hastings — and China?

Consider some parallels: firstly, from a recent North Hastings Associated School Group seminar in Bancroft aimed at determining the qualities of a good teacher and at making recommendations on teacher evaluation.

Superintendent Frank Tate was quoted by The Bancroft Times as suggesting that modern philosophy called upon the teacher to evaluate himself ,"and in attempting to provide a measurement scale for evaluation he called upon the usual jargon pharases of, 'individualizing education', 'student centred learning,' 'teaching the students and not the subject,' 'providing student growth.' "

The Times article went on: "While there was no attempt to clarify any of these pharases, Mr. Tate was quite positive in stating that teachers were not there to transmit knowledge to the students."

If those of us who went to school in an earlier time find this sort of concept puzzling, it is not surprising.

But then we find Hastings director of education Eric Runacres coming up with the same line of thought. He stressed that the emphasis today should be on student learning. He referred also to his own booklet, "Let's Look at Learning," which suggests that teaching success should be measured by the learning that goes on rather than by the stage performance in a teacher-dominated lesson.

Noted The Times article: "He apparently rejected the possibility that there might be learning going on in any teacher-dominated lesson. A teacher's main role is as a stimulator and an integrator, and his activities as a teacher should provide enjoyment of learning by the students. ."

Well education is evolving all the time and no doubt some will make sense of these concepts. There must be teachers too who combine the necessary stimulus, interest and motivation with the imparting of knowledge.

As for China, if they all dress alike, it's not necessarily a case of "think alike" or everyone in the same psychological groove. Jonathan Sharp of Reuters reported recently that students are not above making forthright verbal attacks against their teachers.

They are taking their cue from a mere 12-year-old student called Huang Shuai, who made national headlines last year. She wrote a diary accusing one of her teachers of overdoing discipline and stifling pupils' initiative. Her diary was in the People's Daily front page, she appeared on television and she was among prominent personalities at the 25th founding anniversary of the people's republic.

We are not suggesting students here embark on a flurry of verbal or written criticism of their teachers. Just remember this is not Peking or Lian, but there do seem to be a few parallels in this between the system here and the one in China. And we are confirmed in the belief that education can never remain static, but must flow with the times.

Where's The Discipline?

All the seminars and all the talk about "self-evaluation" of course cannot hide the fact that discipline is an increasingly neglected factor in the schools. Controversy still rages over use of the strap, and while Canada may regard itself enlightened — in that it is little used — it does mean the student troublemaker has too much rein.

In recent days a Toronto teacher, Barrie Donath was struck in the face by a classroom pest who had been throwing books around and whom he was leading from the room. Donath was told that a little closer and he could have lost an eye.

The incident was a carbon copy of the sort of thing that is happening in some Toronto schools at least — as described in an article in The Globe and Mail last June by a city secondary school teacher, Tom Markowitz.

It may be linked too with the growing crime rate in this province, which if allowed to continue — by neglect of discipline in the home and in the schools — will mean increasingly serious problems for law enforcement in the province.

Ethiopian Military Junta Faces Growing Dissidence in Eritrea

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Eritrea is a large East African territory, part of the Ethiopian state since 1952 and lying along the steaming Red Sea's African coast facing Muslim and Arab states on its other shore.

Until it was assigned to Ethiopia long after the end of the Second World War and for about 60 years previous, Eritrea was one of Italy's now vanished major colonies in Africa. Without it, Ethiopia had remained a huge land-locked kingdom in Africa, relying on a single railway line with its terminus in Djibouti, Red Sea port and capital of the French colony in Somaliland.

Since 1963, Eritrea has been wracked by attacks and now a major internal civil war carried out by the ever-growing Eritrean Liberation Movement, a stuggle which the deposed Emperor Haile Selassie was unable to end, and now the new ruling junta of socialist-oriented officers have inherited.

A struggle for Eritrean independence which some of them had blamed on the oppression of the Haile Selassie regime, now has become very embarrassing for them. As socialists and reformers, one would imagine the Eritrean Liberation Movement could deal more easily with them on terms for Eritrean separation from Ethiopia.

Unfortunately the young officers, as much as the deposed and aged Haile Selassie, are victims of history and of the essentiality of Eritrea remaining part of the Ethiopian land mass.

In many ways, it was the Italians who were to blame for the distinct separation of the region from the rest of Ethiopia, not only territorialiy, but for what they accomplished in modernizing the region, comparing it to the squalor of nearby Ethiopia in the early years of the absolute monarchy of Haile Selassie.

From their first conquests in the region, until it became part of the much larger Italian East Africa (the name between 1938 and 1941 for a conquered Ethiopia), Eritrea blossomed with Italian out-pourings in building, road-laying, town-site planning and industrial development skills.

Fascist dictator Benito Mussolini, immensely proud of Italy's empire in Africa, completed the jobs of his predecessors in making Asmara a modern port on the Red Sea, no mean task in a region where normal daytime temperatures reach 120 degrees.

From a spot where Eritrean tribesmen used to water cattle, Asmara became a modern Italianate city in Africa, and in 1934-35, the major jumping off point for Mussolini's Ethiopian invasion.

Eritrea then entered a more modern period than did neighboring Ethiopia, (except for its brief period of Italian rule, 1935-1941), when these two territories plus Italian Somaliland were wrested from Italy during World War Two.

Without Eritrea and Asmara, Ethiopia would have no ocean outlet. But the Italian modernization phase gave Eritreans a sense of difference about themselves and Ethiopia.

Under Christian Emperor Haile Selassie, Eritrea was the only Christian window on a distinctly Moslem sea, a point of faith which probably doesn't bother the Eritrean guerrillas as much as the anti-religious young officers now ruling in Addis Ababa.

Like the emperor they unseated, the officers have no alternative but fight to hold the big coastal region. Eritrean nationalists in turn say the Organization of African Unity should be moved out of its Addis Ababa headquarters since the country housing it won't give Eritrea its freedom.

Davis' Fight to Hold Power

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO The main political question of the moment in Ontario, and one which obviously is more and more on the public mind, is can Premier Davis make a come-back?

he premier himself has made it plain that he is conscious of this—for one thing he reportedly said he would in future be taking off the kid gloves and putting on the brass knuckles.

And in line with this he has been much more aggressive in public.

But can he sell himself?

An intriguing aspect of the situation is that the premier essentially has to try and defend the sins of others.

What is not too frequently realized is that though he has had largely to take the blame, it has been the actions of others which have brought on the series of calamities which have beset his government.

The one prime bad decision he made personally was in cancelling the Toronto Spadina expressway.

This was a personal decision. And it now has backfired resoundingly (And it carries a lot of weight in the key Toronto area) in that it has had to be reversed.

But to take some of the other incidents.

There was the question of the Fidinam building, the expensive new Workmen's Compensation Board headquarters. The decision to go ahead with this was not one of the government's but of the WCB.

The same with the controversial new Hydro headquarters.

This was a Hydro decision, and weeks of inquiry found n culpability on the part of Davis.

There were the conflict of interest matters involving Darcy McKeough and Dalton Bales.

These didn't even happen under his leadership.

There was the COGP report which has government administration in a mess.

But this wasn't a Davis report. It actually had been ordered by his predecessor John Robarts.

In the public mind, however, a political leader tends to be his brother's keeper.

It holds Davis responsible. And trying to knock out this impression, even with brass knuckles, could be an impossible task.

Nothing New Under the Sun...

Editor's Note: The following editorial appeared in Harper's magazine October 10, 1847. Given the uncertainties of our own day, it would appear that little has changed.

"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not in the lifetime of any man who reads his paper has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so dark and incalculable.

In France the political cauldron seethes and bubble with uncertainty. England and the British Empire is being sorely tried and exhausted in a social and economic struggle, with turmoil at home and uprising of her teeming millions in her far-flung Empire.

The United States is beset with racial, industrial and commercial chaos, drifting we know not where. Russia hangs like a storm cloud on the horizon of Europe — dark, menacing and foreboding.

It is a solemn moment, and no man can feel indifference, which happily, no man pretends to feel in the issue of the events.

Of our own troubles, no man can see the end:........"

Liberals Display a United Front Which is Lacking Among the PCs

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — One of the things hurting the Conservatives and damaging their election chances in the last five federal campaigns has been their questionable credibility as an acceptable alternative to the Liberals.

Perhaps the fault lies with the quality of Conservative leadership which frequently seems to lack whatever it takes to impose the necessary party discipline required to keep the parliamentary ranks in tight and rigid line.

The Liberals may not be always, nor even frequently right. They can, and often have, put the public nose out of joint.

But right or wrong, in public favor or out, when they decide on a line of policy they toe it, standing united one and all in the face of any opposition.

You might not always like their stance in every situation, but at least you know their position.

With the Conservatives, you never know.

Can't always be sure that the leader is in full charge.

Often wonder if the party has one chosen position on an issue and the cohesion enough to stand united on it — or whether it is every faction, regional group, or even MP for himself.

Like on the strike at the Royal Canadian Mint.

Whose side were the Conservatives on, anyway, the strikers' or the taxpayers'?

The 600 employees of the Mint, most of them here in Ottawa — the few in Winnipeg had not yet started to work — struck for a 22 percent wage increase in each half of a two-year contract for a fancy 44 percent.

The Mint, a Crown Corporation, offered 10 percent the first year and 8.5 percent the second.

Compromise, as it must in all public service pay disputes, brings settlement.

Fair enough, except that:

- In Winnipeg the Mint employees never did start work — the new plant, still under construction, wasn't operating — so striking was an academic exercise.
- And the Public Service Alliance, making public mischief and creating increasing commercial inconvenience, urged all civil servants to use only paper money in the hope of taking all change out of circulation.

So, as in most public service strikes, you, the taxpayer, were the designated victim.

Silver, already in tight supply, became even more scarce, with the banks, merchants, and in turn, consumers feeling the pinch.

And where did some Conservatives stand on the issue?

With the Mint strikers, and against what the Acting Tory House Leader, Walter Baker, termed "the government," which, of course, as always, is the taxpayer.

There was Walter Baker accusing "the government" of, as he put it, "freezing out or sandbagging negotiations."

How was "the government" doing this?

By refusing to agree to a mediator's proposals, he explained, and declining to collapse or knuckle under to what obviously "the government" considered excessive wage demand pressures.

Whined Walter Baker, "the government" was refusing to budge.

The federal payroll carries nearly half a million people, and says Treasury Board President Jean Chretien, they have kept "far ahead of inflation" with generous salary increases — one of them being an annual automatic pay raise — in the last six or seven years. (Have pensioners done that well?)

Jean Chretien, a "toughie" in the ranks of the Trudeau Cabinet, has served notice on the ever-growing and generously-paid public service that the easy years of over-fat settlement are finished.

There will be no more euchring of the taxpayers, he promises, by public service manipulation of collective bargaining through mediation.

Punitive Taxes are Jeopardizing The Future of Mining in Canada

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The tax squeeze on Canadian mines, combined with the squeeze on their selling prices, could be choking the life out of the industry.

Since last spring, Ottawa and all except the Atlantic provinces have been ganging up on the industry with tax increases that are openly discriminatory and punitive.

During the same period prices of metals on world markets have been falling sharply. Copper was priced at more than $1.50 a pound last April; today it is quoted at less than 55 cents.

To the industry's critics these trends are all to the good and hasten the happy day when mining will be socialized.

They contend that mines pay too little taxes, create few jobs, are an implement of foreign domination, and ought to be suppressed in favor of the more labor-intensive secondary manufacturing and service industries.

The mining industry itself has been largely inarticulate in the face of the campaign against it. Apart from an advertising campaign that its association ran last summer, most mining companies have been operating behind a veil of secrecy.

The head of one major mining company came out from behind that veil the other day to point out the implications of recent developments from the industry's viewpoint.

"Present circumstances won't force the shutdown of many existing operations, but few new projects that aren't government-sponsored or artificially induced will be undertaken in most of Canada in future," said Alfred Powis, president of Noranda Mines.

"The level of exploration will be inadequate to replace, much less enlarge, the reserves being extracted. Nor can this stagnation and decline be readily reversed."

Noranda's average effective rate of tax on mining operations in 1973 was about 50 per cent, Powis said.

But in 1975 it will vary from about 60 per cent in Ontario and Quebec to more than 100 per cent in Western Canada.

British Columbia levies a gross royalty on basic production, plus a new "super-royalty" calculated on selling prices of minerals.

Saskatchewan has introduced a tax on ore reserves in the ground, a highly complicated tax on potash reserves eventually designed to achieve government ownership or control of all new potash mines.

Manitoba's mining taxes have been sharply increased on an interim basis, while Ontario and Quebec have brought in steeply graduated taxes on mining profits.

The federal government twisting the knife, has disallowed these new provincial levies as a taxable business expense.

The industry whose future growth is being blocked is a major element in the Canadian economy.

In world terms, its output ranks behind only the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. Mining accounts for four per cent of Canada's gross national product directly and another eight per cent indirectly, while providing about one-quarter of our export earnings

The industry employs three per cent of the labor force directly, and contributes indirectly to the employment of another 12 per cent.

Making a mine calls for capital on a big scale—and here the industry has been hit hard by inflation. According to Powis, developing a new mine today would cost twice as much as it would have three years ago, and five times the 1965 figure.

Mining companies have scant hope of attracting such big-scale capital now that the prospect of earning a reasonable return is gone.

The outlook, then, is for continued operation of existing mines until they run down, but little or no work on new mines unless it is by government—in other words, by the wonderful folks who brought you Churchill Forest Industries and the Great Egg Mess.

Washington's Dilemma Over Vietnam

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — Despite Henry Kissinger's exasperated comment to reporters Thursday night that he "can't understand starting the whole Vietnam war debate again," the debate is on — competing successfully against all odds, with profound national concerns about recession and energy shortages.

Critics of the state secretary are inclined to blame Kissinger and President Ford for reviving the painful divisions of the past with their insistence on an additional $300 million in aid for South Vietnam, at a time when welfare cuts for the poor and the aged are being proposed to save the federal budget.

The White House thesis is that the money is urgently needed to sustain Saigon's defensive capabilities against anticipated Communist offensives and to maintain U.S. "credibility" which Ford said "is essential to our national security."

Besides, Ford insists, Congress has already approved the money in a vote last year.

The White House originally asked Congress for $1.4 billion in aid to South Vietnam for the current fiscal year. Congress approved $1 billion of the request, but in a separate vote to appropriate the necessary funds the amount was reduced to $700 million. Ford now wants the missing $300 million restored.

Congress has shown little disposition to swallow the White House argument. Leaders of the majority Democratic party in the Senate have denounced the aid request, and even such erstwhile hawks as Henry Jackson (Dem. Wash.) and Robert Byrd (Dem. W.Va.) are opposing it.

"Once again we are hearing the same old arguments and the same old controversies over the same old war," said Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.).

He accused the White House and the defence department of using "threats and scare tactics," by leaking captured Hanoi documents and warning that Congress would be blamed if South Vietnam fell in a threatened Communist offensive.

President Nguyen Van Theiu has probably not helped his own cause.

Criticized in the U.S. Congress for corruption and dictatorship, Theiu staged a calculated series of interviews this week with American correspondents in Saigon and managed to imply that his military setbacks were the fault of the United States.

Even without such tactlessness, a revival of the Vietnam debate in Washington was all but inevitable because of the timing of Ford's request for aid.

It came so close to the second anniversary of the Paris peace accords—which brought U.S. military withdrawal from Vietnam and the return of American war prisoners—that it was bound to coincide with protest demonstrations, speeches and editorials recalling the intervening two years of warfare.

In addition, the request came at a time when Communist military successes have returned the Vietnam war to the front pages after it had languished for months among the want ads—dull, untidy paragraphs about continuing human misery.

Anthony Lewis, a New York Times columnist and consistent critic of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, deplores the "familiar self-deception" of American leaders in the current debate.

Referring to President Ford's statements about credibility and national security, Lewis recalled the decade of public statements by government officials and politicians justifying the U.S. presence in Vietnam and seeing victory just around the corner.

And he asks: "Can anyone still believe that hanging on in Indochina has enhanced the world's belief in American strength and our ability to use it wisely?"

Hees Finds PM Quick With Quip

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative George Hees set a trap for himself in the Commons Tuesday by trying to make political hay of Finance Minister John Turner's oft-reported prime ministerial ambitions.

Mr. Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings) asked about "the traumatic shock" to Mr. Turner after Prime Minister Trudeau's weekend statement about not leaving Ottawa until the bilingualism program is a complete success.

"Would the prime minister outline how complete is 'complete' so that the minister can sleep more easily?"

Mr. Trudeau replied that "everyone knows about the excellence of the bilingualism of the minister of finance."

"If it's true he was traumatized by my statement, it's undoubtedly because the honorable member for Prince Edward-Hastings is so slow in this direction."

Mr. Turner sat with a grin on his face during the exchange between the prime minister and the unilingual Mr. Hees who frequently has verbal duels with Mr. Trudeau.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's replacement for the Veterans Land Act (VLA) is expected to be put before Parliament soon, Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald said Tuesday.

TORONTO (CP) — A bill amending The Highway Traffic Act, including provision for automatic suspension of drivers' licenses upon conviction of impaired, dangerous or careless driving charges, was given final reading in the legislature Tuesday, and now goes to the lieutenant-governor for assent before becoming law. The amendments provide for a suspension of three months on first conviction and six months on a subsequent conviction.

TORONTO (CP) — High levels of cancer-causing asbestosis among workers in a Toronto-area plant were revealed Tuesday by Stephen Lewis to a committee of the legislature.

The NDP leader said government figures showed 35 of 63 approved claims from Ontario workers to the Workmen's Compensation Board since 1970 for the disease and for mesothelioma, an asbestos-linked ailment, were filed by employees at the Canadian Johns-Manville Co. Ltd. plant.

MPs Spend Another Day Debating Tax Measures

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Parliament shouted, pleaded, dozed and laughed their way through yet another day of debate Tuesday on the government's 287 pages of proposed income tax changes.

It was the fifth day the Commons has spent on changes outlined in the Nov. 18 budget and more speakers were ready to take the floor when proceedings adjourned for the night.

The opposition parties say they do not want to delay passage of the bill unnecessarily, but that they need time to explore thoroughly all the changes proposed in the huge document.

Stan Darling (PC—Parry Sound - Muskoka) complained Tuesday, that the bill should have been served up in smaller portions so members could have examined it in detail.

The bill would reduce personal income taxes by a minimum of $150 and a maximum of $500 for 1974 and a minimum of $200 and a maximum of $750 in 1975.

It would exempt from taxation any income, up to $1,000, from interest on savings accounts, dividends or private pension plans. However, interest on loans would be applied against the exemption.

Another proposal affecting 1974 returns is the plan to allow taxpayers tax-free savings of $1,000 annually, up to a total of $10,000, for purchase of their first home.

Mr. Darling said the government is taxing wage earners to the hilt and spending the country into the poor house.

Jake Epp (PC—Provencher) also raked the government for its spending, saying it feels that the way to govern better is to spend more and more.

He said Finance Minister John Turner brags about reducing taxes, but the government is taking in more tax money. It would raise $11 billion through direct taxation for 1974 and a projected $16 billion in 1976.

The bill also includes hotly-contested proposals to tax provincial royalties paid by resource companies. This touched off a constitutional fight between Ottawa and the oil-producing provinces last year.

Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) said the British North America Act—Canada's constitution—clearly gives the provinces jurisdiction over natural resources in their territories.

He attacked the Liberals and Conservatives for not having faith that petroleum resources can be developed without the multi-national oil companies.

Dental Plan Costs High

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller said Tuesday a publicly-financed dental plan would cost the province upwards of $250 million a year.

He was replying in the legislature to opposition questions on the government's response to a proposed Ontario Dental Association (ODA) plan.

Mr. Miller said the ODA was asked by his ministry last year to work out the mechanics of a plan with ministry representatives on the understanding that it might not be implemented in the near future.

He said cost of the implementing first stages of a plan for three-to-six-year-olds has been estimated at $20 million.

He would not say whether the government is considering introduction of a plan.

Bishops Balk At Union Plan

TORONTO (CP) — The bishops of the Anglican Church of Canada said in a statement Tuesday they are against the proposed plan of union for the Anglican Church, the United Church of Canada and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

"The plan of union in its present form is unacceptable," the statement said. "Most of us doubt that there is serious hope for a successful outcome to a further revision process.

"We base this conclusion in part on the perception that our churches have not yet reached a common mind on faith and order,' the statement said.

"We think also that the climate of feeling, at least in our own constituency, seems at the present time less favorable to organic union and more disposed towards other expressions of unity."

Talks on union, which would have brought into being a new church of 3.5 million members, are taking place this week. The United Church has about two million members and the Anglican Church more than one million.

The smaller Christian Church joined the negotiations in 1969. The merger was to have ended more than 30 years of discussions on church union.

The 30 bishops from 28 dioceses prepared the statement during closed meetings last weekend They said they feel they are supported in their desire to seek other approaches to unity by members of the church.

Copies of the statement were forwarded to the church's national executive council; the United Church and the Christian Church.

No Delay Is Planned In Airport Decision

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand said Tuesday he will not delay a decision on construction of the Pickering airport until a new national transport policy has been presented.

"No one would expect we should paralyse the whole department of transport for that," he replied to a Commons question by New Democrat Ed Broadbent.

"How can we possibly paralyse a corpse?" shot back the NDP parliamentary leader to the delight of opposition MPs who have been criticizing the department heavily in recent days.

Baby Food Labels Said Misleading

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department is awaiting receipt of a U.S. report on baby food ingredients before making a detailed response to possible misleading labelling procedures, a department spokesman said Tuesday.

Charging that baby food companies are deceiving the public, 58 Congressmen and two consumer groups Monday petitioned the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to require full ingredient disclosure and percentage labelling of baby foods in the U.S.

"Current baby food labels are misleading because they give the impression that the contents are pure product—egg yolk, beef, apples—when in reality, they contain significant amounts of non-nutritious ingredients," said Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal.

All Kinds of Cheese to Please

Cheese 'n' Onion Pie will fast work its way onto the list of favorites. It is simple to prepare but hearty and filling. It depends on fine Canadian Cheddar cheese for its special flavor. You can always count on that flavor because our cheesemakers produce one of the finest in the world. Start by sauteeing the onions in butter then combining them with eggs and grated cheese. Pour the filling into a pastry lined pie plate and bake 35 minutes. It's best served hot from the oven and goes well with grilled sausages or bacon and sliced tomatoes.

Then try some of our other cheese recipes.

two tbsp. butter or margarine
two tbsp. chopped onion
two tbsp. all-purpose flour
1½ cups milk
⅛ tsp. white pepper
⅓ cup cracker crumbs
one tbsp. butter
tomato slices for garnish, parsley sprig

Grease bottom and sides of 1½ or 2-quart casserole. Cook macaroni in 4 cups boiling water with 1 teaspoon salt, 15 minutes until tender. Drain. With a paring knife and firm-handled spoon scoop out centre of Gouda leaving a half-inch shell. Shred enough scooped out cheese to make two cups shredded Gouda. Wrap and store the remainder; use later for sandwiches or cube-style appetizers. Preheat oven to 300.

In saucepan melt butter; cook onion until transparent. Blend in flour; stir in milk. Cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add shredded Imported Holland Gouda. Remove from heat and stir until cheese melts. Season with white pepper. Add drained macaroni and mix to coat macaroni with cheese sauce.

Coat greased casserole with crumbs; place Gouda shell in casserole. Fill with Gouda and macaroni mixture. Garnish with tomato slices. Sprinkle with remaining crumbs. Dot with butter. Bake for 45 minutes. Just before serving top with sprig of parsley. Serves four.

Gouda-Tomato Fondue

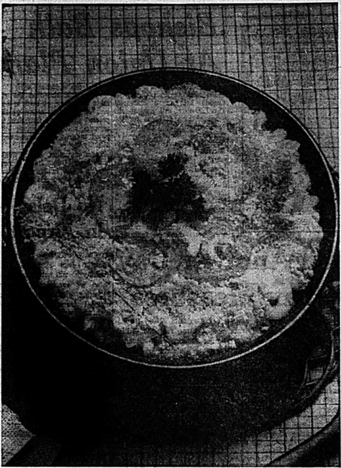
In same skillet, saute onion until golden.

In a large bowl, combine sauteed onion, eggs, cream, milk, parsley, pepper and nutmeg.

Sprinkle cheese over bottom of pastry shell; top cheese with reserved sausage. Pour egg mixture over all. Bake on the lowest shelf in preheated 425 F. oven for 15 minutes. Reduce oven to 300 F. and bake 40 minutes longer or until custard is set. Serve hot.



Macaroni cheese takes on a new look and flavor when prepared with Holland imported Gouda. Dress up the dish with breadcrumbs and sliced tomatoes and surprise the family with this new version of an old favourite.

Going It Alone And Liking IT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Going it alone—and liking it—is the norm for the modern unattached woman, says the head of a national real estate financing and servicing organization.

"Today about 9.3 million single, divorced and widowed women live alone, maintaining their own residenes apart from their relatives.' said Marshall Dennison, president of Associated Mortgage Companies, Inc. Add to this number about seven million women who head families and you have the makings of unprecedented demand for housing geared to suit the female on her own."

Dennisen noted that at mid-century only 3.7 million single women were residing in their own apartments and homes and just three million divorced and widowed women were out tackling familiar responsibilities.

As for the predilection of the liberated female, it's metropolitan living that catches her fancy.

"Seven of every 10 single women dwell in the major cities or their immediate suburbs," Dennsion said.

"The reasons: greater job opportunities, chance to participate in the diverse life of a metro-centre and, conceivably a better selection of single men.'

Where do these women like to live? "Looks kyward," Dennison suggested.

"Female renters are a staple of the high-rise, in-town apartment market. In recent years, they have become important participants in the condominium-purchase scene as well."

He said the movement of women into metro-environs has sparked the current boom in all-amenity buildings.

"Much of the emphasis on large lobbies, secretarial service, swimming pools, recreational rooms and even rooftop gardens stems from the emergence of women in the rental field."

Dennison observed that younger females — the under-30 group—prefer a downtown dwelling, especially a high-rise which offers an opportunity to socialize within the building.

"There appears to be a correlation, however, among women with a five-figure income profile, increasing years and-or familiar duties and selection of a more quiet or suburban setting. A duplex on a tree-lined city street or a smaller townhouse or mid-rise garden apartment in close-in suburbia is a frequent choice.

"Proximity to transit lines and open spaces appeals to these higher-salaried older women or to working mothers who seek a respite from the bustling downtown area but still desire access to the city's advantages."

Do these modern-day female pioneers enjoy their new-found status?

"Decidedly yes," he said, "if their growng numbers are any indication.

"But as for finding 'Mr. Right in or near the city—that's another question entirely. The single female set still outlives and outnumbers the male of the species."

Ann Landers

Credibility on the Line

Dear Ann Landers: Your credibility is on the line, Baby. Better come up with a good answer to this one—or else.

Your response to T.L.S. was, "Relax—no letters are kept on file in this office. We destroy every letter the moment it has been answered."

How then are you able to rerun a letter, word for word, months later, if the original letter is challenged? I also refuse to believe that "every letter written to Ann Landers is seen only by me or one of my competent, close-mouthed secretaries." Why then must we send our letters to our local newspaper where, I've been told, they are screened and a very small number sent to you?

It seems to me that anyone stupid enough to sign his right name to a damaging confession should be informed that the news media in that person's home town has first crack at it. If I'm wrong, give me one good reason for this roundabout mailing approach to your desk.—Not So Dumb

Dear N.S.D.: First, I can produce old letters verbatim months after they've appeared because I keep scrapbooks which contain every column I've ever written.

As for the roundabout mailing approach, it's a pain in the neck to me, and not many papers do it. You happen to be reading me in one that does. Ninety per cent of the papers publish a P.O. Box number.

It is not true that your local newspaper office opens and screens the letters and sends only a selected few to me. If you have any evidence to the contrary let me know immediately and I'll see that a stop is put to it.

A few papers ask readers to send their letters to the local office so they can gauge the mail pull and evaluate my readership. They are not interested in nosing around. The letters are forwarded, unopened.

The following is a rerun, which I could have found in my scrapbook had the reader described it or given me the date. In this instance, however, the reader sent the column, yellowed with age, and wrote:

Dear Ann: The best ccolumn you ever wrote has been in my wallet for several years. It is barely readable, but I'm sure you can make it out. Please run it again so I can carry it around for another decade.—Your Friend

Dear Friend: Tith pleasure. Here it is:

Dear Ann Landers: You get many letters from people who are lonely. They wonder why.

Yesterday, a person I work with complained that no one likes her. I sat down and listed the personality and character traits I dislike most. Strangely enough, out of the 10 traits, this person has seven. Please print the list. It might help some people see themselves as others see them.

1. A compulsion to show off knowledge.
2. Exaggerates to the point that it's the next thing to lying.
3. Moodiness. Friendly one day, unfriendly the next.
4. Bossiness. Must run everything.
5. Not reliable. Word is no good.
6. Chronic complainer. Inveterate crepe-hanger.
7. Nosy. Asks questions that are none of her business.
8. Gossipy. Knows everything about everybody. Makes you wonder what she is saying about you.
9. Says things in anger, then tries to smooth things over by buying a gift.
10. Always fishing for compliments but never gives any.

Doris Clark

No Excitement Left

Dear Doris: I was disappointed that you made no mention of children with learning disabilities possibly having another trouble. They should be advised to be screened for hypoglycemia before going on with child guidance and with other examinations.

You said that you had never heard of a learning disability being passed on from parent to child. Doris, you just don't know where it's at, in this area.

I have a cousin, a school teacher, who is working with learning-disabled children. She regonizes that she had a certain kind of mental block herself, and that one of her sons has much the same kind.

She has had a fair amount of success with orthodox methods on her learning-disabled children but does not dare to go ahead with referrals to orthomolecular therapy because there is just too much discrimination against children on megavitamin therapy — discrimination by the teachers!

They seem to think that anyone who does this is just plain kookie. Teachers don't try any more to help that child. Yet I know that it helps, where the problem is really low blood sugar. We nearly all get too much sugar and could do with a more wholesome diet.

Dear Anonymous: I hope the correspondent who has the learning-disabled child is reading us; I would be glad to refer her to authorities on the subject of hypoglycemia.

It is questionable whether a learning disability is inherited, as even in the type of case you mention, mother and child are together very early in life and the mental block could be picked upthrough the influence one has on the other.

However, I do not pretend to be an authority on something which is within the medical and psychiatric field. I will give references to people who do know more about it, when I am asked.

The Experts Say

Master the Basics—Then You Can Upholster

EDMONTON (CP) — If you can reupholster a footstool or a kitchen chair properly, then you've mastered the basics of furniture upholstery, says Dieter Rahn, a partner in Expert Upholstery Ltd. here.

Mr. Rahn started in a Winnipeg furniture manufacturing company in 1952.

The German-born upholsterer recommends that beginners start with something easy—either a footstool or a kitchen chair. From there, it is easy to branch out into more difficult projects once the basic techniques have been learned.

Most basic materials can be obtained at any reputable upholstery store, and costs needn't be high. Essential materials include fabric, upholstery tacks, a magnetic upholstery hammer, cotton padding, a bit of denim and thick thread if a household machine is being used. Fabric varies between $8 and $12 a yard, padding is about 75 cents a yard and half a pound of tacks costs about $1.

"The most expensive item is the fabric," says Mr. Rahn, who refuses to recover furniture for homeowners if he feels the fabric they want is "junk."

He recommends material made of 100-per-cent nylon, which is available in tweeds, floral prints, and velvets, and is both durable and easy to clean. The next best choice would be a blend of 67-per-cent nylon and 33-per-cent viscose or rayon, "but don't reverse that combination," he warns.

Yarn-dyed fabric is preferable to piece-dyed fabric because it won't expose white threads when it begins to wear.

"Look at the edge of the material when it is cut," Mr. Rahn advises. "If there are no white threads, the fabric is yarn-dyed."

He recommends "expanded vinyl" which has a layer of foam between the surface and the linen backing for kitchen chairs.

"Expanded vinyls are easier to work with because they stretch, and they stay soft longer than unpadded vinyls."

While Mr. Rahn recommends that beginners enrol in a course to learn the techniques, he says simple upholstery may begin at home.

Should a beginner choose to recover a footstool, the first step after selecting the fabric is to trace the base pattern with chalk onto the fabric. The fabric is then cut half an inch outside the seam line, providing a seam allowance.

If a square or rectangular stool is being recovered, the mid-points on all four sides are marked and one-quarter of an inch snipped off at each side. A line is then drawn from mid-point to each side, and trimmed, making the centre half-an-inch larger than the sides to allow for padding.

One layer of padding is then draped over the stool, and trimmed so that an extra inch covers all sides.

"Then place the material over the padding, and turn the one-half inch seam allowance to the outside, so the material will be flat."

Tacks are placed halfway between each corner, taking care to pull the fabric straight down rather than sideways to eliminate wrinkles. The corners are tacked; then permanent tacks are driven in about two inches apart beginning at the centre, and the four mid-point tacks are removed.

The seats of simple chairs are recovered the same way, pulling the fabric down as tightly as possible on the front corners before tacking.

Women May Volunteer

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesian Defence Minister P. K. van der Byl says his ministry is considering the use of volunteer women to assist the country's security forces. He said 200 women already work for the army and air force in civilian jobs.

Promotes Poultry

CHICAGO (AP) — Nutritionist Bo Ock Lum suggested eating turkey or chicken all year long, not just on holidays. The University of Chicago professor said poultry has less fat than steak, if the skin is removed, and is cheaper.

Urges Restraint

Dr. Jacques Genest feels society should guard against the potential dangers of over - experimentation in medical science. Dr. Genest, director of the Clinical Institute of Montreal, plans to bring together international and Canadian figures from a broad range of scholarship for meetings and symposiums as a new study centre in the clinical research institute, Scientific, ethical and moral questions arising from research activity in the manipulation of genes, test-tube babies, euthanasia and psycho-surgery will be among the topics studied. (CP Photo)

Grave Dangers Are Seen In Medical Experimentation

MONTREAL (CP) — Medical scientist Jacques Genest says the wisdom of society as a whole must be marshalled to guard against possible grave dangers resulting from proliferating developments in medical experimentation.

That is the thinking behind a new study centre scheduled to open soon, said Dr. Genest, director of the Clinical Research Institute of Montreal (Institut de Recherches Cliniques de Montreal), professor of medicine at University of Montreal and physician at Hotel Dieu Hospital.

He told a reporter the aim of the centre is to bring together international and Canadian figures from a broad range of scholarship—including philosophy, sociology, law and theology as well as medicine—for meetings and symposiums on the great questions of the day.

"Many developments are coming all at once," said Dr. Genest. "The impact on humanity may be great and must be studied in depth in a multi-disciplinary way.

"We wish to alert the public and governments to problems which have implications for our Canadian community and all mankind."

Scientific, ethical and moral questions arising from research activity in the manipulation of genes, test-tube babies, euthanasia and psycho-surgery will be among topics studied at the centre, housed in a newly-constructed extension of the clinical research institute.

Dr. Genest, 55, said many issues raised in medical experiment today have caused profound unease in numerous countries and concern all elements of society, not only medical scientists.

"Contrary to some opinion, medical scientists are deeply aware of the need to become fully integrated with the larger community," he added.

The research institute, which stands opposite Hotel Dieu Hospital on Pine Avenue near the heart of Montreal, has approved an initial budget for the study project. But Dr. Genest also hopes for government assistance and donations from private interests.

The fluently bilingual French-Canadian scholar received his medical degrees from University of Montreal and honorary degrees from Queens, Toronto, Laval and Sherbrooke universities. A list of his studies, missions, fellowships, certificates, honors and awards covers 2½ pages. A Companion of the Order of Canada, he lectured in the Soviet Union in 1968, the first Canadian doctor to do so under a scientific exchange agreement.

Tenatatively named the Research Centre on Medical Problems Affecting the Future of Mankind, the new venture coincides with international expressions of foreboding re- [illegible] genetic engineering and some other research fields.

The French government helped sponsor a meeting of 100 world scientists on such problems at University of Paris last fall.

The British government appointed a working party last August to assess the risks of genetic engineering. The alarm had been raised in the United States in July by 11 eminent biologists, who asked for temporary suspension of research in certain dangerous areas of genes manipulation.

Dr. Genest recalled that the U.S. National Institute of Health, under the prodding of a Senate committee headed by Sen. Edward Kennedy, ordered an end to experiments on live foeteses.

The new centre will operate under a director with three support personnel, said Dr. Genest, citing euthanasia as an example of the sort of topic that likely will be studied at symposiums.

"Consider the question of people dying from chronic diseases such as cancer, with much suffering," said Dr. Genest. "At present many concerned physicians will not go on trying to delay the death of a patient suffering with no hope of recovery. Many are convinced it is better to let a patient die in a dignified way rather than prolong his suffering and that of his family. That is negative euthanasia.

"But a few doctors are going beyond that, to positive euthanasia, which touches the question whether we are life under any circumstances.

"And from there you go to the extreme—for example, the euthanasia of the mentally deficient. If there are some people who want to have positive euthanasia for mentally deficient persons with an IQ, say, of only 20 or 30, at what level are you going to stop it? These problems are raised today in many circles in the world. They should be faced and studied by all concerned people. . . . If there is more than one solution, then the solutions should be brought out with all the pros and cons."

Citing another area, Dr. Genest said that by means of psycho - surgery, violent patients in mental hospitals can be reduced to sheep-like meekness. Clearly, society as a whole must consider how far psycho-surgery should go, whether operations are conducted in mental hospitals or elsewhere.

Dr. Genest said that in some other areas the impact of medical science—the introduction of the Pill, for instance—has been wide indeed, but still not analysed properly.

The arrival of the Pill and other contraceptives removed from women the fear of pregnancy and became a key factor in the origin of women's liberation movements.

"This is an example of a development that has already had an important impact on society but has not yet received a full evaluation," said Dr. Genest.

Near Perfect

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Administrator John Davis of the Port Hope and District Hospital was only one-day out in his budget projections of the number of hospital patient days that would occur in 1974. He predicted 22,080 days. The hospital recorded 22,081 days.

Stony Indians Fight Alberta

MORLEY, Alta. (CP) — Chief John Snow of Alberta's Stony Indian tribe is waging a land claims battle with a difference by going after the Conservative government of Alberta.

Despite a recent interim settlement of the James Bay land claims by the province of Quebec, the Alberta government has chosen to go to court in a last-ditch effort to avoid a land claim with Chief Snow's Stonys.

The claim arose in the mid-1960s when the province took over a tract of land owned by the Wesley band of the Stony Tribe in the Rocky Mountain plateau near Rocky Mountain House, Alta., to form a lake behind the Big Horn hydro-electric dam.

While the land was uninhabited, it was vitally important to the Stonys because it was the best winter range they had for their herds of horses.

Today the rangeland is at the bottom of a 27-mile-long lake and the Stonys who live in the area of Big Horn are on welfare.

Using a federal grant to finance research, Chief Snow and the band completed a comprehensive 400-page claim for land lost due to the flooding of the valley.

The report was presented to both the federal and provincial governments in May, 1972. It claimed compensation under terms of Treaty No. 7 signed in 1877.

Ottawa approved the claim last year, and directed Alberta to turn over to the band 18,000 acres from Crown land ceded to the province by the federal government 44 years ago.

A section in the agreement giving the province the land says that the land shall be transferred to an Indian band if their claim to the land is upheld by the federal government.

Early in October, three provincial cabinet ministers came to Morley, the Stony reserve's main community 50 miles west of Calgary, as part of a province-wide tour by the cabinet.

They met a group of hostile, articulate Indians who had a bone to pick with their boss.

Chief Snow, during that stormy two-hour meeting, said the province didn't care about native people.

A few days later he and his counsellors met with Premier Lougheed, himself one-eighth Indian, to discuss the claim. After the meeting, the premier said the province would take the claim to the Supreme Court.

The premier, in announcing the decision, said he was acting to protect the property rights of all Albertans.

He was also acting to protect the interests of non-native residents of the area around the 18,000 acres of the proposed transfer who vocally oppose the plan.

They claim the transfer would destroy plans for tourist developments at the Big Horn, as well as negate the potential development of mineral resources, including concentrations of coal.

Chief Snow and his counsellors said they are "dead against" coal mining because "these Rocky Mountains are our homes, our temples, and we do not want them raped by mines."

But tourist developments play a big part in the Stony hopes for the area.

"If we had the land we could develop our own resources for tourism," said Chief Snow in an interview. "Right now my people in the Big Horn area are working for white people who are on the land we want."

Chief Snow, one of the most vocal chiefs in Alberta, said bitterly that the Stonys of the Big Horn valley "are on welfare for the first time in our history—the province made them go on welfare because they took away their winter range."

Chief Snow's bitterness toward the Lougheed government spilled over into the Kainai News, a twice-monthly newspaper published on the nearby Blood Indian Reserve.

Chief Snow, in a guest editorial in the paper, said Premier Lougheed "treated us like dogs" and said the province is a "dictatorship" run by leaders who only want political confrontation with the federal government, regardless of the human costs. . . .

"Premier Lougheed says that he does not want to violate the trust, the property and rights of Albertans.

"But with the same breath he rejects our treaty rights which pre-date the rights of Albertans since Alberta did not exist when Treay 7 was signed.

"He does not seem to be aware that he is violating the rights of treaty Indians as Albertans for if he was really interested in protecting the rights of Albertans he would also protect the treaty and land rights of Alberta Indians.

"The province has agreed to assist my people in planning for tourist development and to provide winter works type of funding, and to provide hay this winter, but these are only interim measures and will not solve many of the social and economic problems brought about by the construction of the hydro dam at Big Horn.

"If the provincial government is truly a democracy and not a dictatorship then they will accept the decision of the federal government in this matter. . . .

"The rights of treaty Indians are clearly stated in the 1930 transfer to Natural Resources Act and we do not want to be caught between the federal and provincial government in lengthy court battles. . . ."

Chief Snow said in the interview that he feels one reason behind the reluctance of the Lougheed government to accept the land claim is another claim by the Indian Association of Alberta (IAA) in northern Alberta.

The IAA, second only in national Indian influence to the National Indian Brotherhood, is preparing an enormous claim for parts of the Alberta oil sands.

Harold Cardinal, president of the IAA, said in an interview no dollar value has been set on that claim but he said the claim will seek ongoing benefits for native people under terms of another treaty.

"If they give in easily to us, they will have to give in on the oil sands, and the big oil companies won't go for that," said Chief Snow.

Tristar Joins Fleet

LONDON (CP) — The first of an initial batch of nine Rolls-Royce-powered airbuses has been handed over to British Airways. Polynesia

Auckland, New Zealand is cited nowadays as the main city of Polynesia and the claim is made on the grounds that it holds more Polynesians than any other city. The brown-skinned Polynesians are descended from extraordinary navigators who settled the far-flung islands of the Pacific while Europeans still feared to sail out of sight of land. They were the early inhabitants of island groups from Hawaii to Tahiti, from New Zealand to Samoa. The white New Zealander and Polynesian get along very well together and intermarriage takes place freely without social stigma.

Russians Heavy Smokers And Authorities Worried

MOSCOW (AP) — Chainsmoker Leonid Brezhnev says he tries to cut down from time to time, but it's doubtful many of his countrymen follow their leader's example.

In a bread store, a middle-aged matron lights up while standing at a counter. A policeman puffs away while directing traffic. The Bolshoi Theatre lobby is blue with smoke at intermission.

In the Soviet Union, cigarettes are one consumer item whose production has steadily increased.

Soviet citizens are not warned against smoking in newspaper and television ads. Nor do cigarette packages carry medical warnings.

Until now, warnings about smoking have surfaced only occasionally in radio spots, newspaper articles and street posters. Lately, however, there are signs that some authorities are worried. A new anti-smoking drug, which has been given some press publicity, has gone on sale in Soviet drugstores.

And Krokodil, the popular Soviet humor and satire magazine, dedicated an entire issue to the proposition that smoking is a disgusting and unhealthy habit.

There are no figures on the number of smokers in the Soviet Union, but a Krokodil reader said in a letter that "everyone in our country smokes, and everywhere."

"They smoke at work, during rest, in trains, at friends' homes, at home, in the street," the letter complained, "nowadays, the streets are so full of smoke that before I venture out, I test the wind to decide which side of the street to walk on."

The head of the Soviet tobacco industry, Vladimir A. Kholostov, told Krokodil 54 factories will produce 373 billion cigarettes this year, a 15-per-cent increase over 1970 production. It's the equivalent of four cigarettes a day for every citizen.

In an interview, a technologist for the tobacco industry said it was impossible to give the exact number of brands of cigarettes, including papirosy, sold in the Soviet Union, but she estimated the number at 300 to 350.

Papirosy are the traditional Russian cigarettes with a cardboard tube and a small amount of tobacco.

Then there is a bewildering variety of regular, king size, super-king-size, filter tips and non-filter cigarettes ranging in price from 14 kopeks (18 cents) to 60 kopeks a pack.

The availability of cigarettes and the example set by their elders prompt many children to smoke before reaching their teens.

A Krokodil writer said he was told by the juvenile officer if a local police station that some children smoke by the age of seven.

A sixth-grader in the city of Archangelsk said he smokes not only with his brother but also with his father.

Asked were he got the money, he said: "My mother gives me money for breakfast and I save it for cigarettes."

The influence of television and movies encourages smoking. Actors used to express their feelings by acting, says Krokodil, but now they do it by smoking.

"With a strong hand, the hero will reach for a pack of cigarettes, light one and inhale so deeply that people in the audience will start coughing

"We then realize he will find a new wife, his son will be accepted to a technical school and he'll fulfil his plan."

Krokodil said American and European studies on the dangers of smoking are well known but not disseminated in the Soviet Union.

"How do they advertise medical knowledge regarding smoking in our country? They do it through signs that say 'No Smoking.' Those signs are on the wall in many places but because of the thick smoke, no one can read them.'

The magazine argued that smoking wastes not only health but also valuable time. At least 10 minutes are needed for a smoking break and at a factory, if "25,000 cigarettes are smoked in a day 250,000 working minutes will be wasted."

Krokodil has proposed draconian measures: ban of smoking in administration offices, stores, restaurants, public transportation, schools, parks and streets.

But it's doubtful the public would stand for such drastic actions, nor would Soviet leaders.

One of Brezhnev's proudest possessions is his cigarette case with built-in timer and lock. When he wants to cut down on his smoking, he can set the lock so that the case opens only after a certain period. But he admits he keeps a spare pack in his desk drawer for emergencies.

However, at least one prominent Soviet official has kicked the habit. Vladimir Kholostov, head of the tobacco industry, gave up smoking 16 years ago.

Auckland Becomes Main City Of Scattered Polynesians

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Auckland is cited nowadays as the main city of Polynesia—a title which suggests that it is the heart of the romantic South Seas.

The distinction has created problems as well as benefits. Auckland is trying to work out a destiny as a modern industrial city and a crossroads of Polynesian and white civilization.

Auckland holds more Polynesians than any other city. The Polynesians are a brown-skinned race, not great in numbers but spread over vast tracts of the Pacific.

Descended from extraordinary navigators who settled the far-flung islands of the Pacific while Europeans still feared to sail out of sight of land, the Polynesians were the early inhabitants of island groups from Hawaii to Tahiti, from New Zealand to Samoa.

The population of Auckland is approaching 800,000. Today it is the main industrial and commercial city of New Zealand with about twice as many people as Wellington, the capital. The population is still predominantly white-skinned.

The number of Polynesians is largely a matter of conjecture—perhaps little more than 100,000.

But the special feature of Auckland is that it is the meeting place and magnet for people from most parts of Polynesia. To the populations of hundreds of scattered tropical islands it is an El Dorado, the place to go if the air fare can be saved for the journey.

The rest of the world looks to the South Sea Islands as an idyllic, lotus-eating region where the climate is perfect, the maidens loving and beautiful and food always ready to drop from the trees.

To the South Sea Islanders, paradise is an opportunity to join the rat-race in New Zealand.

They queue for entry permits, work permits, air passages. In some islands every outward aircraft is booked solid with migrants bound for the land of opportunity.

They seek outlets for their talents not available at home, paid jobs instead of subsistence agriculture, the chance to earn high wages.

New Zealand, needless to say, is not the El Dorado the Islanders expect. They sacrifice their familiar, easy-going life for a less kindly environment. They endure unaccustomed cold winters, crowded in sub-standard accommodation and often take on dreary, unpleasant jobs.

Some save enough to build a good home in their native island and return. Others settle permanently in New Zealand.

The arrangements under which islanders arrive vary widely because of differing immigration circumstances. The Cook Islands and Niue, formerly New Zealand-administered islands, now are self-governing but the people retain New Zealand citizenship and enter New Zealand as of right.

Extraordinary numbers do so. It is estimated that there are as many Cook Islanders in New Zealand at any one time as in the home islands.

Western Samoa was previously administered by New Zealand as a United Nations trusteeship. It is independent but, because of continuing close associations, Samoans are admitted under annual quota arrangements.

Tonga, on the other hand, has always been independent of New Zealand so no quota exists. But Tongans enter New Zealand on tourist visas and take jobs. When a crackdown was made last year, it was found that some 5,000 Tongans were illegally in the country.

A new system has been introduced under which Tongans are admitted on six-month working visits when guaranteed employment, with possibilities of extensions.

Polynesians from other islands come under still different arrangements, so that the question of how many are in New Zealand at any one time, and for how long, is highly involved.

New Zealand has its own Polynesians—the Maoris. The first settlers, they arrived many centuries before the Europeans. They are closely related to peoples from many other South Sea islands—some of whom also call themselves Maoris.

The New Zealand Maoris have for many years been moving into the cities.

At one time they were thought to be a dying race. Today they are increasing in numbers more rapidly than the white inhabitants and the present population exceeds 240,000.

But movement from remote Pacific islands and from country to city involves considerable readjustment. Polynesian civilization is substantially communal, with great dependence on the family and the tribe. The weakening of traditional values without full absorption of Western ideas creates difficulties.

Maoris and Islanders are alleged to be involved proportionally in more liquor offences and crimes of violence than the rest of population. There have been suggestions that Polynesians convicted of more than one violent crime should be sent back to their original islands or to the country. The proposal has aroused charges of racial bias.

In fact, race relations in New Zealand have been better than in most countries with mixed populations. Most white New Zealanders and Polynesians get along together. Intermarriage is frequent without social stigma on either side.

Successive governments have been at pains to legislate racial equality and some whites complain that Maoris enjoy numerous special privileges.

But a proportion of younger Polynesians have lately become militant in demands that more consideration be given their interests, that what they feel to be surviving discrimination be eliminated.

Extremism has brought a backlash of resentment. There have been demands that immigration of islanders be restrained.

Occasional ill-feeling has developed between New Zealand Maoris and Islanders. Some of the bitterest clashes in bars and taverns have been between these closely related racial groups, and even between people from different Polynesian islands.

At the same time the new arrivals are bringing benefits to the community. Most Islanders are profoundly religious and in suburbs where most of them live there has been a marked increase in churchgoing.

Likewise the Polynesians bring increased emphasis on the importance of family life and a good-natured, gregarious, cheerful outlook which is an antidote to the tensions and strains of modern industrial society.

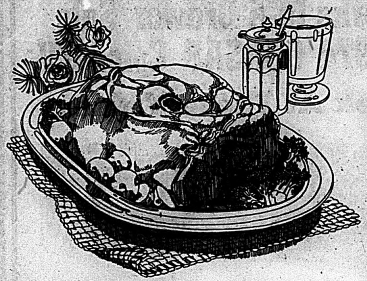
Make it special. Make it pork.



Joan Fielden tells how:

Joan Fielden,
Dominion Home Economist Consultant
Terry Park, Meat Manager

It makes good sense to cook and serve pork. Not only is it economically priced, but today's pork is also meatier and Rich in B-Vitamins, high in protein and a good source of iron and calcium, pork is nutritious. Pork is also a versatile meat. It can be served in a variety of ways—roasted, braised or broiled. And it's easy-to-fix, appetizing-to-see and exciting-to-taste.

For my recipe, I've chosen a pork shoulder roast. It's a cost meal that's juicy, flavourful and tender.

Pork Shoulder with Mustard Sauce

1 Pork shoulder roast
(bone in 3 servings/lb.)
(boneless 4 servings/lb.)
2 tbls. prepared mustard
2 tsp. white wine vinegar
⅔ tsp. salt
⅜ tsp. pepper
1 tbls. dill weed
4 tbls. salad oil
1 tbls. chopped parsley

1. Place roast on rack in 325°F. oven.
2. Roast 35-40 minutes per pound or until internal temperature on a meat thermometer is 170°F.
3. Meanwhile combine mustard, vinegar, salt and pepper. Beat in salad oil, add remaining ingredients. (Makes ¾ cup.)

Serve roast pork with mustard sauce, brown potatoes, red or green cabbage slaw, buttered broccoli, dessert and milk.

The following chart will serve as a guide to how much time is needed to cook various cuts of pork. And if you'd like to know more about food and nutrition, write me, "Joan", P.O. Box 35, Station W., Toronto. I'll send you free, helpful information.

Home Grants Sought

City council agreed this week to apply to the provincial ministry of housing for a grant totalling 104,436 to assist Belleville homeowners in upgrading their properties.

The grant, based on $3 per head of population would be used to make loans to residential property owners to "assist in the repair, rehabilitation and improvement of dwelling units pursuant to the Housing Development Act."

Marg Parry Joins Commission

Margaret Parry of 34 Catharine St. here has been appointed to the Ontario Telephone Service Commission.

A housewife and mother of four married children, Mrs. Parry's appointment was effective Jan. 1. Her husband is Traffic Sgt. A. J. Parry of the Ontario Provincial Police Belleville detachment.

The commission is the regulatory agency responsible for the 40 independent and municipal telephone systems in Ontario. The appointment was made by the provincial government.

For greater expertise in complex issues, the commission was recently expanded from four to seven members to more broadly represent the areas of the province served by the telephone companies.

Mail Boxes Destroyed

AMELIASBURG — Vandals with a twisted sense of destruction have both police and civilian investigators co-operating in an effort to check their activities on the Rednersville Rd.

In recent weeks, six residents from Carrying Place to Rednersville have had mail boxes torn from permanent standards and damaged extensively.

Clues left by those responsible for committing the crimes reveal they operate from late at night and in the early morning hours from a car or pick-up truck.

In one recent case, the steel post holding the new mail box was bent over and broken off at ground level. Then the box was wrenched from the post and hurled heavily to the pavement. Before it was discarded in the ditch, the door was ripped off, signal flag removed and sides kicked in.

Program Tips

Elwy Yost (left), project officer for the Ontario Educational Communications Authority (OECA), and Frann Harris (middle), regional OECA information officer, point out program tips to Belleville Kiwanis president Albert VanReewyk Tuesday. Mr. Yost is producer of OECA programs Saturday Night at the Movies and Magic Shadows on Channel 19. in Toronto (Cable TV 5 here).

TV Educational Station To Boost Programming

By ROBIN CHASE

Staff Reporter

There are many television viewers in Belleville who are yet unaware of the television signal they receive on cable channel 5 each evening between 6-11 p.m.

That is the Ontario Educational Communications Authority (OECA) outlet here and the station is Channel 19 (CICO-TV), TV Ontario in Toronto.

Local residents do not receive live programming from OECA since the programs are on video-tape, sent out by Channel 19 to several cable companies across the province.

However, OECA plans to provide a direct, all-day signal for Belleville by 1978 with a new area transmitter.

Frann Harris, regional OECA information officer, said in an interview Tuesday OECA has programming for both in-school and part-time students, and out-of-school adults.

She related OECA recently scrapped its former divisions of programming for different age and student levels. In-school programming has been placed in one section.

Take 2

Another section is called "open sector", with programs "for everybody not enrolled as full-time students in formal educational institutions," outlined Ms. Harris.

French programming is available in both the in-school and open xectors.

She described the two popular programs hosted by OECA project officer Elwy Yost — Magic Shadows, a half-hour weekly evening show for children — and Saturday Night at the Movies for adults.

Magic Shadows is a set of serialized movies, where Mr. Yost will take a movie such as Sinbad the Sailor, show it in 30-minute segments and explain it for children along the way.

A Magic Shadows booklet is available, suggesting weekly activity for children in conjunction with the movies.

The Saturday night adult program features a full-length movie run uninterrupted, followed by discussion, she said. It is actually community education on topics generated by the films viewed.

Slum List Suggested

The Quinte District Labor Council will ask Belleville centennial organizers for a week in 1978 to be dedicated to labor.

The labor council centennial committee announced, Tuesday, publication of a slum dwelling directory will highlight the group's centennial project. The directory will come complete with pictures and will list the address and owner of sub-standard dwellings in the city.

The labor council is also seeking city approval to stage a union-industrial show in Ben Bleecker auditorium.

Senior Reporter Accepts New Post

A familiar byline will be missing from the pages of The Intelligencer after this weekend.

Lenny Williamson, who over the years has become recognized as one of the country's foremost writers on education, is leaving The Intell to take a writing position with the federal department of agriculture in Ottawa.

In leaving Belleville, Mrs. Williamson will join her husband, Gordon, who was transferred to Ottawa some time ago when the etomological laboratory was closed down here.

Mrs. Williamson began her newspaper career on the women's pages of The Intell. After a short time she transferred to news writing. Her own knowledge of and interest in education quickly established her as an authority on the subject.

Although her prime responsibility was coverage of educational matters, it was not unusual to see Mrs. Williamson, camera in hand, at fires, accident scenes and other spot news events.

Yost Plans Series On Women in Films

Channel 19, the Toronto television outlet of the Ontario Educational Communications Authority (OECA) available on cable TV 5 in Belleville, has planned several programs for 1975 to mark International Women's Year.

Elwy Yost, producer of OECA programs Saturday Night at the Movies and Magic Shadows, told Belleville Kiwanians Tuesday in a few weeks his Saturday night spot will feature Women in Cinema with two movies about women.

He said later in the year there will be other movie presentations "to explore the myth of the way the old movies treated women."

Mr. Yost, executive director of the Metropolitan Educational Television Association of Toronto (META) from 1964-70, explained his love for motion pictures developed when as a young man, his father would query him on each movie he viewed.

On Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey, Mr. Yost said, "she's a doll ... I can see why you elected her."

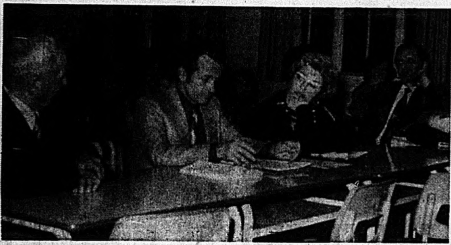
Poor Turnout Hampers PACE Annual Meeting

A scanty turnout for the annual general meeting of People Against a Contaminated Environment (PACE) Tuesday night resulted in the postponement of the election officers until the group's next meeting.

Fewer than 20 of a possible 50 or 60 showed up at Belleville Collegiate Institute for the meeting conducted by Bill Hockley, in the absence of president Doug Sword, who was tied up at a Quinte Labor Council meeting.

The brief discussion touched on the continued dumping of raw sewage into the Moira, Trent and Bay of Quinte, canine contamination of city parks and recycling. Slides illustrating pollution problems in the area also were shown.

Future meetings, it was agreed, would be held on Wednesday nights, when it is felt more members could be present.



Dedicated Few

Labor History Interests Council

The Quinte District Labor Council Tuesday night pledged its support to a proposed Opportunities For Youth (OFY) project which would create a published history of area labor.

A group of university students, a council spokesman described as having expertise in history and research, approached members of the labor council for support for their submission to the federal government.

Members of the council said they viewed the project as a strong tie-in with council plans for the city's centennial celebrations in 1978. The students said their history would be published by that date.

The council will submit a letter to the federal government — sponsors of the summer make-work program — endorsing the student submission.

In addition, council first vice-president Ian Reilly suggested preliminary work be completed next fall in preparation for OFY funding "rather than having to do a rush job in February to meet program application deadline.

Labor Fears Standards Draft Bylaw Too Broad

A draft proposal for a minimum maintenance bylaw may be placing too much power in council's hands.

That is the concensus of members of the Quinte District Labor Council following its regular monthly meeting Tuesday.

The 15-page document, if approved, gives council broad powers in legislating property owner responsibilities pertinent to health, safety and building standards of their buildings.

Members of the labor council voiced concern Tuesday that council might become too powerful in regulating an individual's home.

In an effort to fully understand the document, the labor group appointed a three-man committee to investigate the draft proposal. The results of the research will first surface at a labor meeting and then form the bulk of a report to city council.

Anticipating some reaction from the community over the potentially controversial document, council has already taken steps to circulate it for public input.

While the labor council is not on the city's mailing list to receive copies of the draft proposal, one member of the council and close to the workings of city hall will arrange for copies.

The Chamber of Commerce, health fire and building authorities and the Quinte Home Builders Association have all been earmarked to receive the report. Each will be asked for comment before council makes a committment. Copies of the document will also be placed in the public libaray.

Ian Reilly, first vice-president of the group, said he feared some city landowners would abuse the proposed bylaw by allowing their property to deteriorate to the stage where council would be in a position of having to pick up the bill.

One clause in the document — drafted by city manager Wilbur Purcell — allows for a maximum fine of $500 a day for landowners refusing to perform renovations.

The labor group's three-man committee is expected to make some report at the next monthly meeting.

Charge for Minutes Called 'Discriminatory'

The Quinte District Labor Council Tuesday charged council as being "discriminatory" in the manner which it hands out copies of city council minutes.

In recent weeks labor council members have made repeated approaches to City Hall requesting copies of the minutes "to become better informed as to council business."

Mayor Robin Jeffrey, by letter, told the labor group, copies of the minutes mailed to a labor member will cost $10.

Ian Reilly, first vice-president of the group, pointed out that the Chamber of Commerce receives copies of the minutes without charge.

"We are every bit as good as the chamber of commerce," said Mr. Reilly. "If the chamber gets minutes for free, we should also."

The labor council passed a resolution stating "we are being discriminated against," as a result of discussions.

The labor council said it plans to research similar situations in other Ontario municipalities and make a presentation to council.

Brothers Take Stand In Lucas Assault Case

The verdict in the four-day-long trial of the five Lucas brothers is expected sometime today, as the defence concluded its examination of witnesses Tuesday afternoon.

The five brothers, Leonard Claude, Gordon, Larry and Eric are faced with a series of charges of assault causing bodily harm, possession of a dangerous weapon and assault causing bodily harm with intent to wound, arising from a street brawl Aug. 17 on McFarland Dr.

During the skirmish, city police Constable Gerry Bull was alleged to have been knocked unconscious with a pipe wrench. Two other police officers were taken to hospital with less serious injuries.

In Tuesday's court session before Judge Russell C. Honey and a jury, Claude and Leonard Lucas testified.

In his testimony, Claude, 36, of RR5, Belleville told the court that twice during the skirmish he saw a police officer draw a revolver.

In other testimony Claude in answer to defence counsel Malcolm Robb's question to recount the incidents occurring during his presence at the scene, testified that at no time did he see any of his brothers strike a police officer.

He said he was only interested in helping his younger brother, Eric, to get home safely before 'he got into trouble'. Claude also testified that he approached Constable Gutoskie with his arms spread out but called it "just a gesture" and said nothing hostile was meant.

Leonard Lucas of Shannonville, at 37 the eldest of the 11 children in the Lucas family, said in his testimony that he had a hammer in his hand but said he picked it up only after his brother Larry dropped it.

The particular charges being tried are:

Gordon, Eric and Clade, assault causing bodily harm; Leonard, assault causing bodily harm and possession of dangerous weapon, and Larry, assault causing bodily harm, possession of a dangerous weapon and assault causing bodily harm with intent to wound.

Art at Glanmore

Seven paintings by artist George Ackerman are on display at Glanmore House until March 14. Mr. Ackerman, who taught art about 100 years ago at what now is Sir James Whitney School, painted watercolor landscapes of the Belleville, Picton and Tweed area, among others. Shown at the opening of the display this week are William McCrea, Warden for Hungerford Township and Mrs. Albert Martin of Tweed.

City Hall Workers Can Strike Feb. 21

City Hall employees may strike any time after Feb. 21, union president Peter Ouderkirk said today.

The conciliation board which sat through negotiations two weeks ago handed down a "no board" report when negotiations between the union and the city failed.

"We are willing to negotiate," said Mr. Ouderkirk during an interview.

The union has requested a meeting with city council to discuss the average 23-per-cent wage demand but "council has given me no indication that such a meeting will be called," he said.

The union has sent an application to its CUPE head office requesting permission to strike.

Mr. Ouderkirk told The Intelligencer, "we'll go out whether we get permission or not."

He said council will get no warning of the strike until employees actually walk out. "We'll just walk out. There's no requirement under law to give council warning."

Council reaffirmed its position Monday saying it could offer no more than 14 per cent, the amount of its last offer to the union.

Aeration Suggested

Stirling Lagoon Capacity Disputed

STIRLING — Hard on the heels of an Ontario Municipal Board hearing into expanding the Stirling sewage lagoon, council here wants to know more about aeration as a means of not having to develop a third pond.

Reeve Ray Short told village council this week that a former reeve told him the existing two Lagoons were supposed to provide sewage treatment for 2,500 people. Stirling has a population of 1,500.

The municipal clerk said he was visited by a representative of a firm which wants to areate the existing ponds, but the clerk said he did not know too much about it. He was instructed by council to write to the ministry of the environment to obtain further information on the matter before council would approve an expenditure of $3,930 over last year's allowance for operating the sewer works project.

In other business the reeve told Stirling businessman Don Williams that it was said during the OMB hearing that $591,000 would not cover the sewage project, and that until the OMB made a decision council, could not committ itself to a new arena financially. "We know the county rate and the school rate is going to be up," Reeve Short said.

Mr. Williams appeared at the council meeting to ask that the group meet with three or four members of the Stirling and District Business Association about the arena issues.

Mr. Williams said that people had learned to live with the tax increase levied last year, and that he is "in favor of an arena if Stirling pays $100,000 "towards it through taxation. "The rate shouldn't have to go up. It is important to the schools and community," he said.

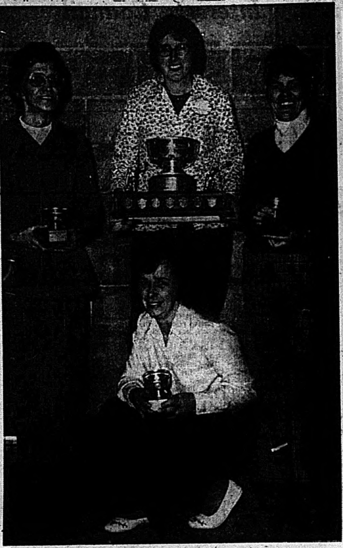
Council, however was unanimous in feeling that repairs costing $7,054 should be made to the ice-making system at the existing Centennial arena.

Tom and Gerry Bryant of Henry St. appeared before council and said that if council supported their group for a Opportunities For Youth grant, they would clean up Rawdon Creek and "paint fire hydrants" and do other work under town foreman Doug Bolte.

Others in the team are Ernie Jordison, Frankford, Grant Carr of Glen Ross, and two young ladies, Judy Tucker and Judy Meeks both of Stirling.

Tom and Gerry are both trained scuba divers, and would be able to help the Rotary Club with its Weir dam project, Tom told council.

Councillor Wayne Martin moved that council support the project.



Trophy Comes Home

The Intelligencer trophy is getting to be a familiar thing around the Lambert household. Sally Lambert (centre) displays the award presented to her Tuesday night at the Quinte Curling Club. Lambert skipped her Napanee rink to five consecutive victories, including a comeback 9-8 win in the final, to take the first event of the Bonspiel for the second straight year. Sally is only the third skip to win the the third skip to win the award twice in the 16-year history of the event. The Lambert rink consisted of Kay Davidson (right), vice-Betty Chamberlain (left), second, and Benita Murphy (crouching), lead. Chamberlain is the only different member of the rink from last year. In all there were 24 entries, five from Belleville and some coming from as far as London to compete in five events.

Napanee Rink Repeats

Napanee's Sally Lambert came up with two in the tenth to defeat Lorna Bennett 9-8 at the Quinte Curling Club Tuesday and retain her title as The Intelligencer Women's Bonspiel Champion. Lambert got the two points in the final end when Bennett curled a bit narrow and slid her rock out of play.

"I was really sorry to see Lorna come up narrow," said Lambert, "she had control all game."

"We got lucky in the final end,' added the champion.

Lambert took one in each of the first three ends, but Bennett took two in the fourth and three in the fifth. Her triple-end came after a fantastic take out shot on final rock. The Napanee rink came back with two in the sixth to tie the score at 5-5. Bennett, a Quinte Curling Club rink, took three more in the seventh to go out in front 8-5. The defending champs scored one in the eighth, one in the ninth and the final two in the tenth to take first even honors.

"Lorna is competitive all the time," said Lambert, "she curled particularly well against us. My rink curled well all through the 'spiel. This was probably our worst showing. We were lucky to win it.'

It was the 16th running of the annual 'spiel and Lambert is only the third skip to take the title twice.

Lambert's rink — Kaye Davidson, Vice, Betty Chamberlain, second, and Benita Murphy, lead — went through five rinks in total without a loss.

Bennett's rink — with Marion Aikens, vice, Jean Quincey, second, and Shirley Coe, lead — won their first four consecutive starts to earn a shot at the championship.

In the second event, Trenton's Grace Carson rink beat Anne Acton 11-9. To make to the second event final, the two rinks won their first and lost their second hook-up in the main event, but went undefeated after that. The Carson rink included Gwen Scaletta, vice, Enid Corke, second, and Gloria Muck, lead.

The Acton rink, representing the Quinte Curling Club, consisted of Betty Kelsey, vice, Betty Parson, second, and Marg Bush, lead.

There were 24 rinks involved in the two day competition, some coming from as far as London. All together there were 11 out-of-town rinks.

The third event also went to an out-of-town rink. Joyce Pineo and Jo Hope, both of CFB, made their way to the final, but Hope came out on top 9-7. The Hope foursome also included Helen Lewis, vice, Doreen Rolston, second, and Betty Ingram, lead. Both rinks lost their opening draw and were therefore dropped into the third event. They went undefeated after their opening loss to get to the third event final. Pineo had Ellie Kampch at vice, Marian Haggart at second and Jackie Moore at lead.

In the Consolation to the first event (rinks who lost their third match in the main event) Grace Saint, of Kingston-Cataraqui, beat Eva Webster, of Kingston, 9-4. Saint's rink consisted of Marie Prevost, vice, Joan Kizell, second, and Shirley Smith, lead. The Webster rink was comprised of Norma Sharpe, vice, Ruth King, second, and Betty Looney, lead

In the fourth event the winner was decided strictly on points. In it, June Dickson, of Napanee, edbed Noreen Sugarman's Kingston rink 18-17. The winning rink had Ruth Wright, at vice, Ev Gulley at second and Mary Auger at lead.

Chalk Up Three For BCI Squads

MADOC (Special) — All three Belleville Collegiate Institute (BCI) basketball teams had too much power and finesse for Centre Hastings Secondary school squads to content with here Tuesday. When the tripleheader was completed, the Belleville school had wins of 49-46 (senior); 70-30 (junior) and 59-18 (midget).

Centre Hastings seniors managed to give their counterparts a battle but with Russ Simonds and Larry Savage showing the way, BCI pulled it out. Simonds hit for 14 points and Savage supplied 12.

Mitch Hannah hooped 24 points for BCI juniors. Ron Bell was right in step with 18 and Dave Franklin had 12.

Dwight Begley's 14 points sparked the midget team to victory. Mike Wright checked in with 11 points.

Bobcats Back On the Track

SCARBOROUGH (Special) — The Belleville Bobcats snapped a four game Metro Junior B losing streak here Tuesday night with a 7-4 win over the Whitby Bruins.

The Cats were playing with six juvenile call-ups. Roger Chapman, Gary Thompson, Mike Crawford, Wayne Clapp, John Murphy and goalie Don Thompson were all up from the Shell squad to fill the injury gaps in the Cats line-up.

Belleville has two games left in the regular schedule and are one point back of the Peterborough Lions. The Lions have 36 points, but also have a game in hand over the Bobcats.

The locals jumped into a 3-1 lead at the end of the first period. Whitby actually was out in front 1-0 on Dan McAleir's goal at 1:17, but a minute later Wayne Calberry fired one in from Gary Thompson to even things back up.

Grant Goegan scored from Andy Ricketts and Rob Foster at the 10:47 mark and four minutes later Scott Samis got the first of his two from Eric Powell.

The only scoring in the second period was done by Belleville. Ricketts combined with Foster and Chapman to put the Cats in front 4-1.

In the final 20 minutes the two clubs traded three goals. At 2:22 Al Jeffery tallied from Neil Turner and Powell and at 2:54 Foster scored from Goegan and Calberry. Scott Samis rounded out the Bobcats scoring with an unassisted marker at 6:56.

From there the Cats coasted. Whitby came back with singles from John Stainsby, Steve Sicluna and George Green, but time ran out.

Belleville took five of the game's nine penalties — all of which were minors.

The Bobcats are in Markham this Friday night and in Oshawa Saturday afternoon.

A fan bus to the Markham game is being laid on by the Bobcat Booster Club. Anyone wishing to make the trip may purchase tickets at McKnight's Variety Store on Front Street.

Zdravko and Stevenson Pace Soccer Winners

Cosy Grill and 211 Front St. Barber were the winners in Monday's Indoor Soccer League twin bill at Loyalist College.

Brian Stevenson whipped in a pair of goals to pace Cosy Grill past John's Variety Store 3-0. Charlie Nesteroski was the other goal getter.

The Barbers escaped some early pressure from Trenton Spartacus thanks to some steady work by goalie Chris Johnson who allowed only one goal during his team's sag.

After Johnson had supplied the lift, Barbers went to work to rap in five goals, three by Fundic Zdravko, to take a convincing win. Kevin Kirby and Ernie Brown were the other marksmen.

Spartacus got its lone goal from Andy Viners.

IIHF May Okay Pros for Play

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Soviet and Canadian negotiators have reached tentative agreement to open the world ice hockey championships for professionals, perhaps as soon as next year, press reports here said today.

Postmaster General Ove Rainer, president of the Swedish Ice Hockey Association, said sports attache Ivars Kespers at the Soviet embassy here had notified him of the agreement.

John (Bunny) Ahearne of Britain, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, was quoted as saying that "if the Soviet Union has reached an agreement with Canada, I have no reason to put up any obstacles."

Ahearne stressed, however, that the final decision rests with the federation's congress in Switzerland next June.

Canada has not participated in world championships since 1969 and before that had only amateurs on the teams.

Observers here said there was reason to doubt that open world championships would be held by next year, when the tournament will take place in Poland, since many differences have to be ironed out first in Canada.

Hockey Canada would have to make player arrangements with the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association.

Title Up for Grabs In Midget Tourney

Plans are set for the 10th Annual Midget Basketball Tournament at Belleville Collegiate (BCI). Last year's consolation champion, Nicholson Catholic College will be back hoping for bigger and better things this year.

Bigger things could very well happen for any of the 16 teams in the running because the tournament's Grand Champion from Bowmanville, will not be back to defend the title.

"This is probably the largest midget ball tournament in the province," said convener Brian MacKenzie, "with Bowmanville out of the picture there's no telling who will take the title."

MacKenzie says one of the top pre-tournament choices is Cobourg West. They are led by a six-foot, two-inch centre who has played 27 games with the CW senior team. He should be a one man show in himself.

Locally, BCI, Quinte, Centennial and Brighton are all rated tough contenders.

The tourney gets under way at 8 a.m. Saturday morning with the consolation final and the championship final at 7 p.m.

Other schools in the running are Trenton, Moira, Napanee, Kenner Collegiate of Peterborough, Pembroke, Bayside, Sydenham, Oshawa Catholic, Robertson Collegiate and Oshawa Central.

Yardmen Square Set 1-1

Sparked by Bruce Hamilton's shutout goaltending and three goals from Bobby Crawford, Belleville Yardmen evened their Ontario Minor Hockey Association minor midget playoff series with Peterborough at 1-1, Tuesday, recording a 6-0 win.

While Hamilton was frustrating the Peterborough shooters, Yardmen put on a strong display. Adding to Crawford's production were John Jianopolis, with two, and Bob Bunton with a single encounter.

The winners also had the edge in penalties, drawing 31 minutes to Peterborough's 10.

Fleet infielder Larry Lintz was a popular figure with baseball fans when Montreal Expos representativts took part in question and answer sessions at CFB Trenton and Royal Canadian Legion Branch 99 in Belleville, Tuesday. Highlight of the evening session at Branch 99 was presentation of $300 to Belleville Minor Baseball, compliments of Sport O'Keefe. Rookie infielders Larry Parrish and Pete MacKanin, and veteran first baseman Hal Breeden were other Expos with the group.

Hawks Unimpressive But Closing the Gap

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks haven't exactly been burning up the National Hockey League in their attempt to overtake leading Vancouver Canucks in the Smythe Division, but somehow they seem to be limping faster than the Canucks.

The Hawks, who trailed the Canucks by 15 points and more earlier in the season, extended their current winless streak to four games Tuesday night with a 3-3 tie against Kansas City Scouts, enough to pull Chicago to within three points of Vancouver.

The Canucks, meanwhile, dropped a 3-2 loss to Pittsburgh Penguins. In other NHL games, Toronto Maple Leafs beat St. Louis Blues 5-3 and Buffalo Sabres defeated Detroit Red Wings 6-1.

The Hawks and Canucks are headed for another showdown Friday in Vancouver.

Since their last meeting Jan. 15 in Chicago when the Hawks won 2-1, Chicago has managed three wins and three ties in eight games. The Canucks won four and lost four in the same period.

A goal by John Marks with less than two minutes remaining gave the Hawks the tie at Kansas City after the Scouts had come back from a 2-1 deficit to go in front 3-2 on goals by Jim McElmury and Jean-Guy Lagace.

Jean Pronovost's 28th and 29th goals of the season led the Penguins at Vancouver.

Pittsburgh goalie Michel Plasse had a busy night, making 38 saves, including 18 in the first period, while the Penguins had only 24 shots at Canuck netminder Gary Smith.

Two goals by Errol Thompson and one by Bill Flett in the second period at St. Louis pulled the Leafs into a 4-2 lead and Ron Ellis added another goal in the third period to offset a Blues score by Bill Collins.

The win ended a five-game winless string on the road for the Leafs.

Rick Dudley scored once and, 29 seconds later, set up another goal by Pete McNab in a five-goal outburst by the Sabres against the Red Wings.

In the first period, Rick Martin scored his 28th goal of the season for the Sabres who are the NHL's leading points-earners with 75 on 34 wins and 11 ties in 52 games.

The Chicago-Vancouver showdown is not the only major confrontation this week. Tonight, the schedule includes the first of a home-and-home series between the defending Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers and New York Rangers, the team the Flyers beat out in a tough semi-final series last spring.

The Flyers, who lead the Patrick Division by nine points over the Rangers, are at New York tonight and the Rangers return the visit Thursday night.

Peter Lee's winning goal midway in the third period required a meeting between the referee and goal judge before it was allowed, as Ottawa '67s edged Kitchener Rangers 7-6 Tuesday in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

The puck from Lee's shot at 7:30 hit just under the goal crossbar, before rebounding back into play.

A crowd of 2,611 spectators watched Ottawa's Tim Young scored three times to push his league-leading scoring total to 125 points on 44 goals and 81 assists.

The fourth place '67s got the other goals from Dan Blair, Bruce Baker and Rick Bourbonnais.

In other league action Tuesday, Hamilton Fincups and Peterborough Petes played to a 4-4 tie. Kingston Canadians edged St. Catharines 4-3 and Knights tied 4-4.

Cavaliers Turn Henderson On

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Henderson has a thing about Cleveland Cavaliers.

The 6-foot-3 Atlanta Hawks rookie guard is averaging 12 points a game. But against the Cavaliers, Henderson scores about 25 points a game.

"I don't know why I do well against Cleveland," Henderson said after leading the Hawks to a 111-97 National Basketball Association victory Tuesday night. He scored 27 points.

Henderson scored 14 of his points in a third-period surge that saw Atlanta break away from a one-point halftime lead, 49-48, to an 83-71 margin going into the fourth quarter.

In other NBA games Tuesday, Philadelphia toppled Buffalo 111-105 in overtime, New York romped past Los Angeles 109-94, Chicago stopped Portland 102-90, Golden State nipped Houston 107-105 and Phoenix edged Washington 90-89.

The American Basketball Association was idle Tuesday night.

A 38-point performance by Rick Barry was just enough as Golden State weathered a Houston rally that just fell short in the game's waning moments.

With the Warriors ahead 106-100 and 1:09 remaining, Mike Newlin scored a field goal and Calvin Murphy converted a three-point play to make the score 106-105. But Newlin missed a jumper with six seconds to go and Clifford Ray sank a free throw for Golden State for the final margin.

Bob Love scored 38 points and the Bulls grabbed 32 rebounds off the offensive boards to romp past Portland.

Philadelphia blew a 19-point second-period lead, then had to scramble from behind to tie Buffalo and send the game into overtime.

Clash with Coach Brought Trouble

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Just two months ago, speed skater Sylvia Burka commented on the Canadian national team's improved showing in international competition and said the transition was due to a new coach.

Today, Miss Burka is among three skaters suspended after a clash with their coach over team discipline and the team's hopes for future gold medals have suddenly shrunk.

Miss Burka of Winnipeg, Gerald Cassan of Ottawa and Andrew Barron of Edmonton, were sent home from West Germany after their confrontation with coach Jorrit Jorritsma and the Canadian Amateur Speedskating Associaton (CASA) announced Monday that the three have been suspended from further international competition this season.

The clash with Jorritsma and the subsequent suspensions contrasted sharply with Miss Burka's comments in an interview in Saskatoon last December when she painted a rosy picture of the team's progress under the new coach.

"It's the first time we've had an organized team with good coaching," said Miss Burka, who has been Canada's top speed skater the last three years.

PrPeviously, the team did not have a full-time coach and employed different coaches for short periods.

She said that team pride, which suffered both on an off the ice in previous seasons, was already improving under Jorritsma, a former Dutch skater.

Despite Miss Burka's earlier endorsement of Jorritsma, she and the other two banished skaters apparently have been in conflict with the coach for some time.

John Hurdis of Toronto CASA president, said Tuesday that Miss Burka had been disciplined twice before.

In Ottawa, Cassan told an impromptu news conference that the three had been dropped from the team because of a personality clash with the coach. He said their banishment did not follow any specific incident, but when asked how such a clash could come to a head for all three on the same day, he declined comment.

Al Workman, Ontario representative on te CASA's international committee, said Tuesday that the committee's chairman, Doug Gordon, sent a letter to CASA officials last month saying the three skaters "had the attitude of prima donnas to training."

"He said they were challenging the coaching and training methods. They were consistently objectionable in their attitude to curfew and drinking. Gordon said they kept up their disruptive antics.'

Earlier disciplinary action by Jorritsma against the three involved sending them from the Canadian team's base at Inzel, West Germany, to Innsbruck, Austria, to train on their own.

However, at his news conference in Ottawa, Cassan did not see the banishment to Austria as a disciplinary move. He called it a move "to benefit our skating."

Cassan also had a differing statement regarding the suspensions, saying the three had been told they would not be allowed to rejoin the team either this year or next.

Both Gordon and Hurdis have said the suspensions apply only to this year.

Rivers, Morrison Lead Mariners Over Toros

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wayne Rivers, a minor-league performer for most his 13 professional years in hockey, appears headed for his best season yet in the World Hockey Association and one of his best ever in any league.

WAYNE RIVERS

Rivers, a 33-year-old right winger, scored three goals and assisted on two others Tuesday night to lead San Diego Mariners to an 8-4 romp over Toronto Toros.

That pushed Rivers' goal total to 31 for the season and he now has 52 points, putting him among the league's top 10 scorers. Two years ago he finished his first WHA season with 37 goals and 77 points and last season he managed 30 goals and 57 points.

Meanwhile, 46-year-old Gordie Howe was awarded a special welcome in Indianapolis when the Racers promoted their game against Houston Aeros as Gordie Howe Night. The veteran Howe combined with son Mark to lead the Aeros in a 4-3 win over the Racers.

In one other WHA game Tuesday, Edmonton Oilers edged Baltimore Blades 1-0 on an overtime goal.

At San Diego, defenceman Kevin Morrison added two goals and two assists for the Mariners who scored five goals in the third period. Centre Vaclav Nedomansky had two goals for the Toros.

At Indianapolis, Howe scored his 21st goal of the season to open the scoring in the second period.

"The kids put me in," said Howe, who was set up on the goal by centre Jim Sherrit. "If I had missed that, they'd have been mad."

Mark Howe scored once with an assist from his father and Sherrit added the winning goal in overtime, also with an assist from the elder Howe.

The Blades, playing their second game at Baltimore since moving from Detroit, drew much the same size crowd as they did when they were known as Michigan Stags.

After drawing more than 9,400 for their first home game Sunday at Baltimore, the Blades drew a disappointing 2,810 Tuesday night.

Adding to the disappointment was their 34th loss of the season and eighth in a row when Edmonton's Eddie Joyal beat goalie Gerry Desjardins at 4:15 of the overtime period.

Up to that point, Desjardins had made 23 saves while Oilers goalie Ken Brown claimed the shutout with 28 saves.

Draveurs Take Over In First

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bernard Chamberland scored three times Tuesday night to pace Trois-Rivieres Draveurs to a 7-3 win over Shawinigan Dynamos and sole possession of first place in the East Division of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League.

In other games, Sherbrooke Beavers downed Quebec Remparts 4-2 and Montreal Juniors blasted Chicoutimi Sagueneens 10-5.

Guy Crevier with two, Gaby Jourdain and Claude Periard also scored for the Draveurs who moved two points ahead of Quebec. However, the Remparts have played three games less.

Scoring for the Dynamos were Yvan Hamelin, Richard Dubreuil and Alain Belanger.

A goal by Peter Marsh early in the third period broke a 2-2 tie as Sherbrooke went on to defeat Quebec.

Andre Leduc, Francois Robert and Marc Tessier also scored for the West Division-leading Beavers while Luc Vigneault netted both goals for the Remparts.

SINDA STOPPED

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Tury Pineda, a leading contender for the world's junior lightweight title, stopped Cesar Sinda of Zaire before 2,500 fans in Arena Tijuana Monday night. The hard-punching Pineda, from Mexico, landed lefts to Sinda's head at will. Referee Memo Ayon stopped the fight after two minutes, 30 seconds of the third round in which Sinda was knocked down three times.

Whitby Or Else For Murray

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Murray, a 23-year-old defenceman with Whitby of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league, has been suspended by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) for illegally leaving the club.

Murray decided Friday to try out with Des Moines Capitals of the International Hockey League in hopes a professional team—especially the National Hockey League's Philadelphia Flyers, who have an affiliation with Des Moines—might be interested in him.

Under CAHA regulations, a player cannot transfer to another club after Jan. 10 if on that date he has signed a card with his own club.

Murray said he had understood Whitby would release him so that he could play for Des Moines.

Acting on an appeal from the senior team, the CAHA decided Tuesday to suspend Murray from further play with any club but Whitby for the remainder of the season.

Chadwick And Ivan Honored

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Chadwick, a long-time National Hockey League referee, and Tommy Ivan, general manager of Chicago Black Hawks, have been named winners of the 1975 Lester Patrick Awards for outstanding service to hockey in the United States, it was announced Tuesday.

Chadwick and Ivan, both members of the Hockey Hall of Fame, will be honored at the 10th annual Patrick dinner here March 10. A third recipient will be named later.

Chadwick, who retired in 1955, refereed a record 106 Stanley Cup playoff games and more than 1,000 regular season contests during his career. Nicknamed the Big Whistle, he is credited with developing hand signals to denote penalties and was considered the game's top official despite being blind in one eye. He now broadcasts New York Ranger games.

Ivan is the dean of NHL general managers, having held that post with the Black Hawks since the mid-1950s. His Chicago clubs have finished first five times and won the Stanley Cup once. Before moving to the Black Hawks, Ivan coached Detroit Red Wings to six NHL titles and three Stanley Cup championships.

Signs Contract

CHICAGO (AP) — Left-handed pitcher Jim Kaat, who last season had a 21-13 record with Chicago White Sox of the American League, Tuesday became the 13th Chicago player to sign a 1975 contract. Kaat, acquired from Minnesota Twins in 1973, finished the 1974 season with a 2.92 earned-run average and his 142 strikeouts increased his career total to 2,009. The only active major league pitcher with more victories is Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals with 248.

Museum Official

Tom Court, supervisor of restorations at the provincial museum in Edmonton, gets some pretty strange offers. It may be a sewing machine, parts of a cradle scythe, a wooden box, or a rusty pile of iron which someone says was once a plow.. Mr. Court is shown examining a sword while leaning on an old ammunition box from the 1800s. (CP Photo)

Radioactive False Teeth Reported Health Risk

LONDON (Reuter) — British researchers say false teeth are becoming a radioactive health risk.

A special report by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) said irradiation of mouth tissues by uranium compounds used to match the brightness of natural teeth may exceed limits set by the International Commission on Radiological Protection.

Three of every four British dentists use porcelain containing uranium when they prescribe or make up artificial dentures or crowns, an NRPB spokesman said. This means, the study indicated, that some 100,000 Britons are put in risk of overexposure to radioactivity every year. Britain has no regulations on use of uranium in dentistry.

The report said only West Germany and the United States—where much of the world's dental porcelain is manufactured—were known to have such rules.

Uranium is a fairly recent additive to dental porcelain.

It was introduced to help meet increasing complaints that artificial teeth were too easily recognizable because of their color.

Museum Official Says Articles Talk

EDMONTON (CP) — Tom Court gets some pretty strange offers.

It may be a sewing machine, or parts of a cradle scythe, a wooden box, or a rusty old pile of iron which someone says was once a plow.

He's learned not to refuse such offers without first asking a few questions. And, as supervisor of restorations at the provincial museum, he often finds that his interest, or curiosity—plus a good dose of imagination—stands him in good stead.

Take that wooden box. The telephone rang one day in Mr. Court's office—in the basement of the museum, away from public view. The switchboard operator said, "There's a man up here who's got a box."

Mr. Court agreed to see him, and the box now stands in his office, waiting to be incorporated into some exhibit.

With its rope handle, the mahogany, tin-lined box looks like a naval ammunition box, Mr. Court said. The man who brought it to the museum "said he didn't bring it in for the box, but for the handmade nails."

"Well, they're not handmade. They're copper nails."

The matter could have ended there, but Mr. Court decided to ask a few questions.

"He said it was just an old box they had around the house. He said when he was homesteading he used it as a mouseproof box to keep food in. Then he put cancelled cheques in it.

"I said: 'You must've had a farm in the Duck Lake area.

" 'Yeah, how did you know?', he said."

Mr. Court told the man the box had held ball cartridges for a Snider-Enfield rifle, that it was issued in 1886 and that the ammunition was probably manufactured in 1868.

"How did you know?", Mr. Court was asked.

"I read it on the box," he replied. He pointed out the numbers that had been painted on the box, as well as various marks stamped into the wood. To the uninitiated, it meant nothing, but to Mr. Court it said a lot.

He said his job involves a lot of conjecture. For example, his guess that the box came from the Duck Lake, Sask., area arose from the fact that the Riel Rebellion of 1885 was, in part, fought there. The box was issued in 1886, one of the marks stamped into the wood is a war department ordinance symbol which showed the box was army issue, and it was a safe assumption that such ammunition boxes were used in the Duck Lake area, he said.

The bits of knowledge Mr. Court has gathered also helped him verify the authenticity of the box.

"If it was really made in 1886, these screws shouldn't have a point," he said, unscrewing one of them to illustrate. "So you pull out one of these screws and, bingo." It had a flat edge.

"You double check your theory.

"See how an item like that talks to you?"

He said the box could be used in a display.

"A few photographs of the Riel Rebellion, a Snider-Enfield. If you have the rifle, isn't it natural to have the ammunition box?"

Asked if such a display wouldn't leave the impression that the box was, in fact, used during the rebellion, Mr. Court said he did not think so.

"Very often, the history behind an article is far more important than the article itself. . .

"An object can talk for you in lots of ways, it depends on what the museum wants to do. It can talk historically, it can talk technologically."

The provincial museum is concerned largely with the history of Alberta—with the settlement period, the late 1800s, Mr. Court said.

"You're well into the era of mass production there. So if we get a guy who has an oil lamp that he thinks is really rare, the chances of finding another lamp like that are pretty good.

"The only thing that makes them worth saving at all is the fact that these oil lamps were used in Alberta settlement. You document who used them, then use them to tell the story of Alberta settlement.

"This is what I think a good museum should do: stimulate people and provoke them into becoming aware—to arouse interest.

"The responsibility of the museum is to draw people. There are whole worlds out there you can get involved in. If people could stop long enough to take an interest in things . . ."

The 44-year-old native of Scotland, who still has a brogue, admits his job as supervisor of restorations technically does not involve negotiating for collections. But because he often gets the calls from people who offer items, he has been responsible for numerous acquisitions the museum has made.

Mr. Court came to Canada when he was 20, going to his sister's farm in Saskatchewan. He was "a joiner by trade—halfway between a carpenter and cabinet-maker."

In 1950, he went to Winnipeg to work on flood repairs. From there he went to work as cabinet-maker at Jasper Park Lodge, but only stayed about a month before moving to Edmonton, then to Calgary, then to Regina and back to Winnipeg.

In 1952, he returned to Edmonton to try for work in the oil fields. He went back to Scotland for about six months, but decided Canada offered better opportunities.

Before coming to the museum about 10 years ago, he worked as maintenance superintendent in a chemical plant, methods analysist in an engineering office, and was in business for himself as general contractor for three years.

"Each job I had, I learned something," Mr. Court said. "And when I applied for this job, all of a sudden all this useless knowledge fell into place.

"I started to read—that's all I've done the last 10 years or so, read.

"Western Canadian history is so recent that you can pick up the threads quite easily . . ."

Midget Monster

PLYMSTOCK, England (CP) — Angler Eric Howe, 12, expects to go into the record books with a 1½-ounce, five-inch Atherine Smelt he caught near this Devon town. The Plymouth Aquarium has told him it probably is the largest of its kind landed in Britain and he is seeking to have the record officially recognized.

Picture-Books for Pre-schoolers:

LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD — illus. by Paul Galdone.

Mr. Galdone's gayly colored pictures are expressive illustration for the traditional folk tale, which in this version has a happy ending.

FARMER PALMER'S WAGON RIDE — William Steig.

Steig's fun-filled drawings illustrate this picture story of farmer Palmer (a pig) and his hired hand Ebeneezer (an ass) and their unfortunate journey home from town.

THE WITCH'S EGG — Madeleine Edmondson.

In this amusing picture book we meet Agatha, a bad-tempered old witch, living in an empty eagle's nest. When Agatha finds an abandoned cuckoo egg in her nest and decides to hatch it, her whole way of life changes.

FORGETFUL FRED — Jay Williams.

Soft colors illustrate this picture book of a modern fairy tale. An absent-minded young boy sets off to find the Bitter Fruit of Satisfaction, and instead, finds himself in difficulties because of his absent-mindedness.

CINDERELLA — Bernadette Watts.

Rich, glowing colors illustrate this new pictorial version of Cinderella. The step-sisters are portrayed in all their ugliness, and Cinderella at the ball is beautiful indeed!

THE FUNNY OLD BAG — Lisl Weil.

Joel and Howie wondered what Mr. Gugelhupf carried in his strange black bag. One night Joel even dreamed that a fierce allignotr lived inside it. Not until Howie fell while playing in the park, did they discover what was really inside the bag.

LITTLE SARAH AND HER JOHNNY-CAKE — William Wiesner.

Told in rhyming jingles this is the story of Sarah and her grandmother, who wants a johnny-cake for breakfast. But Sarah finds there is no corn meal in the cupboard, and so she sets out on a journey from storekeeper, to miller, to farmer in her search for corn meal.

WOLF! WOLF! — Elizabeth and Gerald Rose.

This is a re-telling of the old Aesop fable of the goat-herd who cries "wolf" just for excitement. In this version the story is set in Greece. Gerald Rose's illustrations are colorful and filled with detail.

WHY NOAH CHOSE THE DOVE — Isaac Bashevis Singer.

All the animals vie with one another to explain to Noah why they deserve a place aboard his Ark. Only the dove remains modest and quiet. Little children will enjoy identifying all the animals from their pictures.

LITTLE TOOT ON THE MISSISSIPPI — Hardie Gramatky.

Our favorite little tugboat takes a trip to the Mississippi to visit the old paddle wheel steamboats. He finds the river in flood and is soon embroiled in a scheme to rescue all the bayou animals.

GIANTS INDEED — Virginia Kahl.

Gayly colored pictures illustrate this picture book of a little boy who ran away from home, quite sure that there were no giants on the other side of the woods.

BIRTHS

SPRING — Dave and Lynda (nee Hitchon) are happy to announce the birth of their son, Christopher David, 7 lbs., 5½ ozs. on Jan. 31, 1975 at Peel Memorial Hospital, Brampton, Ont.

IN MEMORIAM

MITTS — In loving memory of our son Ronald Paul.
He is gone but not forgotten,
And, as dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of him are always near,
Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Many think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow,
That lies in the heart concealed.
—Sadly missed by Mom and Dad, brothers, Donald, David, John and Murray Jr.

CARDS OF THANKS

I would like to send a sincere thank you to friends, relatives and neighbors for the many lovely cards, flowers, gifts and visits. To the nurses of 708 and 506; to Dr. Backham and Dr. Morgan. Special thanks to all at Queen's Self Care for their kindness and to Rev. Poulter for his visits during my stay in hospital.
Thelma Bonter.

A very hearty thank you to my friends, relatives and neighbors for their many kindnesses, cards, letters, gifts and calls while a patient in Kingston hospital and since returning home. A special thanks for the many prayers on my behalf.
Everett Elliott.

Is Crime Contagious? Canadians Wondering

By TED WELCH
The Canadian Press

Thirteen persons died recently in what Montreal police said was a gangland slaying in a nightclub. The victims, two of them shot, were locked in a small storage room and the nightclub set afire.

Two Moncton, N.B., policemen were gunned down in December while working on a kidnapping case and a Calgary detective was shot to death Dec. 20.

Richard Blass, nicknamed The Cat for his numerous escapes from violent police confrontations was cut down Jan. 24 in a hail of police bullets during an early-morning raid on a hideaway in the Laurentian ski resort of Val David, Que.

Suspected of five murders since his escape from maximum-security St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary last October, Blass, 28, was described by a Crown prosecutor as "one of Canada's most dangerous criminals."

He was wanted in connection with a double-slaying last October at the Gargantua Bar, the same nightclub in which the "gangland" slayings took place.

Police later discounted Blass as a suspect in the slayings.

And more recently, a 21-year-old escaped prisoner kept police busy for 36 hours near London, Ont. The gunman who demanded and got a $10,000 ransom from police; released a 12-year-old hostage before he was captured in a townhouse.

An Oshawa sniper blasted away at a shopping centre with a .303-calibre rifle for 90 minutes this week. The siege ended when the gunman apparently shot and wounded himself.

Are such violent acts increasing? Have social and economic conditions deteriorated? And do such acts spawn more bloodshed and death?

Federal Justice Minister Otto Lang says he doesn't see any connection between the series of recent shootings.

"There is a need for good police work, but no one is suggesting it (the violence) is the fault of the Criminal Code."

Bernard Robinson, executive director of institutional services in the British Columbia corrections branch, says violence is imitative.

"There's a kind of contagion to certain types of behavior," he says.

And W. W. Petersen, chief superintendent of the Edmonton RCMP, says that when a violent act is committed, "we expect one or two more to occur."

"It almost seems as if people get the idea from the first crime."

He also says there seems to be trends in violent crimes.

"At one time there were a lot of hijackings. Now there seems to be a spread of crimes involving hostages."

But Dr. Tom Tombaugh, head of Carleton University's psychology department, says it is dangerous to draw parallels between widely separated incidents.

One prison riot can ignite another. "But if I come home and beat my wife and the guy across the street smashes his car, you can't call it violence in the neighborhood. They are unrelated circumstances."

Steve Campbell, an English professor at the University of Moncton and member of city council, attempted this week to negotiate between Dorchester's prison officials and 221 prisoners who held a 24-hour occupation.

He says that although violence in books, movies and television may have dulled people's reactions somewhat, it has not generated any more violence.

"I don't think any of the things that are happening today are any worse than that of Jack the Ripper."

Professor Ronald Sklar of McGill University's law faculty says distinction must be made between crimes committed by organized groups, such as the Montreal nightclub incident, and those committed by persons frustrated by personal and economic conditions.

"The increased killings from unsyndicated crime are related to frustration, economic recession, deprivation or anger with society."

Dick Ramsay, president of the Alberta Association of Social Workers, offers the theory that advertising has made some people feel that others possess more than they do. The resulting envy, jealousy or depression may lead to violence.

Dr. David Cornish, a psychiatrist and medical director at Alberta Hospital in Edmonton, blames a softening of deterrents for an increase in violence.

"It's really not too much of a hassle to break the law now," he says.

He adds that he does not advocate a return to capital punishment, although an increased laxity in the correctional system means that lawbreakers no longer understand why they are being punished.

Prof. Jose Rico of the criminology department of the University of Montreal says the types of violence today "are undoubtedly a modern phenomenon."

"Violence may be the result of a weakening of values, authority and family structures, creating a void in society's system of beliefs. Repression is not the answer to violence. The problems that created that violence have to be solved at the base."

Derek Dempster of the John Howard Society in Montreal says violence creates more violence.

"The people who hurt others most in our society are those who have been brutalized themselves."

A provincial judge in British Columbia says Canadians get a steady diet of violence with their dinner via television and says he wonders if news reports of violence have a cumulative affect.

"You go out to the penitentiary and talk to some of the people there. Some of them carry their press clippings. It's a prestige thing with them."

The judge says the news media handle incidents of violence "almost like an entertainment production. Violence has to be presented in a cool way."

In the London kidnapping case, police efforts to communicate with the gunman were hampered by reporters who telephoned the man for interviews. One talk-show radio host asked the gunman on a live broadcast why he didn't ask for more than $10,000 in ransom.

What of the police who must face the guns and violence on the job?

"Society is going crazy," says Joe Ross, executive director of the Nova Scotia Police Association. He says Parliament should "stop making a mockery of justice" and take capital punishment off the books unless it is going to be enforced.

He blames increased crime on ineffective gun-control laws, liberal parole policies and correctional facilities geared to rehabilitate convicted murderers.

C. O. Bick, chairman of the Toronto Police Commission, says Canada's lawmakers are "gutless" and Canadian cities soon will be as crime-ridden as Detroit, New York and Chicago.

CRIME IS UP

Major crime in Toronto increased 12 per cent in 1974, including 35 murders and Chief Harold Adamson asks: "Who says crime doesn't pay?"

The chief, once quoted as saying Toronto was the safest city in the world, now says: "In many instances, it's not safe now."

Calgary Police Chief Brian Sawyer says preliminary steps have been taken to establish a special weapons and tactics (SWAT) unit to combat increased violence.

Sgt. J. A. Poss of the Edmonton police force says there was an increase in almost every type of violent crime in 1974.

The number of murders in Edmonton rose to 13 from seven in 1973, wounding with intent increased to 85 from 52, rapes to 129 from 98, and manslaughter to three from one.

The number of assaults increased to 4,318 from 4,303 and robberies to 809 from 757 in 1973.

Sgt. Ross also says he is concerned about an increase in firearm violations.

Insp. Norman Fuchs of the RCMP in North Vancouver, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Association of Chiefs of Police, says things are getting worse. People have a tendency to "act out scenes of violence from both news and TV programs."

"In my experience, both in Burnaby and in North Vancouver, there is a growing tendency to violent crime, both against society in general and policemen in particular."

Insp. Carl Norton of Ottawa, who last week worked closely in a case where two policemen were shot trying to catch an escaped prisoner, says police are concerned about violence "but we're professionals."

"We know these things are going to happen once in a while and have to accept it."

Stratford Actors Required To Do Tough Calisthenics

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — In its first week of rehearsals, the new Stratford Festival company found itself in frequent need of divine assistance.

The name of the Almighty was constantly evoked by the 26 actors as they were put through a rigorous program of calisthenics by Robin Phillips, the company's artistic director, and his staff.

The physical jerks, accompanied by hours of voice coaching and exercises in sense perception, left the actors—especially the older ones who years ago thought they had reached the pinnacle of their performance abilities—bruised, aching, and mentally stretched.

But each morning they arrived at the rehearsal hall filled with admiration for their 3?-year-old director.

Little time was being spent on actual staging of The Comedy of Errors and The Two Gentlemen of Verona for the festival's spring tour, opening in Winnipeg Feb. 10.

But Phillips was unworried about time. To him, an actor's ability to use the whole body and to be aware of colleagues is as important as being able to speak the lines.

His first object was to break down any inter-personal barriers of jealousy, suspicion, and rivalry, he said.

The longer-range aim was to build a permanent company.

Co-director David Toguri, a Vancouver-born dancer and choreographer, rpesides over the muscle-stretching exercises With long experience in the London dance and drama scene, he is also Phillips' right-hand man at rehearsals.

Designer Daphne Dare runs the workshops, where sets are created, costumes made and properties built.

Phillips watches the calisthenics, listens in on the voice coaching and even attends the fittings in the wardrobe rooms.

Why?

He said he is the one person, at this stage, who has a feeling how the plays are developing

An actress such as Pat Bentley-Fisher, who plays the courtesan in The Comedy of Errors, may not yet have fully developed her role. But Phillips senses in what direction it is developing and can help the seamstresses decide how an elaborate gown should be draped.

One Phillips rule: Actors attend all rehearsals, whether they are needed for particular scenes or not.

"The whole company does everything," he said. "They not only rehearse their own scenes but they are part of creating everybody's scenes. So, even if you have no lines to say at all, you are part of the conception of the production.

"They all have a chance to criticize and to suggest.

"The thing about live theatre is that four-fifths of the evening's performance is the audience, and that is one part that we can't rehearse. In this way, we do get many varied opinions what a scene is about and what it means."

When Phillips instructs an actor how to say a particular line—which is rare since he prefers individual interpretation—he does so out of earshot of the rest of the company.

Then, when the line is played in rehearsal, he and the actor concerned get the "audience" reaction of the rest of the company.

"If you get two-thirds of the group saying: 'Oh, I got something much nastier than that, or something much more trivial than that,' then you've got a pretty sure sign of audience response."

There's another purpose in Phillips' communal style of directing.

In any production, there have to be actors taking the non-speaking roles. Phillips said it is soul-destroying for an actor to be cast as just a spear bearer, no matter how much it means to him to be engaged for a season with the Stratford company.

"They want to feel they belong, and they do feel that if they are part of the whole company, working on the whole production."

The group is the nucleus of a permanent company.

"We hope they are going to stick together for more than just a season and they are already beginning to talk about the sort of plays they would like to do and like to explore in future.

"Some will go, and some others will be added. But they know the possibility of a continuing company is there.

"The understanding is that we hope we will go on. Nobody is going to be bound by a contract because if they are miserably unhappy, they would leave anyway. And likewise, if it doesn't work out for me, I'd have to say just that."

Hip Cop

NUNEATON, England (CP) — A police officer in this Warwickshire centre told a court he took down two statements in different styles of writing because of his long legs. Const. Keith Talbot, six feet, five inches tall, told magistrates that his writing slopes in different directions according to which leg he is bending at the time.

Lost Kingdom

LONDON (CP) — African Agyemang Sarkodee is suing the factory where he works for unstated damages for loss of parts of three fingers and for "loss of kingship." He says he would have become king of his tribe in Ghana when his uncle retires in two years but tribal custom bars anyone suffering disfigurement.

Ads Bother Bogie's Wife

By BOB THOMAS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The widow Bogart was in a rage.

"Every SOB and his brother are trying to make a buck from Bogie," Lauren Bacall declared. "They use his face on T-shirts, face-masks, posters, jigsaw puzzles, coasters. He was a man who hated commercialization. But he's dead and he can't fight back."

Her tirade had been set off by news that a onetime friend was writing a biography of Humphrey Bogart. Miss Bacall had some choice words for the nature of the "friendship," but she admitted she was powerless to stop the book.

"My lawyer tells me I have no rights in this matter," the 50-year-old actress said. "Nor have I been able to do anything to stop the vulgar use of Bogie to sell products.

"Everybody uses actors. They use us to promote every charity in the world. They use us to help get politicians elected. And then they tell us we have no rights. We are public figures, so anything they write or say or use about us is OK. You'd think that a man's widow and his children would be able to have some control over how he is exploited after his death. But no.

"Bogie was really a trusting person and time after time he put his faith in people, only to be betrayed. Now he's being used and no one can stop it."

Among the targets of Miss Bacall's wrath were a Canada Dry commercial which uses the familiar Bogart lisp and another Bogart imitation in a commercial that appears in French theatres.

"Claude Chabrol, the famous director, was paid a fortune to shoot a commercial for Winston cigarettes," she said. "I think that's terrible, especially to promote cigarettes, which certainly contributed to Bogie's death." The actor died in 1957, having had a cancerous lung removed.

Miss Bacall had mixed feelings about Woody Allen's Play It Again, Sam, in which Bogart appeared as an apparition to advise a mousey husband.

"I think Woody had a creative, funny idea for a play," she said. "But it was a tasteless idea on film. Why? Because film lasts; plays don't."

Bacall was back in town to visit old pals like Nunnally Johnson and Katharine Hepburn, to appear on the Dinah Shore and Johnny Carson shows and talk about the new movie, Murder on the Orient Express. That's the old Agatha Christie whodunit with a supercast including Albert Finney, Sean Connery, Wendy Hiller, Vanessa Redgrave, Richard Widmark, Michael York, John Gielgud and Jacqueline Bisset.

EVERYONE GOT ALONG

Naturally she was asked if such a high-powered cast struck sparks with one other.

"Are you kidding?" she replied. "Who would be temperamental in that group? Albie? An absolute dream. Sean? A complete dear. Wendy? Perfectly wonderful. The entire picture was a delight from beginning to end.

"Good actors never throw their weight around; they don't have to. It's the poor actors who make waves."

Miss Bacall recently returned from two years in England, where she appeared on the stage in Applause and filmed Orient Express.

"But not at the same time," she said. "Finney was doing a play during the film and so were Wendy and Gielgud. How they managed, I don't know. I made the mistake of doing the television version of Applause while I was still in the show. It nearly killed me."

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, Feb. 6

Aries (March 21-April 19) Don't be discouraged if things don't work out as fast as you think they should. A last-minute break will get you over the hump.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The solution you are seeking will come in a flash of inspiration just when you think there's no answer.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Be extra-alert today in business dealings. A little windfall could come to you from out of left field.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Keep a flexible schedule in order to make sudden changes in plans without disrupting your work or productivity.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll put off doing things you should take care of till the last minute. Somehow, you will sneak in under the wire.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The early part of your day is apt to be rather mundane. Later, something will occur to brighten the scene for you.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are going to take some sudden action in a situation you have felt uncertain about. This will reverse the odds in your favor.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Keep busy. Proceed as if you have all the answers. Surprisingly, when you need them you will have them.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could gain some unexpected advantages from your business dealings if you are bargain-conscious and know real value.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions are starting to shift. You will be breaking clear of influences that kept you bottled-up the past few days.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A responsibility you thought you would be burdened with will suddenly be assumed by a considerate ally.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You are going to be getting some unexpected, but pleasant, news from a friend who is separated from you by some distance.

WHALES POISONED

BASTIA, Corsica (AP) — Biologists said six sperm whales which ran aground on the coast here may have suffered from an overdose of mercury. A biology laboratory in Nice said the mercury found in the whales was three times higher than that found in whales in the Atlantic Ocean.

'Old Sydney Town' Scene from Past

GOSFORD, Australia (Reuter) — Old Sydney Town, surrounded by acres of New South Wales bushland, might take some people by surprise with its unpaved streets, horse-drawn carts, English accents and inhabitants in period dress.

The new "Old Sydney Town," laid out on 25 acres of bushland, is an authentic reconstruction of Australia's larges city as it was in the early 19th century.

Brainchild of the Fox family from Sydney, the town is built some 45 miles north of the site where eastern Australia was first settled. The family sees the project as a tourist attraction and a unique aid to education. Both the Australian and New South Wales governments have bought 5½-per-cent shares in the enterprise.

Everything in it has been carefully researched—from the construction materials down to the clothes worn by the staff of about 150.

Buildings include a church, jail, a windmill, a shop and the two-roomed wood and brick huts of the soft where up to 16 convicts might have been housed.

High spot of the town is the eating house which still advertises as it did in 1810, "victuals dressed in the English way."

Run by Joyce Malone, a native of London who sports a white bonnet and flowing robe, the restaurant continues to serve hot pea soup, boiled mutton and vegtables cooked with herbs despite the humid Australian summer.

Pills May Cause Iron Poisoning

By C. G. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter gives her young children (ages 7 and 5) adult vitamins fortified with iron supplement. I feel this is a dangerous practice.

She doesn't care for me to give advice. Perhaps you could explain the danger in your fine column, as there are probably many mothers doing the same thing.

I suggested she ask her family doctor's advice: the chances aren't too good she would take mine.—G.C.

Yes, iron poisoning can occur in children if excess is taken. There are reports of poisoning in children under five years of age from vitamin-mineral preparations containing iron. The excess dosage usually happens accidentally—because of the attractiveness of the pill, the capsule, or the bottle itself. The bottle should be kept out of the reach of children.

However, young children do need iron for adequate blood formation. For all you know your grandchildren could have a problem that requires the iron supplement which your daughter simply may not want to discuss with you.

In some cases where iron is poorly absorbed from the digestive tract, the amount of iron needed may not always be obtained from the diet.

However, for youngsters of the ages mentioned (5 and 7), iron supplement via vitamin preparations is normally unnecessary. Cereals and bread have some iron fortification and children who eat meats and vegetables get ample iron in most cases.

Studies of normal infants with and without iron suppements in their diets show no difference in their well being.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes fatty tumors? Are they ever malignant? Mine is on my back and the doctor advised against having it removed. I'm past 70.—D.H.B.

Fatty tumors are localized growths of fatty tissue under the skin, are rarely malignant. The technical name for the condition is "lipoma," and they can occur just about any place. Common sites are the arms, back, flank and frequently the back of the neck.

Removal is usually undertaken for cosmetic purposes, and since yours doesn't show, there should be no need to undergo the expense or bother.

Depending on the size, removal generally leaves a hollow spot in the skin which is often as unsightly as the tumor anyway.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have just learned of the importance of sodium and phosphorous in the diet. However, I can't stand fish. Isn't there another food besides seafood that is high in phosporous?—T.Y.

Posphorous, like sodium, is found in most foods, although none are as high in phosphorus as fish. But meats, eggs, nuts, soybeans, are also high in phosphorius and can give you more variety.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am troubled with bursitis and I guess gout, too. My uric acid level must be high. What I'd like to know is what foods contain purines?—Mrs. A.B.

Seems to me you're doing a powerful lot of guessing and supposing.

In the first place bursitis is not necessarily caused by gout, although this can be the case. Bursitis—which is a painful inflammation of the bursa sac in arm and leg joints—can be brought on by injury, chronic infection, or other causes. So uric acid levels may not be a factor at all.

Rather than doing any further guesswork, why not have your BLOOD CHECED FOR URIC A blood checked for uric acid? If it is high, then a non-purine diet would be in order—or better still, one of the drugs used for gout.

Purine foods are chiefly organ meats, such as sweetbread, liver, kidney, fish roe, and also certain vegetables such as peas, beans and asparagus.

Chimneysweeps Do Their Jobs To Have Laughs

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — "People don't believe it sometimes when we come to their door with our soot-covered faces, long hair, black capes and top hats."

Greg Marklin is a chimney sweep. He and his partner, dressed like characters from a Charles Dickens novel, knock the soot from the inside of chimneys using chains, brushes and lots of climbing and squeezing—the method used for centuries of chimney cleaning.

The partners, both 21, charge $30 for cleaning a fireplace and chimney.

"We really enjoy wearing the capes and hats—the traditional chimney sweeps' outfit," Marklin said. "We do it to turn ourselves on, and we turn on lots of our customers too."

Marklin's partner, John Graham, said they're chimney sweeps "so we can just have lots of laughs and a good time.

"People like to touch us—I guess they've seen Mary Poppins and know it's supposed to be good luck."

"But sometimes people think we're just a comedy act," Marklin said. "Sure, we try to have fun and make other people have a good time and sometimes we tell little kids we're Santa's elves coming to clean out the chimney before he comes on Christmas.

"But we work hard and do a good job and have pride in our work."

Graham said being a sweep is a dangerous job:

"We work in all kinds of weather and you should see some of the roofs we have to climb. There are 100 diseases sweeps die of and in the Old World sweeps had the shortest life-span of any profession.

"In the Old World, people had jobs where they took pride in their work and did a job from beginning to end. I liked that and I want a profession with pride and tradition."

About a year ago Graham convinced Marklin that the energy crisis made it an ideal time to become sweeps.

"I thought he was crazy for suggesting it," Marklin said.

"And I thought he was crazy for accepting it," said Graham.

Opening lead — J♠

By Oswald and James Jacoby

As anyone who looks at all 52 cards can see, South is going to wind up one trick short at his four-heart contract. West can take his ace of trumps and lead a second spade to give his partner a ruff after which start it will be a cinch for East to take his two aces.

Can South do anything about it? Not if the defence doesn't falter, but South can try to deceive his opponents. As a starter which high spade should he use at trick one? Clearly the queen is not the right one to play. The average false-carder wins with the ace. That also is wrong. West is very likely to lead a second spade. South's best bet is to win with the king. That play will show the ace but not the queen and might encourage a shift.

So South should play the king of spades at trick one and lead a trump. Clearly not the king. The king play will get the ace to come right up. How about the 10 or even the six? Too apparent an attempt at deception. West will know that South holds higher trumps.

So we find the right one to lead is the queen. West may think that South holds six trumps to the queen-jack-10 and is trying to bump the ace and king together. For this reason West may duck.

Not too likely against alert opponents, but the best try he can make.

U.S. Said on Schedule In Great Lakes Cleanup

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is on schedule in its joint program with Canada to build Great Lakes sewage-treatment plants but such construction is falling behind in other parts of the U.S., a Senate subcommittee was told Tuesday.

Russell Train, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), appearing before the subcommittee on environmental pollution of the public works committee, said:

"Under the Great Lakes water quality agreement with Canada, we have committed ourselves to having all pollution facilities either completed or under construction by the end of 1975. They will all be completed or under construction by that time.

"In that area at least, we will not be far away from our goals."

Canada expects to have its Great Lakes sewage-treatment facilities in operation by the end of this year. On the U.S. side, however, full operation is not expected until some time in 1978.

Senator Edmund Muskie (Dem. Me.), subcommittee chairman, said the program generally had not proceeded at the pace seen by the Congress, and called on Train to advise the White House to "unimpound" immediately the remaining $5 billion of the $18 billion authorized in 1972 for nationwide construction of waste-treatment plants.

Senators View Hash But Forego Any Test

OTTAWA (CP) — Senators got a first-hand look Tuesday at marijuana and hashish and heard detailed instructions on how to get high as the Senate legal affairs committee began study of a bill to reduce penalties for simple possession of cannabis drugs.

A health department witness produced bricks of hashish, two pounds of marijuana, a vial of hash oil, a couple of water pipes and dozens of joints (marijuana cigarettes).

The senators looked and asked questions but did not test the wares.

"That would be illegal," said Dr. A. B. Morrison, who appeared before the committee as a witness from the health department.

Dr. Morrison said available evidence shows increasing use of marijuana and hashish. Department statistics indicate that at least one million Canadians have experimented with the drugs.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde said there are widely-divergent medical opinions on the effects of cannabis use.

"The Le Dain cannabis report in 1972 raised questions about the possible physical and mental effects of long-term heavy use of the substance and more recent research has certainly not removed the cause for concern," Mr. Lalonde told the committee. "It is not free of danger, let's put it that way."

But he said there is no solid evidence to support the theory that marijuana leads automatically to heroin use "and therefore, comparison between the two substances is damaging to the intent of the bill."

The bill would eliminate jail sentences for simple possession of cannabis and reduce maximum penalties to $500 for a first offence and $1,000 for subsequent offences. A person convicted of cannabis possession could be jailed only if he failed to pay the fine.

Penalties for trafficking in cannabis also would be reduced to a maximum of 10 years in prison from life imprisonment.

Half of Young People Have Tried Marijuana

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — The Addiction Research Foundation (ARF) says in a report on a study made last spring that about half the students and industrial workers under 26 years of age in this community have tried marijuana and about 16 per cent smoke it fairly regularly.

The greatest increases in use since a national survey in 1970 are with high school students, the report says.

About half the 4,181 persons who responded to questionnaires on drug use also said they used alcohol at intervals ranging between once a month and more than once a week.

The increased use of alcohol by high school students is attributed, in part, to the lowering of the legal drinking age, the report says.

Only 7.7 per cent of the industrial workers questioned, 10.9 per cent of the community college students and 20.2 per cent of the high school students said they had never tried alcohol.

About half of the workers (48.5 per cent), college students (49.3) and high school students (53.8) said they did not use marijuana.

In a 1970 national survey, 84.1 per cent of high school students said they had never tried marijuana.

The survey, initiated by the Oshawa-Whitby crisis intervention and rehabilitation centre and carried out by Jeffrey S. Leon of the Durham region office of the ARF, says increased social acceptance of marijuana smoking may mean respondents are more willing to admit using it.

The use of LSD and amphetamines, including speed, was very low, the report says. Only 2.5 per cent of industrial workers, 4.5 per cent of college students and 6.1 per cent of high school students said they had used any during the six weeks prior to the survey.

Plainclothes Police In Acapulco Arrested

MEXICO CITY (Reuter) — The entire plainclothes police force of the resort city of Acapulco was arrested Tuesday in a government drive against corruption.

Several hundred men were stripped of their weapons and confined to barracks on orders of the new governor of the State of Guerrero, who took office last week after Governor Israel Nogueda went into hiding to avoid fraud charges.

State Public Prosecutor Ramiro Gonzalez said the plainclothes police had paid their own vigilante force of civilians to help control the city, filled through the winter with American tourists.

Nogueda, charged along with two subordinates of defrauding a government agency of $1.4 million, is the first senior Mexican official ever formally accused of corruption.

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Students at Our Lady of Sorrows separate school will walk out Thursday and Friday in a bid to have the Nipissing district separate school board appoint an Indian trustee, Leda McLeod, a school committee spokesman for the Nipissing Ojibwa band, said Tuesday.

Heath's Conqueror Hard Worker

Margaret Thatcher Thought Woman PM Long Way Off

LONDON AP — Two years ago Margaret Thatcher said she did not think a woman would become prime minister of Britain "in my lifetime." Tuesday, her fellow British Conservatives may have changed her mind.

Mrs. Thatcher finished top of the poll Tuesday in a ballot for the leadership of the opposition Conservative party, winning 130 votes, only nine short of the majority needed to win on the next ballot.

Mrs. Thatcher, 49, has often been called "the Dresden shepherdess" by critics. But her reaction to such comments emerged recently when an interviewer asked her if Britain was ready for a woman leader amid the worst economics crisis since the Second World War.

"That's totally the wrong question," she snapped. "What is relevant is who is the right person to lead Britain at this time. Whether the person is a man or a woman does not count."

Her only experience of office was four years as education minister in the Conservative government elected in 1970.

Politically, she opposes many of Mr. Heath's policies. She believes in what many Conservatives regard as the traditional virtues of hard work, rugged independence and thrift.

The daughter of a grocer in Grantham, a market town in Lincolnshire about 100 miles north of London, she was a brilliant student at high school and qualified as a research chemist at Oxford University. She then turned to law and was admitted to the bar as a taxation expert.

She entered politics while still at university and became president of its Conservative club. She married Denis Thatcher, an oil company executive, and they had twins, a boy and a girl, now 21.

After failing in 1950 and 1951 to win election to the British House of Commons from the staunchly Laborite district of Dartford in Kent, she was elected in 1959 to represent Finchley in North London.

Before becoming education minister, she was the Conservative opposition's spokesman in Parliament for transportation, power, housing and pensions, and now speaks for the party on economics affairs.

Gas Price Increases Said for Public Good

OTTAWA (CP) — Large natural gas price increases are in the public interest even though the poor may be hit hard, says Sherman Clark, a California energy consultant.

Mr. Clark, a witness for the Canadian Petroleum Association, told a National Energy Board hearing Tuesday that prices should be allowed to rise to encourage producers to develop further reserves. Government subsidies could help the poor.

The board is holding an inquiry on gas reserves and requirements and will submit a report after the hearing ends in about three weeks. Hearings have been held in five cities in the last three months.

Earlier, Mr. Clark said it is "already too late to avert a probable shortfall of gas supply" between 1976 and 1979. Low gas prices were creating more demand than there was capacity to handle.

He suggested allowing gas prices to rise above oil prices so that the two fuels share equally the home heating and industrial markets. If this occurred, he said, pipeline companies would pay about $8.41 per thousand cubic feet in 1995 to bring gas to Ontario. The price now is about 60 cents and was 21.3 cents in May, 1974.

Bruce Willson, director and former president of Union Gas Co., which distributes gas in southwestern Ontario, said that such increases could mean that in 20 years, an Ottawa family owning a three-bedroom home would pay $2,000 a year to keep warm. He estimated the cost now would be about $275 to $300 a year.

Ambulance Budgets Questioned

Rival's Higher Pay Draws Ire of Meeks

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville ambulance operator Stu Meeks Wednesday criticized provincial government officials for interfering with his business and said "a knock-down, drag-out battle" will be the result.

In an Intelligencer story published Tuesday, Charles Brubacher, director of ambulance services for the province, said budgets for Belleville's two ambulance services will not be approved until the services "integrate". Both LaSalle and City Ambulance services are wholly dependent on ministry of health funds to cover operating costs.

The crux of Mr. Meeks' argument centres on operating budgets provided to both services.

Mr. Brubacher, during a telephone interview with The Intelligencer Tuesday, revealed annual operating budgets for both services. The ministry figures show City Ambulance receiving $380,000 and Mr. Meeks' service receiving $109,000. Both companies are required to provide the same service and through a central hospital dispatch system divide all calls equally.

(In addition to City Ambulance's $380,000 for Belleville services, the company's total budget exceeds $400,000 to accommodate City service to Napanee and Madoc.)

Mr. Meeks — after learning of the apparent discrepancy — queried "how can they (the ministry) possibly justify this?"

"I run the same number of vehicles, my men are just as qualified and my service handles the same number of calls," he said.

By Brubacher making the announcement of integration, "he puts it right on the line," said Mr. Meeks. "It's now a question of survival.

"If that's the way the government wants it, I'm ready to get into the ring," he said.

From his Queen's Park office, Mr. Brubacher said there is "justification" for the difference in subsidies.

Mr. Brubacher listed the reasons, "LaSalle service is not willing to send its men to Camp Borden (to meet provincial training standards); the operator (Mr. Meeks) is not working towards integration; and we've had all kinds of trouble getting financial reporting from the service."

"One service (City) has a level of training that merits higher wages," he said. Wages account for about 90 percent of a service's operating costs.

"The Meeks service employees are being paid at an untrained level because they aren't trained," said Mr. Brubacher.

Mr. Meeks contested any implication that his men did not have sufficient training by saying, "my men are just as well qualified."

A number of his employees have attended the Camp Borden school for ambulance driver-attendants, he said.

"At least five men, after attending the camp, went to work for higher wages at City Ambulance," said Mr. Meeks. "I don't blame them a bit."

Mr. Meeks said "the reason we are slow (in submitting financial reports is because of their (ministry) delays in budget approvals coming down".

"An auditor does my books and he submits the financial statements," said Mr. Meeks.

Mr. Meeks said because much of his time is consumed in other areas of ambulance service operation, little time is left for bookkeeping.

"Maybe when I should be making financial statements, I'm busy welding a vehicle to keep it on the road," he said.

Mr. Meeks said he had inquired about more money for employees and for the service generally but was told, "If you don't like it, get out of the business," Mr. Meeks said he was not aware that City Ambulance had an operating budget three times larger than his.

"If this is the case, I should be going to court and suing the Davis Government for the difference," he said. "This is unbelievable."

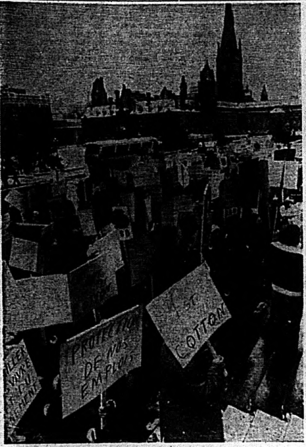
The ministry's move to "integrate" the two Belleville services stems from Belleville being a "high cost area," said Mr. Brubacher.

Mr. Meeks replied, "I offered to run a central dispatch system for the city from my office." The offer was refused and the service since has been operated from the hospital on a budget exceeding $40,000 annually.

"The ministry isn't taking any operator suggestion to cut costs," said Mr. Meeks. "In turning my offer down, that civil servant (Mr. Brubacher) blew $60,000."

Ministry officials are expected in Belleville soon to conduct a full-scale investigation of the two services and suggest a budget for a combined effort.

The two operators will then be given two weeks "to sort it out", said Mr. Brubacher. If that's not possible, "the province will make an arbitrary decision," he said.



Textile Workers Protest

Fifteen busloads of striking Quebec textile workers arrived on Parliament Hill Wednesday to protest the ailing textile industry. More than 8,000 workers in Quebec, Ontario and Nova Scotia have been laid off permanently or temporarily since January, 1974. There are about 100,000 textile workers in Canada. (CP Photo)

Peruvian Police Crushed

LIMA (Reuter) — Tanks fired on civilian rioters Wednesday after loyalist troops crushed a police revolt in a day of bitter fighting here that left at least 30 people dead and dozens more wounded.

Nine civilians were hit by machine-gun fire from tanks roiling across Lima's central San Martin Square as the left-wing government of Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado grappled with its worst crisis in years.

But the violence tapered off after midnight and Lima—under a dusk-to-dawn curfew along with the nearby port of Callao—was quiet today.

The trouble began when troops and tanks stormed the barracks where 1,500 policemen, demanding more pay and better conditions, had barricaded themselves for 48 hours.

The police were given 15 minutes to end their revolt before a Russian-built tank fired on the main gates. In the 20-minute battle that followed, at least 30 people died, police said.

Then, in what appeared to be a spontaneous riot, thousands of persons swarmed into the square, ignoring warning shots fired by the troops.

Oil Export Tax Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — The export tax on crude-oil shipments to the United States will be increased 30 cents to $5.50 a barrel effective March 1, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday.

The increase, based on recommendations from the National Energy Board, reflects changes in the international price of oil, the minister said in a statement.

Primary reason for the increase is a 38-cent boost in the price of Venezuelan oil announced last month.

Hot Seat

By ISABEL HUGGAN
Staff Reporter

Firemen were called to the Park Theatre, Front St., last night at 10 p.m. to quell a small fire.

Apparently, a cigarette had been dropped or left, still lighted, on one of the seats in the downstairs section of the theatre that was filled to capacity for the evening show.

Although no flames erupted, the smouldering seat was almost burned through by the time the firemen put out the fire and removed the seat.

Nightclub Murders Probed

Man Who Feared Blass Held Involved in Blaze

MONTREAL (CP) — After hearing 12 hours of testimony from 23 witnesses, Coroner Cyrille Delage held Fernand Beaudet criminally responsible at a coroner's inquest Wednesday for the deaths of 13 persons in a north-end nightclub Jan. 21.

Mr. Delage also sentenced Beaudet, 28, to 30 days in jail for contempt for refusing to testify at the inquest into the slayings at the Gargantua Bar Salon.

As for Richard Blass, the prison escapee killed in a police raid three days after the Gargantua incident and implicated in the deaths at the inquest, the coroner said:

"I see no point in holding Richard Blass responsible in view of the fact that he is already dead."

The coroner held that the fire in the Gargantua was of criminal origin and the inquest testimony led him to conclude Beaudet was the "presumed author" of the crime.

Beaudet, arrested on a coroner's warrant last Friday along with four other persons in connection with the slayings, was the only one to remain in custody after the inquest.

Beaudet's girlfriend, Irene Ouellet, 22, cab driver Joseph Leboeuf, 3, Michel Melchoir, 22, and Richard Blass's brother, Michel, 30, were freed.

Evidence at the inquest revealed that Beaudet may have been a fearful participant in the mass murder.

The tape of a wiretapped telephone conversation showed Beaudet's sister, Gisele, 20, telling a friend, Carole Cholette, Jan. 24 that Beaudet had been told to be present at the Gargantua nightclub by Richard Blass, a man he feared.

Cholette told police in a statement filed in evidence that Beaudet was afraid of Blass because the latter had once beaten him up.

A tape of a wiretapped conversation recorded by Montreal police the day of the Gargantua fire showed Beaudet discussing the incident with another sister, Jacqueline, 18.

When she asked if he had been involved, Beaudet replied: "Well, yes."

Jacqueline also said in a police statement that her brother had told her on another occasion that Richard Blass was responsible for the slayings.

She said in her statement that Blass herded the victims into a small room, fired a shot through the door when one man tried to break out and then blocked the door with a jukebox.

Cholette said she spoke with Beaudet four days after the slayings and he told her: "I can't stand living like this anymore. I have 13 murders on my conscience."

Native Peoples Promised Action

EDMONTON (CP) — Federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand promised Wednesday that recommendations drafted by the national conference on native people and the criminal justice system will not be allowed to die through government inaction.

Mr. Allmand said in an interview at the end of the three-day conference that a 33-member Canadian advisory council on native people and the criminal justice system will study the recommendations and, if necessary, call other national conferences to further discuss native people's legal problems.

"Nobody can say how long it will take to act on these recommendations because there is no way to tell now how long it will take to study the proposals and come up with ways to implement them," he said.

The council is to report to native peoples groups and governments. It will include native and government representatives from each province and territory, and representatives from four federal departments and five national native groups.

The native groups are the National Indian Brotherhood, Native Council of Canada, Inuit Tapirisat (Eskimo fellowship), National Native Women's Association, and National Association of Friendship Centres.

Alberta Solicitor-General Helen Hunley suggested the advisory council aim for another national conference on native people and the criminal justice system "within two years" to further discuss issues raised at the conference.

Mr. Allmand said he thinks other conferences will be necessary before most of the broad and sweeping changes recommended by conference position papers can be made into law.

Among the most commonly-heard recommendations were ones calling for changes in the attitudes and operation of the RCMP and other police departments which deal with native people.

Mr. Allmand, minister responsible for the RCMP, said he will discuss "every opinion about the force presented at this conference" with the commissioner of the RCMP.

Mr. Allmand said he was pleased at the ministerial approval given to the concept of native justices-of-the-peace who would have the power to hold provincial court sessions in Indian and native communities.

of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — William Finkle Machine Ltd. of Belleville has been awarded a $20,000 federal contract to provide welding services at Canadian Forces Base Trenton, the department of supply and services announced this week.

It was one of 201 unclassified contracts worth $10,000 or more that were awarded by the department to Canadian companies during the week ended Jan. 24. Total value of the contracts amounted to $9,484,571.

New Ambulance Drivers To Get $4.50 an Hour

City Ambulance employees and management agreed to a work contract that would pay probationary or new employees a starting rate of $4.50 an hour.

This is compared to the current $2.85 cents an hour.

The average wage in the firm now is $4.10 for driver-attendants — a rate that would climb to $5.75 in the new contract. Employees work a 40-hour week.

Before the pact can become official, it must be approved by the ministry of health, ambulance services branch.

Thursday, LaSalle employees will begin contract negotiations though no details have been disclosed.

Ambulance operator Stu Meeks preferred not to go into details but said the men "are being reasonable in their requests."

Currently, LaSalle employees earn an average $130 a week. The men work a regular work week of 48 hours plus additional on-call hours.

One of the terms in the negotiations will be a switch from a weekly to an hourly rate.

Motion Recinded

Marmora Rejects Tent-trailer Park

MARMORA — Marmora and Lake Townships Council hae acted to rescind a motion passed at the Jan. 13 council meeting giving tentative approval to a requested zoning change that could have allowed a tent-trailer park to be established at Twin Lakes in Marmora Township.

Council acted after learning of the strong opposition by nearly every cottage owner in the area.

A meeting of cottagers was organized by C. W. Young of Belleville. More than 50 cottagers attended the Saturday afternoon meeting held in Marmora town hall.

Council interrupted its monthly meeting to hear the protests, then returned to the council room to pass the rescinding motion.

Mr. Young presented a 3½-page brief outlining reasons why the proposed development should not be allowed. Other speakers were Ken Beckett, Dr. H. McActeer, H. McFarlane and John McCarthy, all of them opposing the project.

Mr. Young said, "In the 23 years I have been coming to the Twin Lakes area I have seen many changes to the ecology of the area. Most have been detrimental and due to the impact of man."

He said he has seen the snapping turtle, muskelunge, and the rock bass disappear. The lakes, which were once crystal clear, now have unsightly gobs of algae every summer. Only a few of the tea plate size bull frogs can be seen now, but 15 to 20 years ago they would roar in large numbers on spring and summer nights.

Mr. Young went on to say that 15 years ago he would not have hesitated to drink from either lake at any time. Now he said, he believes only a foolish person would take the risk.

"The changes that have occurred are the direct result of the population density on the east lake growing from two cottages in 1953 to the present 19 and a similar, though later, development on the west lake" he said. Mr. Young suggested that the proposed development, with its transient population, would be less inclined to protect the environment than those with permanent responsibilities.

He went on to point out that during the dry season the flow from Twin Sisters Lakes is a mere trickle. "It must be obvious they are in a precarious state and that to tax their restorative powers further would be disastrous. Not only the cottagers but the public who have always had access to both lakes, would lose a beautiful natural resource."

The brief closed with a request for Council to reject the re-zoning application.

The townships council was reluctant at the January meeting to approve the request for rezoning by John Cowan of Toronto for the same reasons the spokesman for the cottagers brought out. It was only after Mr. Cowan pointed out that he also had to get the approval of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit and the ministry of industry and tourism, that council agreed to forward the application to the planning board and county council with a recommendation for approval.

Mr. Cowan will be advised by letter of council's decision.

PUC Suggests Common Standards

TRENTON — Electrical equipment in subdivisions going just outside Trenton town limits in Sidney Township should be similar to those in town to avoid any additional change-over costs when, and if, township lands ever become part of Trenton.

Such a provision for uniformity of electrical services should be included in an existing agreement between the two municipalities over the sale of town water, Trenton manager Douglas Manlow suggested Wednesday.

He said he fears the reoccurence of the situation on Dundas St. East 10 years ago when the PUC annexed Sidney land and was forced to alter costly transformers to fit them into the town system.

At present, he said, subdividers are building in Sidney and installing a rural electrical system. On the other hand, in Trenton, builders must pay the PUC $300 a lot for the installation of underground electrical services.

Take 2

"If they were smart," said Mr. Manlow, "They would build on the boundaries and not have to pay $300 for installation."

Location Request Premature

PICTON — Prince Edward County council's property and supply committee has asked Picton town council for its recommendations concerning location of a community swimming pool on the county-owned fairgrounds property.

County clerk Thomas Walker recently forwarded a letter to town clerk Andrew Jarvis, noting the property and supply committee feels it cannot make a recommendation to county council without comment from the town.

It was observed the town should indicate if a pool at the fairgrounds would be in keeping with local planning practises and whether it would be environmentally wise in view of the noise factor and town residents livng adjacent to the fairgrounds.

Councillor Harry Abram, at a council session this week, termed the letter premature.

He said if the pool is built on county property it cannot be given to the town if all available grants are to be received.

Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson suggested the letter requesting recommendations from the town should be referred tot he planning and development committee and the chairman of the Community Centres Board for study and report. A motion calling for this action was carried.

Original cost estimate for contruction of the dam was $25,000. but the actual cost was $38,000.

Initially, the provincial government made a grant of $12,500. toward the project.

Cubs Watch Council Operate

PICTON — To earn citizenship badges a group of 15 cub scouts from Third Picton, United Church, attended the February session of town council.

Scout leader Boy Goostrey explained that observation of the council's function forms part of the boys' work toward citizenship badges.

The cub scouts were welcomed by acting mayor Bessie Ward.

Council to Decide Fate of New Arena

By CHRIS ALMEY

Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — Reeve Ray Shortt told a Stirling district arena finance committee meeting Wednesday night "We've got to get federal assistance or there is no way we will have an arena unless it comes out of our pockets."

Members of council were invited to the meeting and the Centennial arena committee was also on hand.

Finance committee chairman Jack Bush called on Reeve Shortt to take his council into the adjacent room and decide whether or not they would make a financial commitment towards a new arena. Former deputy-reeve Bob Fallis said that was asking too much, so council was asked to hold a special meeting and make a decision soon.

Mr. Bush said he had talked with Ottawa and was told no grants were available. Reeve Shortt said that he has been told federal assistance will be introduced in April or May.

"We are at the end of the road and looking for guidance," Mr. Bush said to Reeve Shortt.

The reeve explained that it is expected taxes will be going up due to increases from the county and board of education, and that it will probably cost more than the $591,000 previously considered to be adequate for a sewer project. Until all these costs are known, the reeve said, a decision on the arena was difficult.

"We have to have a green light to say go," Mr. Bush said. "We are fumbling around in the dark. It's tough to raise money for something when you don't know what you are going to build."

Lloyd Jones said the problem was a political one at this stage. He said there has got to be a meeting of councils involved ... Stirling, Sydney, Rawdon, Thurlow, and Huntington.

Mr. Jones said there should be a committee above all councils involved to act as a regional committee. "The committees that exist now are tenuous ones. They have no real power," he said.

Present at the meeting were Jim Pollock and Burton Sharpe representing Rawdon, Ted Pollock and Harold Thompson from Huntington, and Ron McKeown from Thurlow. No delegate from Sydney was observed.

Brett Park development Co. Ltd. principal Thomas Fleming stands to explain to Trenton Utilities Commission manager Douglas Manlow, Left, and chairman James MacDonald his proposal to move a water line along Stanley St. Closer to the base of Mount Pelion, where he says construction costs will be cheaper. The new line would feed a subdivision on North Front St. Any action will be taken after a study to discover precise property ownership at the base of Mount Pelion is completed.

Vital Radio Link

Storm warnings are out already for owners of pleasure craft and other small vessels on the St. Lawrence.

All because the federal government plans to close the Kingston marine radio station and operate it by remote control from Cardinal.

But Cardinal is 75 miles west of Kingston and concern is being expressed at the possibility of breakdown of the proposed link during storm conditions, affecting among other factors the several island ferry operations.

Cost rather than safety seems to be uppermost in government thinking, ignoring as it does the sudden and even violent weather changes that can occur in this reach of the St. Lawrence and all the way to the busy Thousand Isands area.

The Kingston station has been a beacon in the storm for boats operating over a wide area and has had the advantage of operating from the same building as the weather office. An incident last summer was typical of the vital role it has played. A government boat working on a wave study tower was warned by the station of a sudden squall deveoping. It had not been mentioned in forecasts and the warning afforded the crew vital minutes in which to beach their vessel. Winds of 50 mph were reported later.

Had it not been for the Kingston marine station, the story could have been different.

Quite apart from these and other factors, such as additional costs to boat owners for radio telephone contact with other stations in Canada and the U.S., it is puzzling to see the axe about to fall on Kingston. The Limestone City is a major centre from any number of standpoints, and why Ottawa should consider severing this vital marine radio link makes no sense.

A large number of vessels — exceeding by far the number operating within the orbit of Cardinal — are under the watchful eye of Kingston. The government should reconsider; lives and the safety of countless small craft on the St. Lawrence are at stake.

Fact from Fiction

The public these days is being subjected to a great deal of what might be termed scientific ballyhoo. Bombarded from all sides by the theoretical and the scary and the speculative, the layman not surprisingly has difficulty sifting fact from fiction.

Take the recent palaver about asbestos and possible links with cancer. Well, it's not so where the swallowing of asbestos fibres is concerned. That's the word from Dr. Don Grant, director of Health and Safety for Ontario Hydro. Dr. Grant is quoted as saying that statements about the possible cancerous effects of swallowing the fibres have no credibility.

But inhaling asbestos? That's another thing and Dr. Grant warns of its danger. Hydro however recognized this danger several years ago and has made much progress in eliminating asbestos insulation at thermal plants.

Hydro's publication, Hydroscope, refers moreover to an article in the December issue of Archives of Environmental Health which says that three different laboratories in the United States independently concluded there was no evidence of ingested mineral fibres penetrating tissues in rats.

Experiments in this category were also supported by findings on coal and hard-rock miners who swallow, during their lifetime, nearly 100 times the amount of dust that is stored in their lungs.

"The intestinal wall or mesenteric lymph nodes of these people show no evidence of storage of the ingested dust particles," the article says.

That should make us feel better. Ever since the nuclear contamination bogey has been noised abroad, we have lived in the shadow of one form of pollution or another — and long before that of course, but then we were perhaps less aware (or less brainwashed) in those days. A little knowledge can be a dangerous thing.

O Canada, THAT Stands On Guard For Thee

How Michael Pitfield Entered The Bureaucracy's Inner Sanctum

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — From $5,000 a year to $60,000, in just 15 years on the federal payroll.

That's progress.

And that's Michael Pitfield, the young — only 37 — and hotly controversial Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet who took over the bureaucracy's most important, powerful and highest paid post at the right hand of Prime Minister Trudeau earlier this month.

A close friend of the Prime Minister, on such intimate terms as to be a holiday travelling companion, Michael Pitfield's appointment is still creating waves both in Parliament and the senior civil service.

Resentment over his swift ascendency to the top over the heads of older career men who spent a lifetime climbing the bureaucratic ladder, ran so deep as to spur an exodus — almost a stampede — of top hands from federal service.

And curiosity over his companionship with the Prime Minister prompted pages of probing questions on the House of Commons record.

Two Conservative MPs in particular, Joseph Clark of the Alberta riding of Rocky Mountain and Thomas Cossitt, former leading Liberal executive and party financier, now Tory MP for the Eastern Ontario constituency of Leeds, have been digging deep.

Dealing with the Pitfield appointment, Joe Clark put his finger neatly on the problem.

"It clearly raises the fear — as do the consequent resignations of other senior deputy ministers in tandem (and protest) — that we are developing a public service chosen not because of its competence, but because of its loyalty to the particular point of view of the occupants of the Treasury benches. This is a serious threat to our system of government."

It was, he suggested, government by cronyism.

Then it was Thomas Cossitt who asked a series of questions revealing how Michael Pitfield set a new speed record in promotion and payroll progress.

In 1960, the record as filed by the Prime Minister in the Commons, shows Michael Pitfield was Head Clerk in the office of the Justice Minister at an annual $5,400.

A month later that same year he became associate private secretary in Justice at $6,800.

Two months later he was named secretary to the Royal Commission on Publications at $7,000.

In 1962 he was pro tem secretary to the Royal Commission on Taxation at $16,500.

Here the march for the top halted and in retreat, he became a Government House attache at $200 a month, rising two years later to Government House Officer at $7,800.

In 1965 he was back in the same federal stream as a Privy Council officer Grade 6 at $17,700.

And from that point onward and upward there was no looking back.

By 1966 he was assistant cabinet secretary at $22,500.

Two years later up the ladder he scrambled to Deputy Cabinet Secretary, Grade Two, at $24,700.

One more year, and up a notch to Deputy Cabinet Secretary Grade Three to $29,000.

In 1971, another posting to Senior Deputy Cabinet Secretary and $37,500.

Two more years and he was Deputy Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs at $54,000.

And now, to the bureaucratic mountain-top monarch of all the federal public service as Cabinet Secretary and Clerk of the Privy Council at $60,000, (with an increase in the works).

But that's not all.

There are, of course, fringe benefits, apart altogether from the nation's cushiest pension plan.

Such goodies as allowances for what the feds call "Official Hospitality," travelling expenses and Executive Development Leave which included some high level post-graduate study at Harvard.

In just six years it all added up to $27,142 with nearly $21,000 in travel expenses, about $4,000 for entertaining and the balance for development at Harvard of his executive talents.

When he went to Harvard's executive finishing school for a short course in decision-making, it was, as the parliamentary record reads, done "on the authority of the Prime Minister."

At the time, Michael Pitfield was a Deputy Minister at the second level, drawing down $54,000.

Thomas Cossitt says: "Some guys have it, and some haven't — the priceless asset of palsy-walsyism with the Prime Minister."

Gun Control

The Christian Science Monitor

Strong federal gun control remains long overdue in the United States. Its advocates have new reasons for hope this year — and commensurate responsibilities for taking full advantage of them.

If such legislation can begin saving lives by 1976, the nation will have that much more genuine cause for celebration on its 200th anniversary. In this century alone, at least 800,000 Americans have been killed by privately owned guns — more than the battle deaths in the Revolution and all later wars together.

Opponents of strict licensing and limitation of ownership argue that people — not guns — are the murderers. Clearly the fundamental answer to gun violence is human reform, and the fundamental means of preventing gun accidents is taking proper care.

But guns, especially handguns, are uniquely dangerous. And in today's society the more guns available, the more gun violence.

John White Among the Dropouts When Next Election Is Called

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — With the next election there will be an important exodus of members from the present house. Perhaps one of the largest we have seen.

Many of them will be veterans, such as Osie Villeneuve, the PC from Glengarry, who have spent a good share of their lives as representatives of their community.

Some of them will be missed. Others may be no great loss.

But there is one man certainly who will be missed and for whom the province will be weaker through his absence.

It is hard to think of John White as only 50.

Not because of any physical appearance.

A man who exudes vitality in appearance White comes across as less than his age.

But he has been around here for so long and has held so many important jobs that one tends to think of him in terms of an eminence.

First elected for London South in the 1959 campaign it seems that since then he has been in the forefront.

Known as a superb organizer when John Robarts ran for the party leadership in 1961 he was one of his key workers and strategists.

Then he became for a while the party hatchet-man in the house.

When the opposition, or one of its members, had to be cut down he usually was given the job.

First he was chief party whip and then, of course, he eventually moved into the government.

He was minister of revenue, minister of university affairs, minister of industry and tourism and then until a short while ago was treasurer.

In all of these portfolios he showed himself to be an administrator of courage and the capacity to think creatively.

Quite frankly what puzzles me most about his retirement is that he is one of those rarities: a born politician who revels in his job.

With his ability he undoubtedly will be able to make his way in the commercial area.

But almost certainly he will never have as much fun again.

And we in Ontario certainly are going to miss him.

"Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will shew you things to come. He shall glorify me; for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you." John 16:13,14

Just as God was in Christ, even so Jesus is in the Holy Spirit. How dare we repeat the rejection that Jesus experienced when He came, by ignoring the person, power and presence of the Holy Spirit. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit."

Head of the World Bank Possible Post for Canada's John Turner

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

A Canadian—John Turner by name—is being mooted as a future superstar of the international financial scene.

The rumors arise at a time when the huge Washington-based inter-governmental lenders are becoming more important than ever in world affairs.

Our finance minister's most recent moment of international prominence came a few weeks ago in Washington when he steered representatives of a group of industrialized and developing nations into an agreement for mutual co-operation in the face of Middle East oil producers economic warfare against oil consumers.

That was enough to lead to speculation that Mr. Turner would be asked to take over the top job in the world's biggest bank.

Any change in the leadership of the Washington-based international financial organizations would have a far-reaching effect today, when the 30-year-old structure of world banking is being hammered by the action of the oil-producers' cartel in demanding that purchasers pay approximately 100 times as much as it costs to produce a barrel of oil.

Here are the major international organizations that are trying to preserve the balance of the world's economy in the face of this threat:

—The International Monetary Fund is something like a giant credit union, with 126 countries as its members. Its objective in borrowing and lending is to assist member-countries in handling temporary deficits in their international payments obligations.

Of the $35-billion in loans that IMF has made since it began, about $6.7-billion is outstanding.

The role of IMF in the current world economic crisis is to make loans aavailable from a special "oil facility" to countries needing help in paying for essential imports of oil.

—The World Benk, closely associated with IMF, has grown from its original post-war role in financing European reconstruction to its present position as the major source of development loans for (primarily) poorer countries.

The Bank (the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development is its full title) has made loans totalling $28-billion, of which about one-quarter have gone to the least developed countries.

More than $2.5-billion has been borrowed by the World Bank from the member countries of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries during the past year.

The members of the oil cartel are, of course, accumulating the surpluses that are the other side of the consuming countries deficits.

The more they accumulate, and the more they make available to IMF and the World Bank, the stronger will be their voice in the two giant organizations that have, until now, always looked for the United States for their major supply of funds and for leadership.

The current president of the World Bank is Robert S. McNamara, 58, formerly U.S. defence secretary and, before that, president of Ford Motor Co.

Mr. McNamara's contract was renewed for another five years in 1974. The prospect that he might be dislodged—or that the World Bank presidency would go to any non-American—seems so remote as to squelch any speculation that John Turner might take over.

On the other hand, Mr. McNamara's current tenure promises to be anything but serene, as the newly-rich Arab groups — basically anti-American—gains in wealth and influence.

Bishop Fights for Social Justice In Brazil Despite the Risks

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Dom Helder Camara is a small, bird-like man with a transcendental quality to him, an archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church in Brazil whose diocese of Recife and Olinda is one of the poorest in the world.

It sits in a vast country experiencing the much-publicized Brazilian economic miracle which gave that country the fastest growth rate in the world during a depressed 1974.

Northeast Brazil is the antithesis of the dynamic and commercially exploding big southern coastal cities of Brazil. It possesses about 25 million of Brazil's over-all population of 90 million and a poverty level close to that of India and Bangladesh.

Archbishop Camara has become the outspoken critic of a regime he feels is more deeply committed to "development," than "liberation" of man and which has responded to the determined church leader with threats against him, imprisonment and torture of some of his priests and nuns.

Dom Helder travels the world, about four times a year, calling for human renewal, an end to world injustice, reminding himself how very difficult his task is, by also reminding his listeners that not even Christ could close the gap between the rich man in the parable and poor Lazarus.

It is in this context, the immense disparities between the rich and poor nations of the world that Dom Helder goes forth to remind us of our common humanity and how much we deny it in each other.

Dom Helder's powerful message has developed not only because of the character of the man, but probably too because Brazil embodies both the viewpoints of the rich nations of the world, among which Brazil will some day be included if her growth rate continues, and of the poor nations of the world by virtue of the unresolved poverty and near-famine of her vast northeast.

Dom Helder constantly refers to the "dialogue" between us and rejects the admiration which some of his followers hold for China's system as an answer for reorganizing the human and natural resources of Latin America.

In Toronto this week at a private luncheon for the local business community, the gallant and frail Brazilian church leader rejected the Chinese solution because in it, men cannot openly "dialogue" with each other.

And this kind of response to questions from his leftwing and Marxist supporters must confuse them and undoubtedly gives his enemies the opportunity to charge he foments social disorder, when in effect he is appalled by the amount of it already around.

Dom Helder's presence warms the hearts of his listeners, wins disciples for that nebulous thing he calls "human socialism."

It is the very nebulous character of the transcendental leaders from the Third World which makes them in the long run less effective than they should be when confronting dehumanizing political and technological systems.

Dom Helder says he has no firm programs for the future, only wishes to see an end to injustice. However all great reformers from within the Catholic church have had to institutionalize their cause one way or another.

This was most distressing to St. Francis of Assisi who purposely abandoned structures, yet in turn had to found new ones for his religious order which survived him and perpetuated his work.

Layoffs from Local Industries

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Some 200 employees at Ideal Vendors in Deseronto have had their economic world collapse, 350 at Northern Electric in Belleville have now joined this unfortunate category plus approximately 50 employees at Canadian General Electric in Trenton.

I feel I have overlooked some groups but in any event here are 600 people within a 25-mile radius who must indeed be heartened and grateful for the restraint show by the members of the Hastings Board of Education in raising their own pay a mere 50 percent instead of the 100 percent they could have had, courtesy of a feeble-minded Ontario Department of Education (and of course the taxpayers' dollars).

When it comes to fighting inflation, setting an example in cutting down expenses or using restraint in wage increases, there is no one that does a better job of double-talking than a politician, at whatever level you care to consider.

Is there any group or profession in the country today with a lower credibility rating? Is it just a coincidence that "politics" is an eight-letter word or a four-letter word doubled?

CY NICOL

The Economics of Egg Marketing

Editor,
The Intelilgencer:

May I quote from your issue of the 25th of January.

"A spokesman from the Egg Marketing Board says, egg prices are being increased in the stores to reflect higher prices at the producer level."

"The Ontario producer is still losing about five cents a dozen on all the eggs he sells."

So we understand that there are millions of surplus eggs still flooding the market, and the Egg Marketing Board is quite unable to prevent the producer from shipping them in, even though every single dozen is costing him five cents loss.

Te know that we have to pay the board a levy on every dozen eggs we buy, the purpose being to keep the board in existance.

We are told that if it were not for the board being in control there would be chaos in the egg world.

Now we have to pay more for the eggs we buy, the board is going to get rid of the surplus, maybe like it did last year.

We have a situation where eggs are in surplus supply. The price per dozen is being raised., this on top of previous rises.

Old age pensioners and kids in our own cities are being obliged to eat dog food

And the Egg Marketing Board is performing a necessary public service?.

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario landfill needs will be reduced by 80 per cent by 1990 when the province's recycling and reclamation program is fully developed, Environment Minister William Newman said Wednesday.

Inquiry Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), arguing that police forces are demoralized and crime is rising, called Wednesday for the restoration of capital punishment and a royal commission inquiry into justice administration.

Loss Reported

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp., which lost $5.6 million in the last three months of 1974, is eliminating its 10-cent semi-annual dividend, payable this quarter.

LIP Grants

OTTAWA (CP) — Nearly twice as many Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grants had been approved in Ontario as in Quebec by Dec. 1, 1974, even though Quebec applications had doubled the total submitted in Ontario, a written answer tabled in the Commons Wednesday shows.

No Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Barry Donath, a Toronto high school teacher, said Wednesday he will not lay assault charges against a 16-year-old student who struck him in class last week.

Devices Found

HAMILTON (CP) — Henry Ruppert, 36, of Acton, Ont., pleaded guilty Tuesday to nine charges under the new Federal Privacy Act of possessing devices capable of intercepting private communications.

LaSalle Denies Bribing Newsmen

OTTAWA (CP) — Roch LaSalle (PC—Joliette) denied before a parliamentary committee Wednesday that he ever has paid reporters for news coverage.

"I never offered a nickel to reporters," he told the Commons privileges and elections committee investigating allegations that politicians bribe reporters.

The charges were made in December by Social Credit Leader Real Caouette who admitted paying two reporters and said he suspected Mr. LaSalle and other MPs of doing the same.

Mr. LaSalle said the suggestion is absurd. It was made in connection with publicity given to him when he violated Commons dress rules by appearing without a tie.

It would be impossible to pay all the newspaper carrying accounts of the incident, he said, adding that he knows of no MPs who bribe reporters.

The committee agreed to invite Mr. Caouette as the next witness but there appeared to be little interest in forcing him to do so if he refuses. The Social Credit leader did not attend the meeting. He would not say later whether he will appear.

Gets 5 Years

ALEXANDRIA, Ont. (CP) — Jean-Guy Servais, 24, of Alexandria was sentenced Wednesday to five years in prison after pleading guilty on Jan. 20 to a charge of assault with intent to commit robbery.

The charge was laid in connection with the beating of Agnes Hope, 78, also of Alexandria, last Oct. 31.

Mrs. Hope died Nov. 24 in a Montreal hospital, but Donald Johnson, assistant crown attorney, said it was not sufficiently established that she died as a result of the beating.

Alexandria is about 30 miles northeast of Cornwall.

Organized Poaching Suspected

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — Conservation officials feel they may have stumbled onto an organized ring of poachers in the Round Lake region about 30 miles southwest of here, says a provincial government official.

Alan Armstrong, fish and wildlife supervisor with the department of natural resources, says conservation officials patrolling the area last week found evidence of seven wounded or gutted deer.

While poaching has always been fairly common in the area, he said, it now has reached the point where "there appears to be a little organization."

"It isn't just an isolated landowner who sees a chance to knock off a deer for the larder. It's a fairly regular thing."

Syncrude Cost May Escalate

OTTAWA (CP) — The promised transfusion of federal funds into the Syncrude oil sands project might drain taxpayers of more than the $300 million already pledged, the House of Commons learned Wednesday.

Pressed by New Democratic Party questions, Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Ottawa is bound to contribute 15 per cent of development costs, even if that percentage exceeds $300 million. However, the government would not go much higher than that, he told reporters later.

Costs of the northeastern Alberta development already have doubled once.

Any major cost change would mean "all the parties involved will have to sit down and review the situation," said Mr. Chretien. If there were a five-or 10-per-cent increase, "some parties will have a hell of a problem and we will be among them."

Mr. Chretien said he doubts the project will cost more than the estimated $2 billion. A deal announced Tuesday brought the federal, Alberta and Ontario governments into the project with shares of 15, 10 and five per cent, respectively.

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., Canada-Cities Service Ltd. and Imperial Oil Ltd. had threatened to drop the Syncrude project if it did not get another $1 billion in assistance. The consortium eventually up up another $400 million themselves on top of the $600 million provided by the three governments.

Special tax breaks and pricing promises given Syncrude also came in for attention on Parliament Hill Wednesday.

Prime Minister Trudeau said any applications for similar breaks would be looked at "on their merit." Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield had asked if other oil sands developers can expect similar treatment.

The National Energy Board says a new plant is needed every two years on the vast oil sands to ensure Canadian self-sufficiency in oil.

Asked by Harvie Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) if a new plant is expected to be built every two years without tax breaks, the prime minister said the government has "no particular rhythm of construction" in mind.

Great Canadian Oil Sands, a Sun Oil subsidiary already is operating on the sands near Fort McMurray, 225 miles northeast of Edmonton.

NDP Parliamentary Leader Ed Broadbent, whose party favors full public control of the sands, said the NDP will try to lead public opinion to change the government's policy. The three companies in Syncrude—holding 70-per-cent control—all are subsidiaries of U.S.-based oil companies.

Canadians Said Unable To Consume All Beef

WALKERTON, Ont. (CP) — United States consumers should absorb the current surplus of Canadian beef and thereby return the domestic industry to normal, the president of the Ontario Beef Improvement Association said Wednesday.

Grant Burrows of Kleinburg, Ont., speaking to the Bruce County chapter of the association in this community 50 miles southwest of Owen Sound, said American influence may be felt this year or next.

"The beef being produced must be consumed and there is no way Canadians can consume the amount we are producing," he said. "The Americans were our best trade customers and still are and it will be the Americans who will cure our beef problems."

Mr. Burrows also told the group it should lobby with the federal government for a repeal of the ban on the use of the growth stimulent diethylstilbestrol.

Use of the stimulant, which some tests indicate may cause cancer in human beings, is permitted in the U.S.

6 good reasons why a grown woman needs milk every day.

The 6 good reasons are the six important nutrients contained in milk. You need them all for health. No other food provides them all...in such perfect proportion. Here they are:

1. Protein. It isn't overstatement to say that protein is what we're made of: the body's basic "building block" at all ages. You probably didn't know that milk is an excellent source of protein. The best type of protein for your needs!
2. Calcium. You don't need calcium just during the years your bones and teeth are forming. You need it to keep those bones and teeth healthy throughout adult life. And milk is the best, and most widely available, source of calcium.
3. Phosphorus and calcium work together in the lifelong task of maintaining good bone and tooth condition. So it's nice to know that milk is also an excellent source of phosphorus.
4. Riboflavin, one of the B Vitamins, is a factor in the general health of adults as well as of children. An excellent source of it is found in milk.
5. Vitamin A is also required for your good health. Whole milk is an excellent source of it; but skim milk drinkers will need to get their Vitamin A from other foods.
6. Thiamine is another health factor which your body needs each day...just as it did when you were a child. Milk is classed as a "good" dietary source of thiamine.

There they are: six nutrients you, as an adult, must have to keep your health. And one easy place to find them all: in any, and every, glass of whole milk you drink.

Do you drink at least one every day? Probably not. And here's probably why not.

The perils of growing up.

What happened when you entered your teens? Just what happened to most other Canadian teen-agers: you stopped taking your cues in dress and behaviour from your parents, and began to take them from members of your own age group.

As they did, you did. As they dressed, you dressed (and when you think back on some of those outfits, you probably cringe!)

But it all had its meaning: you were putting away the habits of childhood, getting ready to grow up.

Unfortunately, one of the habits your group put away was a good one: the habit of drinking milk every day. (Remember? It was "kid stuff". Cola was the sophisticated drink.)

Even more unfortunately, if you are typical, you never did resume the daily milk habit.

You drink a couple of glasses every week—and tell yourself that that makes you a milk drinker.

But it doesn't. Milk is such an important food that nobody ever outgrows the need for it...every day.

That "nobody" includes you, you know.

You, who are so busy being concerned about your family's nutrition that you haven't stopped to think about your own.

Get back to basics.

No doubt about it, milk is one of the most fundamental foods. Nutritionally speaking, it is absolutely in a class by itself.

Milk provides more of the nutrients you need for health...and provides them in a more balanced way...than any other every-day food.

Adding a glass or two of milk to each day's food intake, therefore, is probably the biggest single nutritional favour you can do yourself.

And one of the easiest—you don't cook or mix, you just pour and drink.

And, still, one of the most economical. In spite of recent price increases, you get more all-round nutritional value per penny from milk than from any other basic food you buy.

One more tidbit: for all its high food value, milk has a surprisingly moderate calorie count.

In terms of the nutrition it delivers per calorie, in fact, milk simply can't be beaten!

Does that sound like a food that you can afford to go on ignoring?

You bet it doesn't.

"Today's the first day of the rest of your life."

So start today, maybe even right this minute, to make milk a regular part of your life. At least once a day. Every day.

Remember, there are six very good reasons for doing so.

Protein, calcium, phosphorus, riboflavin, Vitamin A, thiamine.

United Church Disappointed But Continues Union Talks

TORONTO (CP) — The United Church of Canada came close to breaking off negotiations with the Anglican Church of Canada on church union Wednesday but finally decided to go ahead on the path it has pursued since 1943.

Disappointed with a statement by the House of Bishops of the Anglican Church that the bishops saw no hope in revisions of the plan of union that would lead to a huge Church of Christ in Canada, the 83-member executive of the United Church general council said it would meet with its counterparts of the other uniting churches today just to see what they have to offer.

A joint session of the national executives of the United Church, the Anglican Church and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) is scheduled today to consider revisions to the plan of union agreed upon generally in 1972.

But the executive of the United Church is to meet again tonight to decide upon a course of action, dependent upon decisions of the Christian Church and the Anglican Church executives that met Wednesday night.

The board of directors of the Christian church met in Guelph, Ont., and the national executive council of the Anglican Church in Toronto.

Their decisions on a course of action were forwarded to Rev. George Morrison, general secretary of the United Church general council, who was to make his recommendations to the United Church executive today, before the joint sessions of the three churches participating in the negotiations.

The feeling of the United Church council, expressed in a show of hands—there was no formal vote—was that talks should continue.

There were three negative votes and many abstentions, but Dr. Morrison told the executive that regardless of the expressions shown, he would decide upon a course of action—dependent upon what word he received Wednesday night from the other churches.

Today's joint session of the executives of the three churches had been set up months ago to discuss only possible revisions to the plan of union.

The House of Bishops of the Anglican Church, 35 bishops representing 35 dioceses, threw an unexpected curve into this plan when, at a weekend meeting here, it decided that "most of us doubt that there is serious hope for a successful outcome to a further revision process."

Plumptre Objects To Loss of Farm Land

OTTAWA (CP) — Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the federal food prices review board, has called on the federal government not to build a proposed airport at Pickering, Ont., to serve Metropolitan Toronto.

The proposed airport will spur development in the area and result in wastage of precious agricultural land, Mrs. Plumptre said in a statement Wednesday.

"A decision to go ahead wih an airport at Pickering, when there are alternative sites available involving lower quality land, would prolong the short-sighted disregard for agricultural land which has characterized so many of our development decisions."

She said there is no hope in keeping food prices down unless there is increased food production and protection of agricultural land from development pressures.

"There can no longer be any doubt that the protection of Canada's best farmlands must now become a priority for the federal and provincial governments," Mrs. Plumptre said.

Police Must Be Rewarded For Not Laying Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada says society must reward police for dealing with cases of minor offenders without laying charges.

"Police forces are judged on the 'clearance' rate—how many charges are laid," said the commission in a working paper released Wednesday. At present, the incentives and rewards open to police encourage the laying of charges, not screening out.

The paper recommends the continuance and furtherance of the practice of diverting minor offenders, generally the young offender or juvenile, into other paths instead of trials.

Noting that police have always undertaken the screening process, the paper says there must be publicly-stated policy guides so that the public can understand and that there will be equal justice for all.

Providing this screening in a uniform and consistent way would require an increase in police resources.

"Overtime is paid for appearing in court as a witness and in some cases this can act as a considerable financial incentive to charging and keeping a case before the courts," the paper says.

The paper notes that police have always exercised the discretion of taking the young offender home to his parents.

This discretion was to "reprimand, counsel, mediate or settle cases, or to refer the incident out of the criminal justice system to health, welfare or other agencies without further action being taken."

"Such screening is a recognition that the community does not always expect the police or others to deal with minor conflict or trouble through arrest and prosecution."

Incidents that could be screened would include those involving the young and the old, family disputes, misuse of drugs or alcohol, mental illness or physical disability and "nuisance-type" incidents.

Criteria to be considered in the possible laying of a charge could include decisions on whether public interest demands a trial and whether there are resources in the community to deal with a screened offender.

Restitution Without Trial Suggested for Misdemeanors

OTTAWA (CP) — A new Law Reform Commission of Canada working paper, the seventh in its three-year history, recommends a formalized diversion process under which perpetrators of minor offences can make restitution without going to trial. The paper was issued on Wednesday.

In another of its attempts to keep people out of prison where possible, the commission calls for restraints on the part of the community, police, prosecutors and judges in the lalyng and the prosecuting of minor charges.

It seeks continuation of the present practices of dealing with minor crime before a case comes to trial and seeks to expand the practice to cover even more cases.

Under its recommendation the victim and a law-breaker could agree to have a case sent to some community-based agency where a settlement would be worked out, possibly involving restitution through payment or work. After the conditions of a signed contract were fulfilled and restitution made, charges against the offender would be dropped.

In other cases an offender might repay a community through work, such as cleaning up waste in public areas or assisting the elderly in snow-clearing.

It said too many forms of "socially problematic behavior" find their way into Criminal law. But "decriminalization," removal of this behavior from the law, is not always successful.

Diversion would free the courts to handle serious crime, from murder and violence to crimes that concern the public, while providing maximum conciliation and settlement. The commission puts out all its working papers for public discussion.

"Diversion, even more than other measures of disposition of criminal cases, depends on the understanding and co-operation of the public and we therefore urge the public to express its views to the commission," the paper said.

Canada has a higher rate than other countries in the use of incarceration, it notes.

"In addition, we usually send persons to prison not because of crimes of violence, but because of convictions for property offences, offences against the public order or other offences not involving violence to the person."

Buchanan Feels Indians Need More Independence

CALGARY (CP) — Judd Buchanan paced nervously across his suite on the 10th floor of the Calgary Inn.

"Indian affairs constitutes one-third of my portfolio, but it seems to take up 90 per cent of my time and energy," said the lanky bespectacled freshman cabinet minister.

Mr. Buchanan's appointment as minister for Indian affairs and northern development following last summer's general election surprised many people.

The 45-year-old life insurance agent had been replaced two years earlier in his post as parliamentary secretary to then-Indian affairs minister Jean Chretien by Len Marchand of Kamloops, the only treaty Indian MP in Canada.

JUDD BUCHANAN

Mr. Buchanan says he has one of the toughest jobs in Canada today.

"I think the Indian people have to increase their independence and decrease their dependence on Ottawa, but the change of life-style will be difficult to accomplish," he said as he leaned on a chair and stared over the downtown rooftops.

He may have been thinking about what was then the most recent militant action by treaty Indians—a two-day occupation of the department of Indian affairs office in Calgary.

The demonstrators, led by the militant American Indian Movement, had complained of bigotry and unfair treatment by the staff of the Calgary office.

The occupation had ended 24 hours earlier and only after Mr. Buchanan agreed to meet with the chiefs of four southern Alberta Indian tribes to discuss the demonstrators' grievances.

"I personally feel that dependence upon government is corrosive to their dignity and destructive to their way of life as a people," said the minister.

"The problem is money and Indian people are going to have to look beyond the department of Indian affairs as a source of money.

"There are many other sources, including provincial governments, which can provide assistance to native people."

Mr. Buchanan would later that night avoid a direct answer on the question of treaty rights of Indians who come to the city, but now he conceded that he holds "definite views" on the issue.

"In my opinion, when a treaty Indian comes to the city and leaves the reserve and his band, he is no longer purely a federal responsibility," said Mr. Buchanan.

"Once an Indian comes to the city he is in the same position as anyone. He pays provincial taxes, the same rent as you or I, and liquor tax. He has the right to expect the province to provide him with the same services it gives to other residents of the province."

Mr. Buchanan agreed that conditions on many Indian reserves provide little future for most Indian people, but said the federal government can't afford to spend any more for Indian affairs.

"We already have a $500-million-a-year budget," he said.

"I imagine we could spend $1 billion a year and not solve all the problems on Indian reserves."

He said he does not endorse proposals for increased grants for Indian families for the purchase or construction of new homes.

"Grants aren't going to solve the problem," he said. "We may have to have Indian people go through conventional channels to buy their homes, with mortgages and financing, just like every other Canadian has to."

The other 10 per cent of Mr. Buchanan's job—northern development and the national parks system—can best be administered by one minister with over-all control over all three areas, said the London West MP.

"My predecessor, Mr. Chretien, found out that by having all three under his control he could better administer the North, particularly," he said.

"As minister for all three responsibilities, he could set aside national parks in the North, create jobs for native people, and protect the rights of the native people of the North."

Would he like to see his portfolio divided into two or three separate cabinet posts?

"Not on your life," says Mr. Buchanan. "I enjoy all the action."

Set Record

EDMONTON (CP) — Metropolitan Edmonton set a building record in 1974 and became the first metropolitan area between Vancouver and Toronto to surpass the $300-million mark in one year. Leo LeClerc, manager of the city's business development department, said the value of building prmits issued during 1974 amounted to $316,161,381—$42 million more than metropolitan Calgary and $80 million ahead of metropolitan Winnipeg.

Principal of King George Public School where the parent-training course is taking place, Bill Lott points but some of the methods for dealing with family conflict recommended in the course text, "Children: The Challenge" by Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs.

Firm, Friendly Democracy for Family Harmony

By ISABEL HUGGAN
Women's Reporter

"The strongest evidence of a universal parental failure is our concern with parent education," said Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs, and proceeded to try to change that failure to success.

An authority in the field of child guidance and family life, the eminent Viennese psychiatrist worked, until his death in 1972, to improve the lot of both children and parents. As Professor Emeritus of Psychiatry at the Chicago Medical School and Director of the Alfred Adler Institute of Chicago, Dr. Dreikurs furthered the teachings of Dr. Adler, with whom he collaborated on the formation of child guidance clinics.

Adlerian psychology, which takes into account both the "inner and outer" environments of each child (heredity, family atmosphere, position within the family, observation and interpretation by the individual, and the method of training used by parents), gives rise to the notion that since all behavior is directed toward a goal, by understanding the goal we can control the behavior.

If we want to help a child change his direction, we must understand what makes him move. And the direction that many children are headed indicates that some sort of change is necessary.

This century has seen a dramatic increase in the number of unhappy, defiant, bored and dissatisfied children, at the same time as the number of parents taking courses about child psychology has multiplied. The reason?

Dr. Dreikurs observed that too swift a swing to democracy has left society in an insecure state. Misapplication of democratic theory results in upheaval and confusion. The old patterns and traditions of child-raising — for example, children should be seen but not heard — no longer have any value. But what is there to replace them?

The conflicts in modern families can be solved by thoughtful and careful democratic methods, said Dr. Dreikurs. If children are taught that freedom demands responsibility, that liberty is not license, and that democracy can only exist where there is order, the family unit can survive and flourish.

Parents must give up the old "Because I said so, that's why!" attitudes that foster the idea that "Might is Right". Children must be stimulated and encouraged rather than forced into compliance.

And is this perfection possible?

Bill Lott, John Beard and Dick Gainer, who are giving the course in Dreikurs' methods, and who have studied Adlerian psychology, believe that it is.

Since first encountering the theories of Dreikurs and Adler in a course held at McArthur College of Education in Kingston last year, the men decided to take further instruction so that they too could teach the methods for dealing with children most effectively.

They believe that the approach works, not only in the home but in the classroom, and are fast making "converts" of the parents and teachers taking their course.

"Much of what we are talking about here is based on common sense and an attitude of self respect and respect for others," says Mr. Lott. "The formula for democracy that works is respect and order."

Sharing Problems Helps Solve Them

Children are a challenge.

That's nothing new to anyone who's a parent.

What parents need is a way to meet that challenge. Bill Lott, principal of King George Public School, believes that he has found a way, and he's sharing his knowledge with nearly 50 mothers and fathers Monday evenings.

Mr. Lott, along with teacher John Beard from the King George staff, and Dick Gainer from Quinte Secondary School, is presenting an eight-week-long course based on "Children: The Challenge", a book by Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs.

The book offers methods for raising a family that are democratic, sensible, and above all, possible. Practical application of Dreikurs' theory is the goal of the course, achieved through reading of the text and discussion of its principles in case history examples.

The structure of the course is the result of co-operative effort by the three teachers who lead the study groups. In some cases husbands and wives have chosen to stay together, and other couples have decided to belong to different groups.

"We've been amazed at the response to this idea," says Mr. Lott. "We expected groups of five or six people. But although our groups are larger than that, we're still getting good response and discussion."

Discussion is the heart of the matter for many of the parents who attend. Hearing that other parents have many of the same problems is tremendously reassuring.

"Finding out that your experiences are not isolated is one of the best things," says Barb Andrus, whose 12-year-old son attends King George. Another advantage, says Mrs. Andrus, is that since her husband is taking the course with her "it is helping us reach the same point of view about child-raising."

Johanne Vokey, mother of four children, says that listening to other parents talk about their families is especially helpful.

"If you can learn something about the phases that children go through before they happen, I think you will be more calm and in control," she says.

That sense of self-confidence, of trust in one's own judgement, is one of the most useful aspects of the group discussion for many of the parents. Confirmation of the beliefs they already hold motivates them to learn the new methods of putting their ideas into action.

"Many of the ideas are ones I've had already, but it helps to see them in print," says Mrs. Andrus. "It gives me confidence that I'm on the right track."

And what are those ideas?

That children need the security of order in their lives, that they must learn to face the consequences of their actions, that personal freedom implies respect for the freedom of others ... and that within a democratic family unit, all members are responsible. These are some of the ideas from which Dreikurs works, as he sets forth in his book the ways of achieving family harmony.

The family council (the weekly meeting of parents and children to discuss all decisions that affect individuals and the group) is one of those "democratic ideals" that could very easily fall into anarchy if parents lack confidence and knowledge of how to institute new techniques. Giving up of the old "know-all" parental roles must be accompanied by firm and confident behavior, so that "equality" does not falter and fall into permissiveness, and then into inevitable conflict.

During the eight weeks, parents are learning new ways to accomplish what they've always wanted — to bring up well-behaved, happy, independent children. They are learning to encourage, rather than praise, to be firm without dominating, to show respect for children and induce in them respect for others, to refrain from over-protection, to follow through in a consistent and reasonable way, and to talk "with" children rather than "to" them or "at" them.

Most importantly, perhaps, is the pervading atmosphere in the study groups, that being a parent is hard but rewarding work, requiring skill and knowledge and co-operative effort.

Readers' Letters Uphold Parenthood

Two weeks ago readers were invited to respond to a question posed in this column: What are the reasons for having (or not having) a family?

The mail has reflected only one point of view ... the positive joys of parenthood, expressed by mothers (no fathers!) who are happy they decided to have children.

Although these letters all support the notion that children enrich and strengthen a marriage, several writers were sure to make one thing quite clear. "If your marriage is shaky don't expect a child to save it," wrote one mother.

Or as another said, "A crying baby at 2 a.m. does nothing to cement relationships!"

Another woman wrote, "Of course I think it is just great that at last people are able to have a choice whether or not they want to have children Not all people are suited to the role. Some are just interested in the pursuit of the good life and children don't fit in. That, I think, is just great. The decision is theirs."

Letters like this indicate that generally speaking, attitudes toward childless marriages have become more tolerant than in the past. "Whatever is best for you" seems to sum up the feeling of the parents who wrote.

"Our decision to have a family came from the happy fact that we had plenty of love to share," explained one mother. "Our family is a planned one, each child wanted and happily anticipated."

That the decision is an emotional, rather than an intellectual one, was well put in this letter: "It is something you feel that you would or would not like to do, not something that you have to read up on."

The reasons for having children included such thoughts as this: "I cannot imagine my life without children, for when those two small youngsters leave for school, a part of me goes with them and I am not as whole as when they are here to care for ... I enjoy sharing my life."

Or this view: "Nine months after our marriage our first son was born ... and we found that childless period boring. Our son took all the boredom out of it and drew us closer together. We now had something of extra importance between us."

"As children grow into teen-agers, the parents can re-live their own youth," explained another letter-writer. "All a childless couple has to live for is their own important 'I' ... when they grow older and are plagued by aches and pains, real or imaginary, with nothing to fill their days and minds but their own troubles, the big 'I' that was so important in earlier days is poor company when a person feels low."

Whether or not children are a comfort in your old age may be an arguable point, but those who have a family to care for find many satisfactions during the growing years too.

"When we stand, hand in hand, looking at our sleeping children, we thank God for His goodness," said one mother, explaining the sense of fulfilment that comes with raising children.

And this mother writes to tell about her family of four, two daughters (natural) and two sons (adopted), a family that came after the first three growing and maturing years of marriage.

"As I write this at the kitchen counter, two little boys are climbing up and over me, across the counter, down to the floor, and then reversing the procedure, all the while hollering that they are 'ambulance men' saving a 'dead' man ... and in the background one girl is telling me about her newest school project which will mean I'll soon have to look for pioneering articles for her ... and the older girl is reciting her first public speaking "speech" for school, to which I am listening for 'good diction and expression'. It's 4.30 on an average week day in our home, and yes, we decided to have children!"

Indicative of the feelings of all the mothers who wrote, this letter goes on to say that "raising children is hard work ... but even as I write that, I know that I wouldn't trade places with anyone."

To those who wrote, thank you. Your letters were a delight to read.

Ann Landers

Crying's Explanation Just Ridiculous Excuse

Dear Ann Landers: I dare you to print this letter and ruin Middle America's day. The nit-wit who signed her letter A Shoulder to Cry On should be told that birth control information and contraceptives were legally available at the time she got pregnant.

As a college student I've heard the same ridiculous story over and over again. It goes like this: "I knew the infirmary would prescribe a contraceptive for me but I believed it was wrong to deliberately plan for sex. I always figured that sex, like murder, is not so terrible if it's a spur-of-the-moment thing."

Believe it or not, Ann, but some girls would rather trust to luck or have an abortion than use birth control methods because they think planned sex is like planned crime.

As for you, Lovey, your notion that premarital sex can be very bad for a young girl if there is a lack of sincerity and caring on the young man's part is perfectly valid. But do you honestly believe that marriage removes those dangers? Sometimes it makes them worse. Even though the divorce rate in this country is zooming, Ann Landers says, "Get married first." You gotta be nuts:—A Reader

Dear Reader: You are also A Writer. Thanks for a good letter. Not only is the divorce rate zooming but the moral standards of this country are falling through the basement.

This indicates to me, at least, that somebody had better start talking about premarital sex in terms of values and not view the girl who says "no" as an archaic, moth-eaten square.

I may be a museum piece myself, but I still insist that very few high school girls have the emotional maturity to handle a sexual relationship without feeling depreciated and "used" when it's over. Even among college-age couples, unless there is mutual commitment and genuine caring, premarital sex can be plenty damaging, especially to the woman.

OK, now Ill put on my bifocals, go back to my rocker and crochet some doilies.

Dar Ann Landers: I know you don't write an etiquette column but you are the best one to get this message across to the public. Here it is: "If you don't know what a word means—look it up."

I have two unmarried sons living at home and I've lost count of the number of invitations they've recived addressed to: "Mr. XYZ and Escort."

Isn't it shocking the number of ignorant people there are in this world? Sign me—Educated In The Dark Ages

Dear Ed: I've had worse shocks in my time. But thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Please speak English in your column—not high-brow esoteric jargon. When a woman wrote recently and asked if masturbation was harmful you replied, "If it becomes obsessive and compulsive it can border on the pathological and, therefore, be harmful."

Why didn't you just say: "It is not harmful unless it is done with such great frequency that it interfets with normal behavior?"—Tired of Double Talk

Dear Tired: I must've gotten carried away. Thanks for translating my answer into language which is easier to understand.

Doris Clark

'Frigid' Wife Seeks Satisfaction

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have a problem that is going to end my marriage of 29 years, if nothing can be done. I have never had an orgasm, so wouldn't even know how to "fake it," and the past few years I can't even get excited about sex. I feel like a robot must feel. The doctors, we talked to say there's nothing to be done. What kind of a doctor would one go to?

We have nine children ranging from 27 to seven, so you can see our marriage breakdown would make a large ripple in the pool. We have a lovely relationship otherwise.

Hoping Desperately.

Dear Hoping: There are so many individual reactions to sex! Our young people vie with each other in coming up to what they think are standards, and today they seem to be preoccupied with performance.

All of intercourse and its attendant affectionate gestures are meant to express love. It is merely your own self-image that makes you feel like a robot, nothing else.

Show affection, show understanding. And read some of the books selected on the attached sheet. This will add to your understanding.

If you have a lovely relationship otherwise, you are blessed lucky.

Confidential to Don: You are right — you are no longer a little boy. A good many people feel emotionally unstable when they are off on their own and a long way from anybody who cares about them—and your problems have been particularly tough.

You are certainly old enough to act independently; it is not the close protection of your family that you need, but a challenge.

It would also help you to talk personally to a trained counsellor — either a socail worker or a psychiatrist. I am sending you the address of the counsellor — either a social where you are.

Artwork Made of Glass

Artist Bob Rouda of Vancouver says he has been fired from almost every job he has ever started but now makes a living by selling artwork made from pieces of glass. Rouda, who lives in a converted basement laundry room, is shown with a three-dimensional planter, his own vision of eternity through glass. (CP Photo)

Artwork of Glass Makes Man Living

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob Rouda says he has been fired from almost every job he has ever started but now he has found something which is not only paying his bills but is also of great personal satisfaction.

Things may have appeared pretty bleak until some friends in southeastern British Columbia's Kootenay area asked Mr. Rouda to repair some broken windows. Now he makes a living by selling artworks made of pieces of glass.

Mr. Rouda had no formal art training but when his friends asked him to fix the windows at their house he decided to do something creative.

"They'd been so nice to me it wasn't enough just to cut a window for them. So I made a three-dimensional hopper and a heart-and-flower window, and an elephant window, and a frog window," said the 29-year-old artist now living in Vancouver.

Living in a converted basement laundry room, surrounded by boxes of broken glass, bits of wood and lengths of lead, he builds his art pieces.

"I've always had a vision that eternity is transparent: that the world is fosever, and brilliant, like glass," said the artist. "I really get off on cutting it. And I like working with stained glass. You can paint it, pure, solid colors—it's a luxury."

Now he has plans of building candle shades, lamp shades and three-dimensional glass sculptures.

"I have this compulsion to build three-dimensional windows that you can put plants in."

Frogs also interest the glass-worker.

"Some day I hope to make a stained-glass frog window. I'm fascinated by frogs. When they're mating, you could have the Grateful Dead playing Beethoven's Fifth in their ears and it wouldn't disturb them."

Now with the frogs, elephants and plants as subjects of his work, he classes himself as an "independent capitalist," although he maintains his primary goal is not profit.

"I sold the castle for $200 and the crucifix will sell for about $255," said Mr. Rouda about some of his latest work. "But I put three weeks work into the castle. I just want to make enough to pay the rent ($80 a month) and eat, and maybe take a train ride East some day."

Zambian Shots Are Recalled By T-shirt

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — A Canadian here has designed a T-shirt motif which has a bullet-riddled maple leaf.

Underneath this is the slogan "I've seen Vic. Falls."

The design by Larry Teirney, 28, formerly of Cumberland on Vancouver Island, is meant as a reminder of the 1973 shooting incident when two Ontario girl tourists, Christine Sinclair of Guelph and Marion Drijber of Rockwood, were shot by Zambian troops near Victoria Falls.

"The whole world was horrified by the shooting—and I don't think it should be easily forgotten," Tierney said.

"My only intention was to draw attention to the shooting. And we all know who was responsible. It was not meant as a protest against Rhodesia."

Tierney said he plans to wear the T-shirt when he returns to Canada.

"Canada pours millions of dollars of foreign aid into Zambia," he said. "The two countries make very strange bed-fellows, especially as Canada has had its own terrorist problems."

Teirney, a printer, has been in Rhodesia for two years. He now is serving his second spell of active service with the security forces in the northeast border area where the terrorists are operating.

Peerless

LONDON (CP) — Labor MP John Lee says he plans to introduce a bill to abolish all peerages, except those held by the Royal Family. Under the bill all peers would simply become senators.

Cookie Crumbles

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party in Ontario, liked the way the cookie crumbled while he was in a Chinese restaurant the other night. The note in his Chinese fortune cookie said, "You are a real leader"—and the real was underlined.

African Bees Invade Homes, Disrupt Traffic

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — Two women were recently trapped in their home for hours and two of their pet dogs were killed by tens of thousands of African bees.

In recent weeks millions of the bees have been on the move searching for new homes, invading houses, disrupting traffic and generally making their presence felt throughout the country.

The African bee is recognized by the experts as being the most aggressive species on earth. But it is also among the most industrious and most beekeepers here are only too pleased to handle the problem swarms.

Beekeepers enjoyed a particularly good year in 1974. One advertised he'd remove swarms without charge.

"I expect to get seven or eight calls," he said, "but I had about 50 in a couple of days."

This particular beekeeper has about a million bees in 20 hives and even with his experience doesn't attempt to open a hive during the daytime.

"I'd get badly stung," he said. "Even when I open a hive at night I like to wear protective clothing."

The experts say that if African bees hadn't learnt to be aggressive they'd never have survived.

They don't normally go looking for trouble. They attack in self-defence.

The swarming season doesn't mean the bees are on the rampage, it's just that the time has come for them to find a different place to live.

But a wide variety of things can upset the bees—perspiration, cosmetics, hair oil, the smell of onion, garlic, alcohol, strong cheese and even tick-repellent.

Fish Eggs Protected

A group of sport fishermen are waiting for the spring and the second phase of a hatchery program they started to help increase fish populations on Vancouver Island. Members of the Amalgamated Conservation Society stripped almost 50,000 eggs from coho salmon, fertilized them with sperm and are shown placing them in incubation boxes during last fall's operation. When the eggs hatch in the spring, the fry will be released into pools and kept for one year. (CP Photo)

Victoria Sportsmen Try to Help Salmon

VICTORIA (CP) — A group of sport fishermen, alarmed by reports of declining numbers of salmon in the Goldstream watershed on Vancouver Island, are waiting for the spring and the second phase of the hatchery program they started to help increase fish populations.

Last fall, members of the Society, aided by fisheries department biologists, stripped almost 50,000 eggs from coho salmon, fertilized them with sperm and placed them in incubation boxes.

When the eggs hatch in the spring, the fry will be released into pools on the Goldstream and Sooke Rivers where they will be kept for one year, said Brian Inglis, president of the ACS.

"We will feed the fry in these pools and when they have grown large enough they will migrate instinctively to the sea," he said.

That will happen in the spring of 1976 and it will be three or four years after that, when the grown salmon begin migrating upstream, before the group will be able to measure the success of their program.

The program began after fishermen in the area heard reports that only 26 salmon were seen spawning in the Goldstream last year.

"This is only a fraction of the estimated 10,000 that used to spawn in the river only 10 years ago," said Mr. Inglis.

Volunteers from other conservation and fishing groups in the southern Vancouver Island area are helping in the project.

Beaverlodge History Told

BEAVERLODGE, Alta. (CP) — About 200 citizens of this northwestern Alberta town have produced a comprehensive book on the history of this region, dating back to the time the first settlers arrived over the Edson Trail.

The book, Beaverlodge to the Rockies, involved "nearly every elderly person around," says executive editor Early Clifford Stacey, who had been working on the book for two years when he and some others received a federal New Horizons grant for the project.

The 576-page book contains more than 900 illustrations and photographs, and took four years to write. It records the development of the region, colorful personality profiles, and achievements up to 1974. The book sells for $12.95.

Government Planning Cleanup of Old Cars

TORONTO (CP) — A $100,000 Ontario government campaign to clean up junked motor vehicles in the area north of North Bay was announced today by Environment Minister William Newman.

Ministry officials said the province through agreements with Timiskaming municipalities will set up two sites where vehicles may be towed by private contractors for eventual recycling.

The project is one of several test cases in a province-wide plan to reclaim ferrous and other metals from an estimated 500,000 vehicles rusting in Ontario.

Other such projects have been tested in Thunder Bay, Sault Ste. Marie and Renfrew and Lanark Counties south of Ottawa.

Snowmobilers Raise $156,000 for Crippled

TORONTO (CP) — A drive by snowmobilers in various Ontario centres last weekend raised about $156,000 for the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, it was announced Wednesday.

A society spokesman said the charity drive, called the Whipper Billy Watson Snowarama, consisted of volunteers who solicited money pledges to complete a 100-mile trek.

Mr. Watson, a former professional wrestler, is a member of the executive committee of the society's board of directors.

Taking part last weekend were groups from Smiths Falls, Port Carling, Cornwall, Timmins, Sault Ste. Marie and Mildmay. Eganville held its rally Feb. 1, while Kitchener and Bradford have scheduled theirs for Feb. 16 and Thunder bay for Feb. 9.

Fight Alcohol Abuse

OTTATA (CP) — Federal funds to combat alcohol abuse among native peoples will be tripled under a new program announced Wednesday.

The program will be a joint effort by the department of health and welfare and the department of Indian affairs.

More than $3 million a year will be spent in 1975-76 and the two following fiscal years, compared to about $1 million provided in 1974- 75.

Five Brothers Found Guilty on Assault Charges

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

The trial of the Lucas brothers ended late Wednesday after five days in county court with the jury finding all five brothers guilty of at least one charge. Judge Russell C. Honey will pronounce sentence on Feb. 25.

Of the more serious charges, Larry Lucas, 25, was found guilty of assault causing bodily harm with intent to wound and possession of a dangerous weapon, a wrench.

Leonard Lucas, 37, was found guilty of possession of a dangerous weapon, a hammer.

Both Larry and Leonard were found not guilty of a charge of assault causing bodily harm to two city police officers. Of the other three brothers, Eric, 22, Gordon, 33, and Claude, 36, were all found not guilty of assault causing bodily harm, but guilty of common assault.

The jury of seven men and five women deliberated for almost 31 hours before arriving at their decision at about 10.30 p.m. Wednesday.

The charges stem from an Aug. 17 fracas on McFarland Dr. in which city police Constable Gerry Bull was knocked unconscious by a pipe wrench while Constables Paul Smith and Ken Gutoskie were taken to hospital with less serious injuries.

During the day, the jury was addressed by defence counsel, Malcolm Robb and Crown attorney, Ken Stubbington. As well, Judge Russell C. Honey gave a charge to the jury, twice, after Mr. Robb asked that further submissions be made to the jury to aid them in their decision.

In both Mr. Robb's and Mr. Stubbington's addresses to the jury particular attention was paid to the fact that the men assaulted were police officers.

Mr. Robb mentioned the 'intensity of feeling in the case by the police department' while Mr. Stubbington said that the jury is asked to return a fair verdict not only against the accused but also against the three policemen involved who he said 'were on trial just as much as the accused'.

Mr. Robb spent considerable time dealing with the credibility and reliability of witness called by the Crown. He also referred to the fact that most Crown witnesses were police officers while no civilian who may have witnessed the scuffle was called.

Mr. Robb also questioned the powers of observation of the testifying officers and dealt with the fact that the officers may have not been acting in the execution of their duties during the fight by coming there without sufficient reason and by staying longer than necessary.

Mr. Stubbington countered that previous testimony revealed the police were there in answer to a complaint and therefore had every right to be there.

All five brothers had pleaded not guilty to the charges.

Purse Snatchers Sought

An alert motorist prevented two youths from escaping with a purse they snatched Wednesday evening.

Police said Mrs. Eleanor Black was walking on Victoria Ave. near Albert St. when her purse was grabbed. The motorist saw the incident and gave chase in his car.

The thieves, described as two male youths about 5 ft. 10 and 6 ft. in height, excaped after throwing the purse down. It was recovered intact.

Ski Spree

Ski instructor Gary Thompson shows Quinte Secondary School student Ted Carlson how to don his skis in the cross-country skiing course for beginners during the QSS Enrichment Day Wednesday. It was one of 75 subjects offered to give the students a chance to try something different from their usual educational activity.

75 Courses Part Of Enrichment Day

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The approximate 1,300 student population of Quinte Secondary School here was given the opportunity Wednesday to enrich its in-school education.

QSS held its second annual Enrichment Day, "an opportunity to expose students to educational experiences beyond the ordinary reading, writing and arithmetic," explained Peggy Burris, day co-ordinator.

Instruction was provided in various subjects both at the school and in outlying areas, even as far as Ottawa where participants skated on the canals and visited the National Arts Centre.

A total of 75 activities took place, ranging from recreation and cooking to dog obedience, the latter displayed by the Ontario Provincial Police.

Mrs. Burris commented it is hoped the students' experience "will expand their personal lives".

Students were only required to sign up for three periods, but many went for four, "a real indication of the interest shown," she said.

Instruction was offered by not only QSS staff but city business people and even some students who operated photography courses and linguistic subjects in Cantonese, Greek and Italian.

"Many staff are either bringing in things they have as a hobby or something to do with their subject area which is not on the curriculum," outlined Mrs. Burris.

The day was "originally an enrichment program for honor students" as a bonus at the end of the school year, she related. That system lasted for 12 years.

"Some of our staff felt while that is good . . . there are a lot of students who don't get 80 percent but who work just as hard," she said.

Morality Program Topic

The Hastings-Prince Edward County Separate School Board will present the second half of its adult education program from Feb. 13 to March 13.

The program will be held at Nicholson Catholic College on five consecutive Thursdays at 8 p.m.

The speaker will be Rev. Thomas Dailey, holder of a doctorate in sacred theology and a professor at St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto. His topic is morality.

The program is open to all members of the public.

Flu Outbreak Closes Trenton Hospital Ward

by AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Trenton Memorial Hospital has closed its ward for elderly patients to outside visitors until its medical staff decided what is termed "a high incidence of flu" in Trenton is past.

Hospital administrator John upton said Wednesday the measure was taken to prevent chronic patients from contracting the infection from visitors.

"We feel that elderly patients, who are succeptible to upper respiratory ailments, should not receive visitors who, themselves, might very well carry some sort of infection," he said.

Affected by the measure, which came into force Wednesday, are approximately 40 patients in Ward C-2 of the hospital. More sqecifically, patients in rooms 220-242 inclusive.

The move was taken upon the advice of the two medical advisors for C wing, in which two of the five hospital wards are located.

Mr. Lupton said visiting privileges remain unchanged in all other wards "for the moment". However, he added, if the incidence of flue in Trenton gets worse, "we may have to restrict them as well".

The flue "isn't inside, it's outside and we're only trying to protect our patients," he said.

Hastings and Prince Edward Counties medical officer of health, Dr. C. R. Lenk praised the hospital's move Wednesday, saying it was " a wise thing to do".

The action was taken at the initiative of the hospital, he said, and was not prompted by any suggestion from his health unit offices.

Such a move would only be taken by the health unit if its weekly survey proved that the incidence of flue was increasing in the two counties. No figures are available specifically for Trenton, he said.

The health unit polls its public health nurses, doctors, several schools and major factories to arrive at public health trends.

To date, said Dr. Lenk, an increase in the number of cases of flu has not been noted.

There are more cases of people suffering from the common cold than from the flu. So far, there are few cases of respiratory complications, he indicated.

Review of Church Role Main Conference Topic

An ecumenical conference designed to give area churches a fresh approach in the application of religion will be held Saturday at the Four Seasons from 9.30 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Park Room.

Sponsored by Faith At Work, a non-denominational Christian fellowship, it is open to everyone from any church regardless of doctrine. Participants and expected from Cobourg to Gananoque. Almost 250 people are predicted to turn out.

Ted Milliken, whose wife Carolyn is leader of the Faith At Work Belleville team, announced this week those interested should pre-register with Lorna Easton of 43 Edgehill Rd. at 968-3376 by Friday evening. The $7 cost per person includes lunch.

He explained in an interview Faith At Work "teaches people how to communicate their faith with each other through ordinary relationships." It is an attempt to introduce people to different life-styles through faith, he added.

The conference will touch on up-to-date meanings in Sunday services, Bible studies, various group discussions in religion and the "actual practice in relating between two people," outlined Mr. Milliken.

He emphasized it is not a new program for churches to adopt but rather a revisal of the present form of church operation to meet the pressures of today's world.

"It is not the intent of Faith At Work to become an octopus ... but to be of use in local churches," noted Mr. Milliken.

The fellowship's head office is in Hamilton with most of its growth concentrated in Ontario and the Maritimes.

It will begin with breakfast at 8:30 a.m., and conclude with a social hour late in the afternoon at the Community Hall.

Among the workshops to be held are those on outdoor education, nutrition, behavior modification, precision teaching, yoga and vocal music.

Trenton Residents Face 12.4 Per Cent Hydro Hike

TRENTON — A 12.4-per-cent increase in the wholesale cost of power to the Trenton Utilities Commission will be passed on to consumers Aug. 1, at the earliest, in the form of an eight- to 10-per-cent rise in present bills.

The move, said Douglas Maslow, general manager of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission (PUC) follows the increase of the cost of power supplied the commisson by Ontario Hydro.

The new hydro rates came into effect at the beginning of January. At the same time, hydro increased its rates by 15.2 per cent to industries direcent tapping power from hydro lines.

Trenton's higher cost for power falls in line with that of most other utilities across the province. Increases across Ontario vary from 8.5 to 17.5 per cent but the majority fit into the 12 per cent range.

Mr. Manlow said Wednesday the average increase to town consumers will likely range between 1.25 and $1.50 a month. But he emphasized that range was only a "ball park figure' since there is no method of determining the average consumption of power by a customer.

At the suggestion of Mayor Robert Patrck, Wednesday, prior to the actual date of the increase in rates, the PUC will mount a publicity campaign to inform the public what higher costs it will face.

Picton PUC to Sell Land

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The Picton public utilities commission plans to negotiate the sale of a land parcel on Queen and Elizabeth streets for senior citizen housing but town council feels more thought should be given to such a move.

The land, rented to the town for park purposes at $1 per year, was initially offered for sale by the PUC about five years ago.

Tenders were received but before they could be studied a group of ratepayers addressed the PUC seeking preservation of the property as a green area, says Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson.

Mr. Richardson suggested the recreation and parks board discuss the PUC's plans with its commissioners and establish reasons for the proposed sale.

Councillor Norman March pointed out development of the PUC land would bring tax revenues and indicated the yards at Queen Elizabeth school and at Benson Park offer a green area.

Deputy-reeve Richardson commented use of the public school yard is restricted and Benson Park is suited only for certain types of recreation. He stressed children do use the PUC property as a playground and it would be "sorely missed."

The letter from the PUC was referred to the recreation and parks board for consideration and further communication with the PUC.

Educator Stresses Value Of Special Day Classes

At first glance, some of the 75 courses offered to Quinte Secondary School students Wednesday for Enrichment Day would raise a few eyebrows.

But Peggy Burris, day coordinator, explained one could not provide only cut-and-dried academic instruction or many of the students would lose interest.

"Remember, you have to have programs that appeal to everybody or you have mass absenteeism," she pointed out.

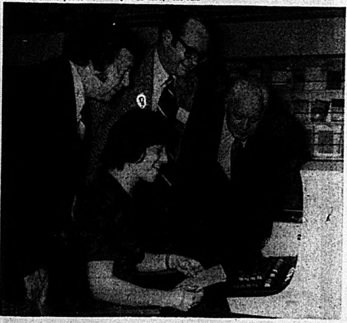
The area skiing and snowshoeing treks to Madawaska, Devil's Elbow and Tweed involved outdoor cooking and ice fishing, not just physical activity. "It's certainly recreation," commented Mrs. Burris. "But certainly in many cases it's something new for them."

Snowmobiling included small engine care and preventive maintenance, "so it's not just a run through the woods," she remarked.

The farm stock sale in Picton was listed "to give these city kids an idea of what's going on and the economics the beef industry is going through," she said.

Even the film Jesus Christ Superstar was shown by Ed Bridle, mass media teacher, as "an opportunity . . . to see this film . . . looking at film production and techniques," noted Mrs. Burris.

It was open for all students at $1 admission to help defray the cost of bringing such a movie to the school.



Computer Terminal Opens

Anne Lavigne, a student at Bayside Secondary School, demonstrated the Student Guidance Information Service terminal at the school Wednesday for trustees and administrators of Hastings County Board of Education. Watching the operation are director of education, Eric Runacres, past chairman Don Williams and superintendent E. T. Morris.

Bayside Gets Terminal

Computer Aids in Career Selection

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Would you believe there are 7,000 careers available to Canadians?

Few high school students, with crucial choices about their futures to make, are aware of the number of job opportunities they have.

A lucky few in Ontario can plug into a computer and retrieve information about the wide spectrum of opportunities waiting in the working world.

Wednesday, Bayside Secondary School unveiled the computer terminal that makes it one of the seven schools in the province with instant career information available to its students.

Because the computer terminals are a pilot project of the ministry of education, it is footing the bill of $1,450 for Bayside this year.

Set up in the school's guidance centre, the terminal looks like a typewriter. Using reference books supplied by the Student Guidance Information Service in Toronto, the student can type requests for information and get an instant reply flashed on a screen. If he wants a permanent record, he can push a button and get a printed copy.

The Education Data Processing Branch at the ministry in Toronto is programmed to give five kinds of information. It lists career, gives separate career descriptions for each one, indicates the training needed to enter that career, describes the course content at different institutions for preparation for the career, compares courses at various institutions and describes the institutions in terms of enrolment, location and history, awards and student housing among other factors.

The student with only a vague notion of what he wants to do after high school can make up his mind with the aid of the computer terminal in his school.

A sample question could be "I like working outdoors, with people and in an engineering field." The terminal will flash back a list of careers that will suit the student's preferences. He can continue to quiz the machine until he learns the training required for each one and the institutions that offer it.

The computer frees high school guidance counsellors from the drudgery of leafing through endless calendars to find information for their students.

Because the coputerized guidance information service is still in the pilot project stage, there are kinks to be worked out, says Ross Allan, head of counselling services at Bayside.

Universities were opposed to the computer, and have been reluctant to provide all the information needed by students. Community colleges, with a selling job to do, are the most lavish of all institutions with information on their courses.

Computerized guidance is not new to Hastings County. For two years Bayside has used the computer in Toronto on a mail-in basis. But information retrieval took at least two weeks by mail.

The terminal at Bayside began operating Jan. 20 and already many students have learned how to use it. Several student aids will be chosen for training in terminal operation to assist the guidance department staff.

Eventually, says Mr. Allan, as career choices become more complex, most schools in Ontario will be hooked into the computer. And as the use increases, the cost of the service will decrease.

Crusaders Stop Hull Line Cold

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleveland Crusaders coach Jack Vivian told his players that if they went out and stopped the Bobby Hull line they'd come up with a victory. It worked.

The Crusaders stopped the most productive line in the World Hockey Association and defeated Winnipeg Jets 3-2 Wednesday night.

Vivian, as well as Hull, who is the Jets player-coach, had high praise for Cleveland centre Gerry Pinder and wingers Grant Erickson and Skip Krake.

"They won the game for us," Vivian said. "They kept him (Hull) off the boards. Krake did a great job on Hull, Erickson handled (Anders) Hedberg and Pinder was a lot more effective at centre than as a winger."

Hull, along with Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson have scored 84 goals and 193 points.

In other WHA games Wednesday, Houston Aeros beat Toronto Toros 5-2, Minnesota Fighting Saints defeated Edmonton Oilers 4-2, Phoenix Roadrunners whipped San Diego Mariners 9-2 and Vancouver Blazers beat Chicago Cougars 4-2.

Despite Hull's inability to score, Vivian was still full of praise for the Winnipeg player-coach.

"What a hockey player," said Vivian. "I don't know how he coaches and plays at the same time. What a show he puts on."

"They sent Pinder, Krake and Erickson out there specifically to check us all night and it worked," Hull said. "This is the ninth day of a 10-day road trip, and we might have been tired. But those guys did a good clean job of checking us.

pretty tough when three guys out to concentrate on checking it's hard to beat them. It's prtity tough when three guys are following you around all night."

The famous Jets' scoring line was limited to nine of the 30 shots on goal taken by Winnipeg.

Frank Hughes broke a personal eight-game scoring drought by scoring a third-period goal in the Aeros' win over the Toros.

"That's the longest slump I think I've had," Hughes said. "It wouldn't be so bad if I hadn't been getting the chances, but I have been getting them. I guess maybe I started too fast this season."

Andre Hinse, Mark Howe and Murray Hall scored in the first period for the Aeros and third period goals by Don Larway and Hughes gave Houston a 5-0 lead before the Toros scored.

"We were strong in those first two periods, though we did get a little sloppy in the third period," said coach Bill Dineen of the Aeros who have won their last four games. "We had four different linescore and you can't ask for more than that."

At Vancouver, Danny Lawson's goal early in the third period broke a 2-2 tie against the Cougars and the Blazers easily went on to the victory in a contest that saw the Chicago club outshot 35-16.

Phoenix outshot San Diego 40-26 with Rob Ftorek and Dennis Sobchuk collecting two goals each in the Roadrunners' romp.

Mike Walton's 31st goal of the season and two assists by the speedy Minnesota forward helped the Fighting Saints beat the Oilers.

Lonsberry Shadows Gilbert, Flyers Down New York

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Before Philadelphia Flyers went to New York Wednesday night, they took note of their scouting report which showed Rod Gilbert on a hot scoring streak for the Rangers.

Flyers coach Fred Shero decided that Gilbert, who had nine goals and 13 assists in his last 10 games, would require special attention, and assigned Ross Lonsberry to check Gilbert.

Lonsberry was so effective that he found time to score once himself while holding Gilbert to only two shots on goal and no points.

The result was a 4-3 Philadelphia victory, their third straight over the Rangers this season, in the first of a home-and-home series that continues with the Rangers visiting Philadelphia tonight.

In other NHL games Wednesday, Montreal Canadiens beat Detroit Red Wings 8-5, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated Los Angeles Kings 3-2, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Minnesota North Stars 2-1, California Seals beat Washington Capitals 5-1 and Boston Bruins tied Atlanta Flames 3-3.

Besides the work of Lonsberry, Shero also had praise for Bill Clement who scored an unassisted goal when he broke past the Rangers defence and beat goalie Ed Giacomin.

Clement, who had a poor season last year, almost didn't make the team this season.

"Right now, he's playing so well I can't sit him out," said Shero. "He fills in at left wing, centre, right wing, kills penalties, and now he has 15 goals."

The Flyers' win pulled them 11 points ahead of the second-place Rangers in the Patrick Division.

In the Norris Division, Montreal pulled four points clear of Los Angeles for the first time this season.

Steve Shutt's second goal of the game and 20th of the season broke a 5-5 tie and led the Canadiens to victory at Montreal.

Shutt said after the game that it was no coincidence that he scored both his goals on backhand shots.

"I've been practising those backhands," he said. "I went down the ice in practice one day and faked the forehand and then backhanded it in. I said to myself 'holy cow, if I can do it once I can do it again'."

At Bloomington, Minn., Jim Pappin scored on a pass from Darcy Rota early in the third period to give the Hawks the win over the North Stars.

The victory pulled Chicago to within one point of leading Vancouver in the Smythe Division, giving the Hawks a chance to overtake the Canucks when they visit Vancouver on Friday.

The Bruins gained the tie at Atlanta on goals by Bobby Orr and Carol Vadnais in a 30-second span midway in the final period.

Chuck Arnason scored two of Pittsburgh's three second-period goals to lead the Penguins over the Kings who had taken a 2-0 first-period lead.

Tommy Williams opened the scoring for Los Angeles and set up the second goal by Mike Murphy.

Arnason's second goal, his 20th of the season, equalled his goal production last year when he split the season with Atlanta and Pittsburgh.

John Stewart and Dave Gardner each scored twice to lead the Seals against Washington.

The Seals, who broke their four-game losing string, led 4-0 before Mike Marson scored in the third period for the Capitals who have not one of their 26 road games this season.

Barlow Sent Down

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Phoenix Roadrunners of the World Hockey Association announced Wednesday have sent captain Bob Barlow, 39-year-old left winger and centre, to their Tulsa, Okla., farm team in the Central Hockey League. In 50 games, Barlow had six goals and 20 assists.

Waterloo-based OUAA Teams on Opposite Ends

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

While one Waterloo-based team was stretching its unbeaten string in Ontario Universities Athletic Association basketball play to eight games Wednesday, another was dropping its eighth game in a row.

Trevor Briggs's 21 points provided the winning margin as Waterloo Warriors downed the visiting McMaster Marauders 90-70 while Wilfred Laurier Golden Hawks were dropping a 70-67 decision to Guelph Gryphons just a few blocks away.

In the only other game, Windsor Lancers dumped Western Ontario Mustangs 90-68 with a strong second half.

The Warriors, leaders of the western division, also got 18 points from Bill Robinson and 16 from Phl Schlote. Charlie Chambers and Art White collected 12 and 11 points, respectively.

The Warriors led 46-37 at the half and hit for six consecutive points at the start of the second half to pull away from the Marauders.

Herwig Baldauf topped McMaster scorers with 22 ponts while Chris Mallon added 15 and Dave Roser 12. The Marauaders' record now is 5-4.

For the Gryphons, the win ups their sixth of the year against four losses and solidified their hold on third place in

Bob Sharpe, a member of Canada's national team, paced the Gryphons with 27 points. Henry Vandenberg and Vito Bommarito followed with eight each.

Neal Hagman, with 22, and Joe Macrito, with 20, were top scorers for Wilfrd Laurer which held a 37-29 lead at the half.

At Windsor, Ron Gardner and Bill Lozynsky collected 16 points each to pace the Lancers who took a slim 47-43 lead into the second half.

Fd Dragan and Fred Robson each hit for 14 points as the Lancers won for the seventh time in nine games to maintain their hold on second place in the Western Division.

Wally Kurnew was Western's top scorer with 12 points. Dave Brown and Frank Nagy added 12 and 11 points, respectively, for the Mustangs, sixth in the Western Division with a 1-8 record.

Play resumes Friday with three games. Laurentian Voyageurs are in Toronto to meet Ryerson Rams, Ottawa Gee Gees play host to York Yeomen while Toronto Blues entertain Royal Military College Redmen.

Celtics Win 11th Straight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boston's running Celtics were slowed down Wednesday night, but they still managed to post their 11th consecutive National Basketball Association triumph, 92-90 over Milwaukee Bucks.

The victory tied Boston for the longest winning streak in the NBA this season. And, it gave the Celtics a 37-14 record, best in the league.

With centre Dave Cowens scoring 17 of his 23 points in the opening half, the Celtics held a 56-47 advantage at half time. Then Milwaukee's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar found the range, hitting 19 of his 29 points in the final two periods.

After Cowens' 20-foot jumper with 32 seconds left made it 92-88, Abdul-Jabbar retaliated with a hook shot seven seconds later. The Bucks' centre then blocked JoJo White's layup attempt and the Bucks had the ball and a chance to tie the game.

But Bobby Dandridge's jumper from the right side of the lane missed as time expired.

In other NBA games Wednesday, Houston beat New Orleans 124-97, Kansas City-Omaha defeated Portland 90-82, Los Angeles beat Philadelphia 113-110 in two overtimes and Phoenix downed Seattle 107-102.

In the American Basketball Association, New York beat San Diego 108-104, Denver defeated Indiana 123-113, Kentucky beat St. Louis 118-97 and San Antonio whipped Memphis 143-119.

Crowle Heads Seven-man Executive

Things Looking Up for Soccer League

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

Two weeks ago, the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association (BQSA) could not come up with four people to run its operation for 1975. Attempts to hold an election of officers failed miserably.

Today, seven men are ready to serve on the executive. And it would appear the soccer group has a strong foundation for the coming season.

What happened to change the picture in two short weeks?

Most important was a decision by Peter Crowle of Trenton to remain on as president for at least another term. He headed up the association in 1974 but let it be known last season would be his last.

At a Wednesday night meeeting in the Community Gardens at Trenton, Crowle would say only that "They put the twist on me," when explaining his decision to remain on.

He came to the Wednesday meeting armed with the names of seven men who had confirmed they would stand for office The election of officers was carried off in record time.

"Since the January 22 meeting, we got out and did some spade work," he said.

"We've been able to come up with some willing people who will stand for election to office. They put the twist on me to stay as president."

In order to lighten the load of responsibility for each of the executive members, the list of officers who will run the operation has grown from four to seven. And a volunteer at Warkworth Institution will handle the association's clerical work.

Joining Crowle on the BQSA Dudley Hillier of Belleville and Tony Venditti of Cobourg. Andy McWilliams of CFB Trenton will serve as an executive officer in charge of tournaments and all-star games.

Trenton's Ron Cannons, Henry Sonneveld and Chauncey Soderberg round out the executive. Cannons will handle publicity; Sonneveld is the treasurer, and Soderberg, secretary.

Crowle expects at least eight teams will form the association this year. There will be at least one new club in operation. Citizens Finance of Trenton will be a member of the league.

Ten teams made up the grouping in 1974. They were Cobourg Tony's, Belleville Golden Mile Restaurant Olympics, Whitley Insurance of Trenton, Warkworth Institution, Belleville United, Parsons, CFB Trenton, Brighton and Cooney's Haulage of Bayside.

United will not be back and a spokesman for the Cobney's team said Wednesday players from that club have disbanded, leaving the franchise open.

Peter Crowle (centre) returns as president of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association for another season. Working with him will be six other members of the executive. Flanking Crowle are secretary Chauncey Soderberg, left, and second vice-president Tony Venditti. Rounding out the slate of officers are first vice-president Dudley Hillier, treasurer Henry Sonneveld, Andy McWilliams (tournaments and all-star teams) and Ron Cannons (publicity).

Gas House Hockey

Generals Second

Belleville Generals took over sole possession of second place in the Gas House Hockey League Wednesday night, bringing their point total to 27, one more than Rollins Lumber and two up on fourth place Chuckwagon Foods.

While Generals were putting the stop on Canadian Durabla 10-1, Rollins lost 5-1 to first place Stanley Structures which now shows the way with a 19-1 record for 38 points.

Chuckwagon was idle last night.

In Wednesday's other game, Art's Esso topped Belleville Yardmen 5-3.

Gary Goyer had a seven-point night and Dave Skelton hit for six to lead Generals. Goyer scored three goals and had four assists while Skelton connected for four goals and two helpers. Hyalie Bryant helped himself to five assists in the point harvest. Bill Minaker supplied a goal and three assists. Other Generals marksmen were Bill Van Soelen, and Truelove.

Stanley's continued its domination of the league with firepower supplied by Bob Mulvihill, two. Wayne Storms, Russ Harrington and Tayne Leveque. Vern Whalen lost his shutout when Glen McMechan clicked for the Rollins tally.

Tom MacDonald's three goals sparked Art's past Yardmen. Jack Zylstra and Terry Fitzpatrick had the other goals for the winners. Counting for the losers were Rob Brown with a pair, and Steve Boardman.

Bay of Quinte Wrestlers Go After Title Saturday

Eight schools will be represented this weekend at the Bay of Quinte Secondary School Wrestling Championships at Bayside on Saturday.

Each school will take to the mats hoping to secure the Bay of Quinte trophy. Moreover, individuals will be competing for a spot on the Bay of Quinte team, which will represent the area at the Central Ontario Championships in Oshawa, February 20.

Moira Secondary School will be back to defend the Bay of Quinte title, but wrestling coach Jim Hughes says, "We aren't as strong as we were last year. We have a smaller team so I don't think we will be able to accumulate enough points to take the trophy this year."

Hughes says Bayside, Napanee and Quinte are the teams to watch out for in the title running.

"They have the largest squads," said Hughes, who also happens to be the Bay of Quinte wrestling convener, "and they have some pretty fine individual wrestlers as well."

The Bayside contingent is led by 90-pound Dave Dzwolak. Two weeks ago in Montreal he won a gold for his weight class.

At Quinte there's Dave Brant, A 106-pounder who also comes highly rated. Moira is expecting big things from Greg McCauley. He weighs in at 123 pounds and earned a silver medal at Montreal.

The remaining schools, Centennial, Picton, Madoc and Trenton should each make excellent showings.

Picton has a couple of ringers in Bruce and Brian Carter. They're identical twins and the only way you tell them apart is by their weight classifications. One weighs in at 98 while the other is a 106 pounder.

Hughes says Madoc is competitive and has a couple of strong wrestlers in the 136 and 141 classes.

Trenton has a lot of hope for 115-pound Don Gainforth and Centennial has a well-balanced wrestling squad.

The event begins at 10 a.m. and lasts until about 7 p.m.

Anyone interested in watching some good wrestling is invited. There is no admission charge.

Blue, White Get Wins

The Quinte Women's Basketball League had a couple of squeakers Wednesday night. Blue edged Red 24-23 and White downed Green 37-31.

Blue had seven points each from Janet Whalen and Pam Flindall and six from Linda Amo. Red got 11 from Joan Watson.

Donna Patterson scored 14 to top the White attack and Nancy Birch added 12.

Lynn Brearley responded with 10 for Green.

IIHF May Let Canada Use Pros in World Play

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Soviet Union has run an "open hockey" flag up the pole but few Canadians are saluting.

Reports from Stockholm said Wednesday the Soviets and Candaa had agreed on a world hockey championship open to professionals.

But the National Hockey League denied knowledge of such an agreement and the NHL Players Association said it wasn't interested.

The Stockholm reports appeared to be a feeler put out by the Soviets. Press reports in Stockholm quoted Ove Rainer, president of the Swedish Ice Hockey Association, as saying he was told of the Canada-Soviet agreement by sports attache Ivars Kespers at the Soviet embassy.

Canada pulled out of the world championships in 1970 after the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) refused Canada's request to use professionals.

Earl Dawson of Winnipeg, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) at the time of the 1970 pull-out, said Wednesday he was elated at the news from Stockholm.

But few others shared his feelings.

Alan Eagleson of Toronto, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, said that if the idea is to open the current world amateur championship to pros, "we're not interested."

Eagleson, who along with Father David Bauer, former national team coach and manager, has been looking into the possibility of Canada returning to international competition, said:

"I understand there is a movement afoot by the IIHF that would result in Canada being able to use pros in the Bunny Ahearne tournament. We're not interested. Our best players would not be available at that time (the end of March or early April).

". . . It is my ambition to see a World Cup with Canada as the host country in 1976. An invitation would be extended to the top five or six countries—the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Finland, the United States and West Germany.

"We're not interested in anything else. We just want to make our own deal with another country. Our government is interested in the same thing; our best against their best at a time that's suitable to everybody."

In Montreal, a spokesman for NHL president Clarence Campbell, said: "As far as the NHL is concerned the story is completely without foundation."

Gordon Juckes, CAHA executive director, said in Ottawa there has been a general endorsement of the use of hockey professionals during formal talks last June. Since then, he said, there have been informal results.

John (Bunny) Ahearne, said in London he was surprised at the Stockholm report and warned there might be difficulties for supporters of such a tournament.

"Looking at it quite coldly, the idea would hold no advantage for 24 of our members," said Ahearne. "There are only two countries with professional players—Canada and the United States."

He pointed out that the Soviets have long been opposed to open championships and he doubted they had changed their minds.

The Soviets, who have dominated the world amateur championships the last few years, also showed their ability to stand up against the Canadian pros in meetings with an NHL select squad in 1972 and a World Hockey Association team in 1974.

IN MEMORIAM

HOLCROFT — In loving memory of a dear father, Harold L., who passed away Feb. 6th, 1963.
What we would give if we could say,
Hello, Dad, in the same old way,
To hear your voice, see your smile,
To sit with you and chat awhile,
So you who have a father,
Cherish him with care,
For you'll never know the heartache,
Till you see his vacant chair.
—Always remembered by his son Rod, daughter-in-law Sharon and grandson Christopher.

UENS — In memory of my husband Alfred Uens, who passed away suddenly February 6, 1971.
—Sadly missed by his wife Barbara.

UENS — In loving memory of a dear father, Mr. Alfred Edward Uens, who passed away February 6, 1971.
Please God forgive a silent tear,
A fervent wish our dad was here,
There are others, yes, we know,
But he was ours, we loved him so,
Dear God take a message,
To our father in heaven above,
Tell him how much we miss him,
And give him all our love.
—Sadly missed by son Timmy and daughter Debbie.

FRENCH — In loving memory of a dear mother, May French, who passed away Feb. 5, 1974.
There is a sad but sweet remembrance,
There is a memory fond and true,
There is a token of affection, Mother,
And a heartache still for you.
—Sadly missed by son John, daughter-in-law Heather and grandchildren.

Broker Takes Sinclair To Court Over Wager

TORONTO (CP) — Gordon Sinclair, a freelance broadcaster, was called a "welcher as well as a piker" in small claims court Wednesday by a Toronto mortgage broker who sought to obtain $250 he won in a wager.

But Mr. Sinclair did not agree.

"He's a sour loser," the broadcaster said outside the court after Judge William Carroll dismissed the action by the broker, Dennis Barron, 44.

Mr. Sinclair testified he made a $1,000 bet with Mr. Barron that the Dow Jones stock average would not drop below 800 in 1973.

He said he thought he was duped into making the bet so after losing the wager, refused to pay the final $250.

Judge Carroll ruled that a wager could not be enforced in court.

Mr. Barron, during the hearing, read into the record letters he received from Mr. Sinclair in 1973 which contained an offer of a $1,000 bet.

The first letter, dated Aug. 7, 1973, and addressed to Mr. Barron, said that "I have in liquid investments at the moment about $1,500,000. ALL of it in the stock market. ALL."

"I was in the market Oct. 29, 1929, when it tumbled," Mr. Sinclair wrote. "Didn't lose a copper. It's possible you were not even born then.

"I'm an old man now, Dennis, an old optimist," he wrote. "Maybe even an old Pollyanna and I hope you accept my $1,000 bet."

In a letter Jan. 4, 1974, the broadcaster acknowledged the debt because the Dow Jones had fallen below the 800 mark on two occasions.

But the letter said he suffered serious financial losses as a result of the stock-average drops and he wanted to renegotiate the bet.

Mr. Sinclair suggested an immediate $500 and, in addition, a lunch or dinner at an expensive restaurant.

He wrote that if that was not acceptable, he would pay $500 immediately, followed by two cheques for $250, each by "my birthday, which is June 3."

"I don't want to whine, but since our pleasant meeting . . . my wife and myself have suffered setbacks in health that have left us a bit discouraged but by no means broke," he wrote.

"I have for the first time in 18 years wound up the year unable to pay my income tax without drawing on the income of year 1974," the letter said.

In a postscript to another letter, Mr. Sinclair informed Mr. Barron that if he sued, "it will aid your cause if I tell you now that my name is not now and never was Gordon Sinclair."

"I didn't know until I was 12 that I'm Allan," he said in the postscript. "My Dad made a mistake in registration. I'm the son of Gordon, the father of Gordon and the grandfather of Gordon. But I'm Al."

Airport 1975 Opens at Cinema

Charlton Heston, the actor who captivated the imaginations of millions in his portrayal of Ben Hur, now stars in another powerful role in Universal Pictures Airport 1975 opening Friday at the Quinte Mall Cinema.

Heston plays the part of an airline troubleshooter and former jet pilot as he heads up an all-star cast of 22. In his role he must come up with the solution to controlling a Boeing 747 following a mid-air collision in which the jumbo-jet loses its pilots. Rhodesian Poachers Are Active

SALISBURY (CP) — Ranchers in the southern part of Rhodesia have threatened to take the law into their own hands unless the authorities act more firmly against poaching.

Chief Inspector Richard Robins of Rhodesia's British South African Police told a meeting of the Gwanda and District Farmers Association the ranchers should consider hiring security guards.

He said police are doing all they can but the poachers are difficult to detect because the ranches are spread over a wide area.

Rancher Robin Watson said the problem is getting out of hand. In addition to losing game, the ranchers were losing cattle to the poachers' snares.

"Things are pretty bad when a horse you have had for 25 years is snared within a few yards of your own house, as happened to me recently," he said.

"The penalties are there under the law but they are just not being enforced. It has reached the stage where there doesn't seem to be much point in reporting poaching incidents.

"If something isn't done by the courts to deter poachers from operating, then people are going to start sorting things out their own way.

"We may be introducing an American gangster situation where ranchers and poachers would find themselves involved in a shooting war."

A party of school children on a weekend conservation exercise recently removed about 300 snares from a relatively small area, many of them on private farming land.

Liver Repairs Mean No Alcohol

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please answer a question or two about the liver.

I have had a blood test which showed I have some cirrhosis. The doctor says I also have an enlarged liver. Can the liver be repaired in any manner when the above conditions exist?

I am 55 years old and have done a lot of drinking. However, I have slowed down considerably in the past year.—S.J.K.

The blood test does not pinpoint the cause of cirrhosis. It merely signifies an impairment of liver function—in your case a fine distinction, because your history of heavy drinking plus the blood test results are presumptive evidence of cirrhosis.

Alcohol can cause degenerative changes in the liver, which fortunately has remarkable potential for regeneration of its damaged cells.

But for this to happen, alcohol drinking must be stopped completely and not just slowed down. I would think that you already have been told this. If not, be hereby informed.

In time, serial blood tests (tests spaced out in time) should show improvement in liver function. But the tests might continue to show liver malfunction even with strict abstinence.

In short, the liver cannot be repaired (or repair itself, to be more exact) except by removing the toxic agent—in this case alcohol.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am suffering terribly with arthritis. There is much swelling and I am becoming almost a cripple.

I went to a specialist, and his treatment was 50 aspirins each day and four doses of Maalox. This seemed so excessive I went to another doctor and he said it was outrageous and would cause bleeding and ulcers. I am 55 and quite overweight. Please give me your opinion.—B.R.

That is a large amount of aspirin, enough to cause stomach irritation, and perhaps bleeding or ulceration.

There is another form, sodium salicylate, available in coated tablets. This form does not cause the irritation mentioned, and, in fact, can be administered in lower dosages.

Another thing, pills aren't the sole, effective treatment for arthritis. Various forms of physical therapy can do much to ease the discomfort from arthritis.

You did not specify the type of joint disease you have. Since you tell me you are overweight, you could have osteoarthritis, common among obese persons. Weight reduction would be essential for you, and it would probably do wonders for you.

As for the suggested aspirin treatment, you were wise to seek another opinion.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me if there is any benefit in eating garlic buds. Someone told us they would help keep the sugar count down, but all we have found is that they cause an upset stomach.—Mrs. G.R.

Garlic has been studied and found wanting for medicinal purposes, as have a lot of other "miracle-working" foods.

Guarantee Loans

LONDON (CP) — More than one-third of Britain's total export business now is covered by government loan guarantees. Robert Fell, head of the export credits guarantee department, said that the first half of the current financial year the department had covered exports valued at £2.55 million ($5.87 billion). This represents about 36 per cent of total United Kingdom exports.

Opening lead — Q

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Old man Z, who used to play the dummy in the columns about auction bridge, was back in duplicate action again. Since he was the only declarer to bring home four hearts, he was asked how he played the hand.

"Quickly" was his reply. "Back in the days when I used to appear in Milton Work's column, I learned never to take losing finesses. East was marked with the king of clubs for his diamond overcall. The play started with a queen of diamonds lead. I won in dummy and led a trump. East hopped right up with the ace, cashed the king of diamonds and got out with a low trump. I won the trick, proceeded to cash dummy's ace of clubs, came to my hand with a trump and led a club to dummy's queen. East took his kind and had to lead a diamond to give me a ruff and discard or a spade right up to dummy's king-jack."

Z's play was well thought out. He would still make his contract if West held the king of clubs. He wouldn't make it if East held four to the king, but that was an unlikely holding. It would make no difference if East held exactly three, but it did bring it home against East's doubleton king.

Second Effort Pays Big for Mayflower

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Second effort in a thrilling three-horse stretch drive Wednesday night enabled Mayflower Maid to take the 2,800 featured eighth race at Windsor Raceway.

The seven-year-old mare, owned by Thaddee Matte of Papeneauville, Que., led most of the way, but driver Andy Hardy challenged with Grant Latimer's Demons Boy and the six-year-old gelding held a slight edge as they turned into the home stretch.

However, the mare came on strong in the final 100 yards for a neck decision over Demons Boy, covering the mile in 2:09 1-5. She paid $6.60, $3 and $2.20.

The daily double of Thorpe R in the first and Apache Duke in the second returned $23.

The fourth-race triactor of Marjorie Wood, Belle R Adios and Rego paid $1,499.20 with Haemadoots, Farm Byrd and Relhom Howard combining in the seventh for a $211.10 triactor.

The ninth-race exactor of Keystone Whistle and Fine and Dandy returned $221.40 and Duffy's Bet and He's Gone produced a 10th-race exactor of $17.60.

The crowd of 3,212 wagered $334,775.

The afternoon program was highlighted by Lady Quick's victory in the $1,600 seventh race.

Driven by Mel Turcotte, the four-year-old mare owned by the Med Stables Inc. of Burton, Ohio, covered the mile in 2:11 3-5 and paid $12.70, $5.30 and $3.70. Dominion Duke was second and Sampsonette third, setting up a triactor payoff of $137.20.

The daily double of General Rick in the first and Ronnie Maguire in the second returned $20.80.

Dick Allen Retires

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves said Wednesday they are placing controversial slugger Dick Allen on the voluntary retirement list because Allen says he doesn't want to play in Atlanta.

Eddie Robinson, general manager of the National League baseball team, said he received a letter from Allen, who led the American League with 33 homers last year while playing with Chicago White Sox, and he said he did not want to play for the Braves.

Allen will not be allowed to play for any other team because his contract still belongs to the Braves.

He was traded to Atlanta and still has a year left on a three-year contract.

Allen quit the White Sox last September before the end of the season and announced he was retiring to raise race horses.

Zanussi Celebrates in Fine Style

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defenceman Joe Zanussi celebrated his 28th birthday Wednesday by scoring a goal and adding an assist, enabling Providence Reds to tie Springfield Kings 5-5 in one of two American Hockey League games.

The Reds trailed 5-3 in the third period when Zanussi took a John Wright pass and put a 40-foot slap shot past goaltender Rick Charron.

In the other game, New Haven Nighthawks stopped Richmond Robins 5-2.

Zanussi assisted on Pierre Laganiere's second goal of the game just two minutes after his goal to tie the game.

At Richmond, Alain Langlois and Billy Plager scored within 34 seconds to give New Haven a 3-2 lead in the second period.

Langlais and Walt Ledingham scored early in the third period to finish off the New Haven scoring.

Randy Wyroub and zLarry Fullan scored the Richmond goals, while John Rogers scored the other New Haven goal in the first period.

Ambulance Challenge Accepted

Ontario Requests Meeks Detail Plan

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The provincial government today accepted a challenge from Stu Meeks, who says he can run both city ambulances and pare $180,000 off their combined budgets.

This week the province's ambulance service branch announced Belleville is a "high cost" area and that the two companies serving the city would have to "integrate".

Mr. Meeks has since argued that his company has been "holding the line" on spending with its budget of $102,000 for a two-vehicle, 24-hour service to residents. This compares with the City Ambulance annual budget of $380,000 for two-vehicle service.

In a statement written by Mr. Meeks' lawyer, it is declared "he (Mr. Meeks) can maintain the present standrd of service for the whole of Belleville for a budget of $330,000."

Charles Brubacher, director of Ontario's ambulance services branch, today accepted Mr. Meeks' challenge and requested a feasibility study for provincial scrutiny.

Mr. Meeks said the study will be undertaken.

"The ball is in his court," said Mr. Brubacher referring to Mr. Meeks' challenge. "If he will put his proposal in writing completely detailing the scheme, we (the ministry) will evaluate it.

"I want a complete working description so that I know what I'm buying for the people," said Mr. Brubacher.

In the meantime, Belleville lawyer Ian Brady, representing Mr. Meeks met with provincial authorities today in Toronto and a meeting between Mr. Meeks and minister of health Frank Miller has been arranged.

The meeting will take place Feb. 18 at 10 a.m., Mr. Meeks said.

The operator of City Ambulance, Len Steele, today denied City Ambulance is receiving $380,000 for the service it provides in Belleville.

The figure was twice confirmed by this paper in discussions with ambulance director Mr. Brubacher.

Mr. Steele said it is difficult to draw a line dividing the operating costs of his Belleville, Napanee and Madoc service but the local costs would be about $160,000.

Anglicans Plan Poll on Union

TORONTO (CP) — The Anglican Church of Canada, often accused of lagging on negotiations for church union that it itself opened in 1943, moved far ahead of its partner churches today as it began the process of feeling out its members on what they think of uniting with other Protestant denominations.

The national executive council met to establish the means by which that feeling can be determined. It will be through a national poll, the question to be asked being: Should union negotiations be continued?

The council almost was pushed into taking a stand when the executives of the other participating churches, the United Church of Canada and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), requested a formal statement outlining the basis on which the Anglicans were willing to continue union negotiations.

Last week the Anglican House of Bishops said it found the present plan of union unacceptable—but did not rule out union some time in the future.

The statement created what many of those at the meeting termed a crisis. Some accused the bishops, who would lose much of their authority under the structure of the proposed new church, of putting up roadblocks.

But in the end, all bitterness was swept away and the Anglican council, in a late-evening meeting, laid out what it considered a new basis for continuing union talks.

It said the plan of union was not acceptable to Anglicans in its present form but affirmed that the search for a "a true and lasting union" with the other churches is a primary goal, one that must be reached as soon as practicable.

Ontario Liberals Gather at Windsor

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Organizers for the Liberal party in Ontario are expecting about 1,800 delegates to attend the three-day annual meeting and policy conference which begins here today.

And the mood of those attending is decidedly optimistic.

Party leaders expect an election this year and members are buoyed by recent polls which show provincial Liberal support is ahead of the ruling Progressive Conservatives.

"A sense of excitement is growing as more and more Liberals respond to the probability that this meeting will launch the campaign for Ontario's first new government in more than three decades," Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said in a recent speech.

Party planners have scheduled a busy program, with a keynote address by Mr. Nixon and five hours of policy sessions Saturday on schools, government, housing and jobs.

Loyalist Language Lab Opens

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter.

Loyalist College's new language laboratory, a setup designed to vastly improve its modern language program, officially opened Thursday.

Installed chiefly to aid in the instruction of French, the laboratory can also be utilized for conversaalonal Spanish and German.

Each student has his own for conversational Spanish and minor console, including microphone, to either listen to or reply to the taped instruction.

The major control console is equipped with a headphone set for the teacher, who can manage two separate programs for two groups of students merely by flipping a switch.

From the controls, the teacher is able to converse directly with one or more students, or allow students to communicate with each other from their own booths. The teacher can monitor each student to see how each is progressing.

"This will greatly improve our program . . . through indirect instruction with tapes," said Paul King, dean of faculty and academic services.

He said there are over 100 full-time day students enrolled in French language training at the college, plus between 75 and 100 part-time students in night classes.

"I think you will find this is a rather high enrollment for our particular area," remarked Mr. King. He cited the efforts of Belleville's Club, Alouette and its president, Olivier Gibeault, as one reason.

Cora Munn, modern language program co-ordinator, said there has been "no problem motivating them (students) at all" in the French program.

She explained they have an opportunity to communicate with francophones and a great enthusiasm has developed. The French program has grown by 25-30 percent each year.

"This facility will be a great boon to it," she commented.

Mrs. Munn added the laboratory allows the teacher a close watch on those students who do not work hard enough and she can "keep prodding them".

Officials present for the opening were Dean King, Hal Butterill, director of extension, Ernst Kneisel, director of public relations, Mrs. Munn, instructors Rita Lynch and Major Lorne Johnson of CFB Trenton, all from the College, Gerard Lafond of the Prince Edward County Separate School Board, and Baron McCormick and Kevin Williams of General Distributors Ltd., two representatives of the Sony company which built the complex.

Ottawa Tot Found Afire

OTTAWA (CP) — City police continue to investigate today circumstances surrounding what appears either a tragic accident or horrible act Thursday night.

Michael Demers, 4, of Ottawa, clad in a one-piece snowmobile suit, was discovered ablaze in an east-end field about 7 p.m.

Wayne Lambert, 18, a neighbor, said he was walking across a field near his home when he noticed "a little bonfire and saw it move."

"I heard screaming and rushed over to the child, rolled him in the snow, and wrapped my coat around him," he said in an interview today.

The boy is "in serious but stable condition" the Eastern Ontario Children's Hospital said today. He has burns to 40 per cent of his body.

Look Ma, No Cavities

Prince Edward - Hastings Pupils to Get Fluoride

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

An in-school fluoride treatment program for Prince Edward and Hastings County elementary students will begin in two months.

Dr. Dennis Warrick, director of dental services for the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, said Thursday the program this year will be aimed at kindergarten to Grade 3 pupils. The program will be expanded to other grades later.

Such treatment has dramatic effects on reducing cavity rates — with an overall reduction of 30 to 40 percent anticipated.

Belleville and Picton have fluoridated water, which reduces cavities by as much as 60 per cent.

"Fluoride treatment places a coating on teeth which hardens tooth enamel thereby defending against cavities," said the doctor. About 2,000 youngsters will receive the treatment this year.

Living Index Climb Slows

OTTAWA (CP) — Even though consumers had to pay more for cars, to eat and drink and to heat their homes and keep the lights on in January, the increase in the cost of living was only half the rate recorded for a month earlier, Statistics Canada reported today.

The January report on the consumer price index showed a one-half-of-one-per-cent gain in the over-all index last month, half the rate that prces rose in December.

For the first time in several months, food prices showed only a moderate gain. Most of the increase that did occur in this index was attributable to higher prices for food eaten outside the home.

On a 12-month basis, there was a 12.1-per-cent increase in the over-all index to its January level of 176.6 this year from 157.6 in 1974.

This represents a slight moderation from the 12.4-per-cent annual rate recorded for cost-of-living increases in 1974, but the rate last year was the highest Canada had experienced in 26 years.

Higher housing and transportation costs were among major contributors to the January index increase, as were tobacco and alcohol price rises following recent government tax and price increases.

Lower retail prices for sugar, beef and poultry largely offset price rises for fresh milk, eggs and cereal and bakery products, keeping the increase in the food index to three-tenths of one per cent. Prior to January, sugar and to a lesser extent, beef, had been major contributors to food price rises.

No Guarantee Ontario's Cost $100 Million

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Thursday he is unable to guarantee that Ontario's investment in Syncrude Canada Ltd. will not exceed $100 million.

Prodded by Opposition Leader Robert Nixon in the legislature, Mr. Davis said there are "possible hazards" attached to the investment.

"Are we in it for five per cent of the total cost or are we in it for $100 million?" Mr. Nixon asked the premier.

"We," the shareholders of the province of Ontario have five per cent of the equity of Syncrude," Mr. Davis replied.

55 Speed Limit Sought

Energy Saving Program Unveiled

OTTAWA (CP) — A five-part energy conservation program, dependent largely on public acceptance and co-operation by provincial, municipal and business leaders, was announced by the government Thursday night.

An extension of a 1973 program that had limited success, the plan is designed to cut national energy consumption by at least two per cent this year.

The proposals, many hinged on amendment of provincial laws and improvement of individual conservation practices, range from reduced speed limits and better-insulated buildings to fee schedules that would penalize excessive users of electricity and natural gas.

Higher taxes for inefficient appliances and automobiles were suggested, but no tax changes were announced.

Mixed oppositon reaction greeted the plan, which took 40 minutes for Energy Minister Donald Macdonald to outline.

Alvin Hamilton, Progressive Conservative energy critic, called the program "a roaring farce" and said Canada is two years behind the United States in starting.

But T. C. Douglas, his New Democratic Party counterpart, complimented the government for facing the problem and making at least a late start.

Mr. Macdonald called the plan a co-ordinated approach that will take time and sacrifice to implement. He urged all sectors of society to co-operate.

The government will begin by reducing its own energy demands, heating buildings more efficiently, buying smaller cars and imposing a 55-mile-an-hour speed limit on federal vehicles, he said. Employees who didn't comply with the speed limit would be discharged, he added later.

The provinces, which have jurisdiction over highways and motor vehicles, will be asked to lower speed limits to a maximum of 55. There was no immediate provincial reaction.

Oil Sands Firms Get No Relief

OTTAWA (CP) — Companies planning future oil-extraction plants at the Alberta oil sands will not be exempt from the tough, new federal resource taxation laws, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday.

Future participants "will have to take the laws as they find them," he said in the Commons.

This followed Prime Minister Trudeau's statement Wednesday that any future developments at the northeastern Alberta sands likely will have to be on a purely commercial basis. However, the prime minister said the government will look at requests for aid and concessions on an individual basis.

Director Outlines Goals Of ARC Industry Program

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

ARC Industries, a workshop for the mentally handicapped, started in Belleville, in March, 1966, with two residents. Things have changed in the nine years following so that now the workshop has a new location, 20 residents and a new method of being funded.

Director of the workshop, Bill Cook, Thursday told a meeting of the Lions' Club that new method of funding includes provisions made last fall for 80 per cent of costs to be funded by the province's ministry of social services rather than by the per capita basis as was done before.

"We are quite excited about this and are watching to see what happens now. Everyone is hopeful. Things are in a transitional state right now," said Mr. Cook, "but we are sure that because of this move we are in position to provide a better program (at the workshop).

In his talk, Mr. Cook said that ARC Industries has grown from two residents working out of a home on Cannifton Rd. to 20 residents of all ages working in their own quarters on 119 Station St. because of the generosity of the Lions' Club. He said the workshop has been located there since September, 1969.

Mr. Cook outlined the four basic objectives of what the workshop hopes to achieve for the mentally handicapped.

"We provide a means of sheltered employment for those who are mentally handicapped. For some people, this workshop situation provides their only means of work for their whole lives.

"Second, we provide a community awareness program for the mentally handicapped. We try to teach them how to cope in the community and stress home skills, personal skills such as how to be attractive so they can get around the community independently.

"Third, we provide a work training program such as one that is operating at The Intelligencer, where the workers do such jobs as placing inserts into the newspapers. From here they can graduate to more competitive jobs.

"Lastly, we provide an actual employment program an employment placement program. This is for those we think are able to handle a job on a completely independent and competitive basis.

"In line with that we also have a follow-up program, where we follow their progress for a while once they leave to see how they are doing. If there is a problem they come back to the workshop.

Lack of Tech Students Concerns College Heads

Although freshman enrolment in the Loyalist College school of technology has grown from 83 in 1967 to 189 in 1974, it is not considered sufficient by college officials.

"This is still not a lot," remarked Ray Turner, school director, to the college board of governors Thursday.

He turned back questions by board members that the technology courses might be too demanding or too sophisticated for the Quinte area.

Mr. Turner admitted there are pressures placed upon technologists but pointed out the college courses prepare graduates to meet these demands.

He also said he did not think Loyalist technological equipment "is that sophisticated." "our courses are not just designed for this area," he added.

Noting technological courses are not popular, Mr. Turner commented the lack of students "is a fad" and the problem should disappear in future. "I think we're pulling out of it now," he said.

He explained the small number of students has caused "special measures ... taken in order to be able to operate in a viable fashion."

"The solution adopted is to combine classes wherever possible, sometimes even from different levels ... the more efficiently to utilize technical staff and facilities," outlined Mr. Turner.

"Further, most teachers ... are required to work across academic levels and disciplines, wherever possible ..." he added.

County's Newest Charter Service Spans North America

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Quinte Airways, a charter flight service originated in 1965 by the Prince Edward Flying Club, will be expanded by a former Toronto Pilot, who plans to provide 24 hour passenger service, seven days a week.

Hal Bolt, employed for ten years as an aviation consultant at Toronto International Airport, says he plans "a first-class operation, day or night" with twin engine planes of various sizes and weights to offer improved air freight and air passenger service.

The charter service, renamed Quinte Skyways, following its sale, presently operates with one plane, but Mr. Bolt expects from five to six planes will be in service within a year's time.

A 20-passenger plane will be introduced in the next six months.

For his new air service, Mr. Bolt has rented hangar No. 5 at Loch Sloy industrial park.

"We have complete facilities — a complete air maintenace base and fuel sales of all different grades," he noted.

"All of our pilots are airline transport rated with the exception of senior commercial pilots. Many are recently retired air force pilots," he said.

"We have a small staff now but it's growing," added Mr. Bolt.

Quinte Skyways is a charter flight service licensed to fly passengers anywhere in North America.

When operated by the Prince Edward Flying Club the service was "very limited on weather conditions and night flying" says Mr. Bolt.

Quinte Airways was permitted to fly only during the day and flights could be made only when weather conditions were highly favorable.

Quinte Skyways has full radio equipment and IFR (instrument) flying will be introduced at the airport here.

Mr. Bolt, who studied the Trenton, Belleville and Kingston areas before locating in Picton feels his service is needed, especially by businessmen.

"There was definitely a crying need for a first class operation here," he observed.

Businessmen who charter flights may be flown directly to their destinations or to another airport where they may make travel connections. This saves valuable time often wasted in drives to the airport, he said.

"We are a little slower than the jet jobs on a long flight," said Mr. Bolt.

He observed the reasonable businessman's flight with Quinte Skyways might be about 1,000 miles in length.

"On a flight of this length we can save him time and money," commented the pilot.

In addition to offering a valuable service to businessmen in the Quinte area, the new flight service also will feature opportunities for young persons to learn a trade.

"We are developing programs to take young people and teach them the air charter business," remarked Mr. Bolt.

"We are working on programs to train aircraft engineers."

"The Ontario government has been apprached and is interested."

Mr. Bolt said a four-year apprenticeship program would be suggested. Regulations are set down by the ministry of transport for licensing.

"The training we are trying to effect has a future — a good salary and a trade in which there is always a shortage of manpower."

Bison Prepared For New Pasture

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

WOOLER — The posse has long been disbanded. The rifle with tranquilizer-filled darts is back on the rack. The Murray township countryside is peaceful.

It's a far cry from the days in April over a year and a half ago when buffalo roamed the Murray range. Seven had escaped from the RR1, Wooler farm of Allan Thrower, one day after he had bought them in Peterborough.

The buffaloes, or bison as they are more correctly called, roamed the rugged Murray back-country around Wooler for a week.

And for that time, Mr. Thrower chased the buffaloes with a tranquilizer gun. He followed up all calls from his neighbors who spotted the wandering beasts.

The provincial police and volunteers chased the wayward beasts. During the week-long intensive search, two were brought back to his farm, but again escaped.

In the end, four ambled back to the farm or were found and returned. Three of the beasts died after failing to regain consciousness from the effects of the tranquilizing fluid.

The survivors soon will be on the move again.

The four buffalo that survived their escapade and another that was not delivered to Mr. Thrower's farm at that time will shortly be moved to larger pastures.

The Throwers are selling their 245-acre farm. On the farm the five buffalo roamed in a 15-acre field. They will shortly be moved less than a mile to a 20-25 acre pasture.

The herd hasn't grown any since those April days. But Gail Thrower expects some changes soon: "The field they were in is right behind our house. We saw some activity so we feel that some calves might be coming."

A bull and four cows make up the herd.

At present, she said, there is no way of knowing how many calves they can expect. She said her husband still plans to raise the animals on a commercial basis — for breeding and eventual slaughter.

These days, they are less skitterish than those days in April when one was reported to have plowed through a thick, rail fence to escape capture.

Now, they approach Mr. Thrower as he feeds them, she said.

Their upcoming move to the end of the township's Stacey Rd., shouldn't present great problems. The route is not long and will be fenced in. They will have to cross a township road, but it's a local road that sees little traffic.

Mrs. Thrower, with fingers crossed for good luck, is hoping there will be no reoccurrence of the events of 1973.

Heights May Lose Fire Protection

PICTON — Hallowell Township has made no agreement with the Picton fire department for protection of Prince Edward Heights, the provincial government centre for the retarded and the town brigade has been instructed by council not to anwer any alarms after March 1, 1975. If an agreement is drawn up between the two municipalities the fire protection service will continue.

Hallowell Township was directed by John White, of the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs to negotiate an agreement for fire protection for the government facility with the town of Picton.

Prince Edward Heights is located in Hallowell Township and the muncipality receives a grant in lieu of taxes. Fire services from Picton were preferred beacuse the town fire department can arrive on the scene in answer to an alarm about 10 minutes sooner than the Bloomfield — Hallowell brigade.

Marketing Official Says Milk to Cost Even More

IVANHOE — Before consumers have recovered from the last increase paid to dairy producers for milk, they are going to be hit with another, Ontario Milk Marketing Board (OMMB) chairman George McLaughlin said Thursday night.

Mr. McLaughlin was speaking to Hastings County milk producers during the Hastings County Milk Committee annual meeting.

"We have to be careful about what we do on prices. We have to pay more attention than ever before on the marketplace," he said. "The consumer reaction is much more edgy about prices for food today than ever since the OMMB was started."

Mr. McLaughlin said he saw a dramatic drop in purchases after a price increase last fall. He said that three to five months after an increase, purchasing usually returns to normal, but this had not occurred by October. "It has not happened yet. It is the slowest recovery ever in comparison with others," he said.

"Before recovery has started, the consumer is going to get hit with another price increase. What this will do to the market for fluid milk is anybody's guess," Mr. McLaughlin said.

The OMMB chairman cited an example in the United States. He said prices went up 28 percent and consumer purchasing came down five percent.

"That put the skids under the whole market. Prices tumbled for powdered milk and cheese. It could end up a serious situation," he said. "The same thing can happen here on industrial milk products. The sales of cottage cheese is well down on a percentage basis. It may mean a lot smaller dairy industry if we continue pricing on cost."

Mr. McLaughlin said there are substitutes the consumer can turn to, and is doing so now. He said the consumer questions how efficient dairy farmers are as producers. "We are going to be put under a microscope," he said.

In regard to pricing, Mr. McLaughlin said the OMMB "doesn't have to pay attention to supply and demand because of the power we have," but he added "it gets tough to answer questions".

"Press people think consumers think about farmers. They say that as long as the farmer is getting the increase and not the middle-man, people do not mind the increase. They are wrong," Mr. McLaughlin said.

The OMMB chairman told the gathering that "the next five years is going to be harder to cover costs.

"You must have a milk recording program. Every cow has got to keep the farmer, not the farmer keeping the cow. If you don't pull your weight, we can't do anything for you," he concluded.

Stanton Heads Hospital Board

PICTON — A Picton insurance agent, Donald Stanton, has been elected chairman of the board of Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital. He succeeds Dan Keeler.

New vice-chairman is Donald Walker and secretary-treasurer is W.E. Cooke.

Mr. Cooke noted hospital admission rate in 1974 was 319 patients less than in 1973.

Sub Shop Opens Doors

TRENTON — After about two months of preparation, Ed's Giant Subs opened its Dundas St. West doors to its first customers here Thursday.

The convenience - food outlet is the second in eastern Ontario for co-owner - operator Ed Catlin. An outlet in Napanee proved unprofitable and was closed. The other outlet is in Smiths Falls, a town 46 miles southeast of Ottawa.

Co-owner Mike Sheldon said Thursday they have been searching for a location for a new store in the Trenton-Belleville area for two years.

He said that it had been difficult to find long narrow premises suited to their operation. With a wide storefront, too much space would have been wasted.

Their new outlet which abuts Simmons Pharmacy on Dundas St., sells long sandwiches filled with meat, vegetables and cheese.

Mr. Sheldon sad the emphasis is placed on providing good value and the most product for the customer's dollar.

Scouts Plan Paper Drive For Jamboree Trip Fund

TRENTON — Every householder in Trenton will be asked for waste paper and returnable bottles Sat. Feb. 15 when town scouts and cubs canvas homes to raise funds to send nine boys to the World Jamboree in Norway this summer.

Bottles and paper collected in the one-day blitz will be sold and the money applied to the Jamboree fund.

Cecil Paul, Trenton District Council information officer, said Thursday the blitz is only one method by which scout coffers will be filled.

Plans call for a cake and craft sale Feb. 22 at the Canterbury Hall in Trenton. Scouts are also selling chocolate bars.

In all, about $9,000 — or a thousand dollars per boy — is needed to send the scouts to Norway.

The Saturday blitz is scheduled a day before the Scout-Guide week opens Sunday in Trenton, and across Canada. This year, its theme is A Half a Million Strong and will celebrate the growth of the scout movement in Canada.

District council plans here call for displays in various downtown shop windows during the week (feb. 16-22).

P.M. Speaks

Perhaps with a view to letting Canadians know he is still around, and not simply going through the motions, Prime Minister Trudeau surfaced in recent days to warn of a tough year as the country faces rising inflation and social unrest.

One of the things that besets us in these uncertain times is a lack of leadership. The men at the top, meaning the first ministers of different countries, get there by reason of intellectual and leadership qualities; but having got there, few if any seem to exercise these qualities. Consequently there is a sense of drift abroad and we are driven along all but uncontrollably, governed by events instead of the other way round — instead of those at the top saying: "thus far and no farther."

So we have Mr. Trudeau telling supporters that the tensions created by inflation and the changing social order are causing insecurity as people become worried about law and order, and looking to government for solutions.

This is the Prime Minister's way of saying that "we have no solutions . . . let's eat, drink and be merry etc."

He gives the media a backhand compliment by saying it is filling in for what he describes as a weak parliamentary opposition, but that it has no answers either.

Mr. Trudeau could be speaking for himself, or for parliament, when he says: "They can write an editorial one day and contradict it the next week, after nobody remembers . ."

He does not elaborate much on that "changing social order," but offers this equally vague carrot for a perplexed and moreorless leaderless populace: "We will have to lead in developing values which have more meaning in this world where material values are slipping away and the pursuit of them becomes less important."

Shades of that famous speech a few years ago when the Prime Minister inferred that . . . well work maybe was not everyone's bag.

At least the Prime Minister has let us know he is thinking about things. However, the speech was at a party fund-raising dinner which rather means he was not entirely on the public wavelength, not talking to Canadians directly, or talking about the things that affect us all, such as law and order, housing, not to mention how inflation will be "wrestled to the ground." But then, this is not wartime, and Mr. Trudeau is no Churchill; not even a Richard Nixon who was forever talking to the country, as if he had a guilty conscience which of course he did.

In Ottawa though, there is a need for more communication — from the top. From the Prime Minister to the public, and not just through the information services.

Women's Year

Three ladies in the news in our area in this International Women's Year, who symbolise in their different ways the feminine contribution in our time: Mrs. Frankie Patterson, senior citizen, who has just celebrated her 95th birthday; Mrs. Virginia O'Rourke, who steps down shortly from the presidency of the UCS board of directors, and Mrs. Debra Seeley of Stirling whose service to the Community School Association has received well-deserved recognition. And not forgetting Mayor Jeffrey and others who serve in municipal government and in a growing number of spheres of community and government activity. As they are saying these days, "Why Not?"

Modest Claim

At a time when wage demands keep spiralling farther out of sight, provincial health minister Frank Miller's favorable reaction to the moderate claims of the medical profession is understandable.

Mr. Miller is reported delighted with the doctors' decision to stick to a four per cent increase in fees agreed to last year. It is all the more estimable a decision considering there had been talk lately of asking for a 13.5 per cent increase.

Coupled with the cabinet's recent decision to take a drop in members' pay, this moderate and in effect anti-inflationary action by the doctors is commendable. That's more than can be said for many a claim being made these days.

Doctors may be better off than most of us, but they are hit by inflation too. In the circumstances their claim is a modest one.

In Canada and Britain

Women Parliamentarians Jockey for Party Leadership

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

It's understandable to compare the prospects of a woman as leader of Conservative parties in Britain and Canada because both parties are in a leader-seeking phase and both have prominent women candidates competing for leader.

Both parties are also in opposition which has resulted in understandable speculation that Tories in power again in either country with a woman leader would mean of course a female prime minister.

This would be a big deal, I suppose, for Canadians or the British. Although in Asia in India and Sri Lanka (the old Ceylon), there have been women prime ministers now for several years.

At this point of writing, the British Conservative leadership race is well under way but the Canadian hasn't begun and Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, the British Tory leadership candidate, is close to winning.

In Canada, Flora Macdonald is only suggested as being a Tory leadership candidate chiefly because Mr. Stanfield hasn't yet announced when he will step down and Miss Macdonald hasn't declared herself a candidate for leader.

But the Right Honorable Mrs. Thatcher shaking hands with the Right Honorable Miss Macdonald does boggle the imagination while we still see those old smoothies Pierre Trudeau and Harold Wilson doing the honors.

But some stranger things than women prime ministers at Westminster and in Ottawa have happened in politics in the last few years.

Who would have thought of Richard Nixon in enough disgrace to resign? Who would have conjured up a Gerry Ford?

To take the hypothetical prospect further, we would very quickly see that Mrs. Thatcher and Miss Macdonald as Tory leaders would think very differently about social and other issues, Mrs. Thatcher being called "a conservative's conservative" and Miss Macdonald, "a Red Tory."

In Canada there is a brand of Toryism which is not that far from so-called "right wing socialism" who believe for example, in a large state involvement in industry to stimulate it, not take it over or manage it.

The classic example of Red Toryism from the Diefenbaker years in power of the early 1960s, was their Roads to Resources program. It supplied about $130 millions in road and rail facilities in northwest mining sites, into which private enterprise has entered mightily, especially at Pine Point, because the state had supplied the transport infrastructure to make possible remote industrial development.

These kinds of commitments are close to the heart of Canadian Tories who believe their political philosophy should be detached from traditional positions.

In Britain Mrs. Thatcher as education minister under former prime minister Ted Heath whom she unseated in the leadership fight, stopped free milk for British school children.

By comparison, this columnist who knows and admires Flora Macdonald can, in no way, imagine her doing this kind of thing or condoning it.

Juxtaposed, Mrs. Thatcher as a Canadian Tory, Miss Macdonald as a British one, the former would look very conservative close to our Western reactionary Tories, Flora Macdonald in Britain probably being asked why she doesn't join the Labor party where her true beliefs appear to be shared?

Its' all fun at this point. But then, who can tell.

Syncrude a Co-operative Effort To Ensure That Canada Has Oil

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — It seems there are a good many misunderstandings about the government's participation in the Syncrude project.

One of them is that it is bailing out the oil companies.

A second is that it is taking a rash and needless gamble.

And a third is that this one $2 billion project will make Canada independent in oil.

Insofar as gambling or helping out the oil companies are concerned, the whole essence of the Syncrude project is that it is a national protection which the federal government, Alberta and our government considered essential.

Whether the oil companies could have gone it on their own, or whether it would have merited them going on their own, is a question that probably could be argued forever.

The fact is that they decided they couldn't, or wouldn't, and that the three governments decided the project was so essential that they had to ante up to the extent of $600 million ($100 million of it from Ontario).

Turning to the matter of supply, Syncrude in itself isn't going to be any great bonanza.

The project is really only a model and will produce only some 130,000 barrels of oil a day, whereas the present total consumption in Canada is two million barrels daily.

But the Syncrude production will be only a tiny fraction of the potential of the northern tar sands.

And from the Syncrude model the technologies will be developed and the experience gained whereby this potential can be tapped.

An important side factor is that Ontario has an equity interest, it will hold five per cent of the project—and equivalent profits, if any.

This is significant in that it marks the first time our provincial government has invested major money on an equity, or share-holding, basis.

This is almost certainly the start of a trend.

For with the constant need for development today and the huge costs involved in some cases only government has the resources to handle it.

Market Forces that Affect the $

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The Canadian dollar dipped below the U.S. dollar on foreign-exchange markets briefly the other day for the first time in years.

In the interests of distinguishing between the tail and the dog, however, it would probably be more accurate to report that the U.S. dollar moved above the Canadian.

But nil desperandum, as Mr. Micawber would say. Never despair—because the market forces that determine the dollar's value are changing constantly.

From Canada's broad viewpoint parity is just about right. (For reasons of self-interest, exporters would favor a lower Canadian dollar while importers would prefer a higher).

And foreign-exchange dealers around the world have been accommodating us by marking down the premium on the Canadian dollar gradually during recent weeks and months.

One apparent reason is foreign anticipation that the Canadian dollar's domestic purchasing power will continue to decline. Inflation is running at 12 per cent a year, the federal government anticipates a $3-billion deficit next year, and no serious steps to contain inflation are being taken or even contemplated by Ottawa.

What is more significant, however, is the international market's perception of the U.S. dollar—since our dollar is so closely linked to it by Canada-U.S. trade ties.

At the moment, some major cross-currents are at work on the U.S. dollar.

For example, January's sudden decline in interest rates touched off a vigorous stock-market rally—and that brought in a large number of bargain-hunting foreign investors who had been waiting for confirmation that the decline on Wall Street had finally been reversed.

On the negative side, however, are such factors as the Chinese and Soviet cancellations of orders to buy U.S. wheat and the general mood of pessimism about the U.S. economy.

Certainly the recovery from the current U.S. recession would be better served by a weak dollar than by a strong, since it would make U.S. exports cheaper in foreign markets.

Last year's U.S. trade deficit reached a near-record $3-billion—solely because U.S. imports of oil cost nearly $25-billion vs. about $8-billion in 1973.

In volume terms though, U.S. exports rose eight per cent while imports increased by a mere one per cent.

The U.S. government's policy of "benign neglect" of the dollar has been drawing increasing criticism from both U.S. and foreign monetary experts.

Throughout the last six years the Nixon and Ford administrations have led U.S. economic policy through a series of twists and turns, hoping to find something that might work—but, all the while, loftily ignoring what the marketplace was saying about the value of the dollar.

(Since the last major realignment of world currencies in December, 1971, the U.S. dollar has fallen 8.3 per cent against a weighted average of 14 major currencies).

In contrast Switzerland has never hesitated to take whatever steps are deemed necessary to protect and enhance the value of the franc—as, for example, its recent action in tightening the negative interest rates on foreigners' bank deposits in Switzerland.

As a result of this positive approach the Swiss franc has gone from strength to strength, gaining more than 50 per cent against the dollar.

In this as in some other areas, the rest of us could profit from the Swiss example.

Ruling on Child Custody

Kitchener— Waterloo Record

A decision by the Ontario Court of Appeal, in a child custody case, reflects a remarkable change in public attitudes in recent years. The legal contest was of that always regrettable kind in which separated parents appear as adversaries in court, each seeking to keep the children. In this instance a 10-year-old and a six-year-old were the rope in a legal tug-of-war.

They have been and are with their mother. The father's case, essentially, was that the mother is living in a common-law relationship with another man and therefore is not a fit and proper person to have custody of the children. Not very many years ago all the father would have had to do was adduce the evidence to prove his point and his case would be won.

Not so in the eyes of a three-judge panel consisting of Mr. Justices J.D. Arnup, W.J. Estey and W.F. Schroeder. They found, in a written judgement, that in the house-hold consisting of mother, quasi-stepfather and children, "The conditions of the home, apart from the unmarried status of the two adults, were comfortable and apparently happy." The fact of an adulterous relationship did not weigh heavily enough to offset what appeared to be good living conditions for the children.

The fact that it was a decision on appeal implies that there had been a previous trial. A lower court, had found in favor of the father, but that decision is now reversed. The higher court attaches less importance to conventional morality and more to the realities of the situation.

The disquieting fact is the date of the first trial. The original decision was on Oct. 30, 1973. For 15 months the law's slow process has kept two children in doubt about where they belong.

Problems of Finding Job Locally

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In the article, "Bemis Confident Work Available for Jobless", Mr. Bemis says he is very concerned for the Northern Electric employees who have been laid off.

Also in the article, is a short paragraph saying that the companies of S.A. Armstrong and Poli-Twine have begun hiring. I am presuming that it also means that they should be accepting applicants.

Well, today, Jan. 29, I went to both of these companies seeking employment or at least to fill an application for future work, I am not an ex-Northern Electric employee but I am looking for work and both these companies refused to let me fill out an application, using the phrase "Sorry, but we have a full staff and our files for future applicants are more than full." "Also we are not hiring." I also have had at least fifteen similar responses from other companies in the Belleville area.

Mr. Bemis says that Belleville has experienced "a strong industrial growth," which he feels "will take up the slack."

I am part of the so-called "slack" unemployed, and to be denied even the chance to fill out an application for a job makes me wonder if the industries here care for the unemployed or for that matter, if Mr. Bemis knows what he is talking about.

I wonder how he would feel if the situation was reversed.

Fewer Opportunities for Girls

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

With regard to the editorial entitled "Girls and Sports" I have to agree 100 per cent with the statement that there should be more effort towards participation in women's sports.

However, the rules, which are made up by men, for some sports make things quite unfair; this discourages participation by the girls.

Take for instance the rules governing age groups in track and field. In the boys' category there are four different age groups, while in the girls' category, there are only three. As well, the longest race for the girls is only 1500 metres which is less than one mile, while the boys have 3000 metres. Also the girls have no age groups at all in the 1500 metre which means a 14-year-old would have to compete against a 19-year-old.

One more point about track and field is the variety of events available in some track meets. In the indoor track meet to be held in Hamilton March 1, there are 14 different races for the boys to choose from while the girls only have four races they can enter.

Maybe if the men out there who set these rules and standards could find it in their hearts to give the girls an equal opportunity, then maybe more girls would go out and participate in different sport.

Doomsday Before Ice-Age?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Reference the second portion of your editorial. While I agree with you that an ice-age isn't the thing that the world's erratic weather heralds, I do not think it is a subject that should be treated with levity.

The world's scientists have mis-read the signs that they see because they do not understand the full story of Earth's development. The new lease on life, granted Earth by the holocaust that caused the flood, is running out and the erratic weather of recent years portends this.

An ice-age isn't the heralded thing but the Earth's demise is, there will not be another ice-age but we will have an increase in floods, droughts, and wind storms which will eventually destroy Earth and all life upon it.

Public Support for Forces Bands

The following is the text of a letter addressed to Hastings MP Jack Ellis:

The Veterans of Belleville Council at their last regular meeting passed a motion that a letter be sent to you expressing their concern and objection at the recent announcement by the Minister of National Defense to phase out several military bands and in particular the Air Transport Command Band based at Kingston, Ontario.

The contribution made by military bands to the morale of the Canadian Armed Forces stationed throughout the world, whether in times of war or peace, are immeasurable.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on Sunday, August 13, 1972, performed a trooping the color ceremony before thousands of spectators in Peterborough, Ontario. Without the assistance of the Air Transport Command Band, under the director of music Captain Kenneth Moore, this ceremony could not have been held.

The cultural needs of Canada could be further enhanced if the authorities reverse their decision and retain the Air Transport Command Band.

We request that you express your concern on behalf of the veterans of Belleville when this matter is brought before the House.

Administrator's $1,000 Raise

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In reply to Mr. Clarence Young's letter in which he stated that The Hastings County Board of Education had been irresponsible in granting the Director of Education, Eric Runacres, an increase of $5,000 a year, I would like to point out that the actual increase was not $5,000 but $1,000. This was arrived at by responsible action by the Board in consultation with the Director, Mr. Runacres.

I think that if Mr. Young is to be of service to the public, he should first of all get his facts correct.

DON R. WILLIAMS,
Past Chairman,
The Hastings County Board of Education.

Lena Never Felt Glamorous

NEW YORK (AP) — "When I stand out there," said singer Lena Horne, "I think that I'm a black Mae West, a real 1890s madam singing up there, going out to entertain in my own saloon.

"I love it; it's funny and ridiculous and fun."

To rave reviews, Lena Horne appeared on Broadway last fall with Tony Bennett, singing Stormy Weather and other old and new favorites. The producers are negotiating to take the limited-engagement special to Los Angeles.

People stop Miss Horne on the street to tell her she looks 35—she's 57—to say they thought she was taller than her slim 5-feet-5 and to ask for autographs.

Critics have always praised Miss Horne for her beauty as well as her voice.

"I never really understood why they thought I was glamorous," Miss Horne said. "I used to read that about myself, knowing what I was really like, and laugh. But I gather I'm not the only woman who has felt like that in this business. Do you suppose Marilyn Monroe really thought she was as sexy as people said?"

Born in Brooklyn, Miss Horne was sent south when she was 3 and her parents divorced. She lived first with this, then that relative. She recalled fearing to love anyone too much, knowing she'd soon be sent to live with somebody else.

At 14, Miss Horne rejoined her mother and spent two years in high school. Then her mother became ill and, at 16, she found a job at the Cotton Club in the chorus of fan dancers.

"I was a bad dancer and I only learned to sing later in life."

She went on tour singing with Noble Sissle's band, then retired, still a teen-ager, to marry Pittsburgh printer Louis Jones and have two children.

Divorced, she was hired by bandleader Charlie Barnet to sing. She went to California to be in a review written by Duke Ellington to open a new theatre. The Second World War came along and the new theatre was never finished.

She played a cabaret "as big as a postage stamp," was spotted by a movie talent scout and signed to a long-term contract.

Her training got a boost with her marriage to Lennie [illegible], a conductor and arranger at MGM and winner of three Oscars.

"Singing in nightclubs wasn't so bad when my husband was with me," she said. "He was always my conductor and arranger; we worked together for 30-odd years." Hayton died in 1971.

"Now I like an interaction of feeling with an audience. It must have happened to me personally, in my head. I didn't sing for about five years and when I started back in the middle '60s, I opened myself up to audiences.

"I wasn't ever trying to have an aloof image; I was very private as a person. I'm singing better now, too."

Mongrel Gets Part In Touring Play

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — A mongrel dog which spent most of its two or three years rummaging among garbage pails in Kitchener, Ont., is going on a national tour with the Stratford Festival company next week, living like a stage star.

The dog will play the part of Crab, the pampered pet in Shakespeare's Two Gentlemen of Verona, which opens in Winnipeg on Monday for a tour of the western provinces, and plays in Montreal before settling into the Avon Theatre here for the summer festival's run.

In Shakespeare's play, the dog has an important role as the clownish servant Launce's devoted friend and often the object of Launce's tongue-lashing. The difficulty was to find a dog to play the role.

Robin Phillips, new artistic director of the Stratford Festival, auditioned animals for the part. But none of the stage and stunt-trained dogs he saw filled the role as well as the mongrel stray found in the kennels of the Kitchener Humane Society.

So the dog, mostly black and white, short-haired and somewhat dishevelled in appearance, became Crab, and was handed over to his new stage master, Eric Donkin, who plays Launce.

Phillips immediately laid down the rules for other members of the Stratford company. Nobody but Donkin was to feed or pet him, or even recognize his presence.

Crab had only a few weeks to learn to be totally devoted to Donkin, and ignore the strange antics of other actors around him—as well as to learn to ignore the audiences once the production got on stage.

A spokesman for the company said Crab has not had to be trained to do tricks on stage, except to follow commands of "stay," and "sit."

"Mostly, he has to follow Launce around and pay attention when he is being addressed directly, which is frequently because Shakespeare has Launce talking to his dog as often as to other characters in the play."

Mr. and Mrs. John Timothy Denton

Denton — Cleland

Donna Frances Cleland became the wife of John Timothy Denton in a December service at St. Thomas Anglican Church, performed by Rev. Peter Tett.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Johnson of Ottawa and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Denton.

The bride wore a gown of pale yellow chiffon and white lace; with a cap of matching chiffon and white lily of the valley. She carried a bouquet of yellow and rust mums and white daisies.

Betty Campbell of Brighton was matron of honor in a dark brown gown with a white and yellow floral pattern. Her bouquet was yellow daisies and mums.

Philip Earnshaw of Toronto served as best man. The ushers were the groom's brother Scott Denton and Steven Muckle of Toronto.

A reception at the home of the groom's parents followed the ceremony.

After a honeymoon to London, England, the newly-married couple live at 12 Cedar Street.

A NATION'S TREASURE: MEMORIES

"Let us gather from the great wealth of the past, treasure imperishable." — Dr. W. K. Burr.

Not only did the late Wesley Kenton Burr, M.A., PH.D., (1843-1930) of Prince Edward County believe memories of people (pioneers in particular) are a nation's cherished heritage, he faithfully rescued, gathered and preserved them.

Possessor of an excellent memory, a fine education, he was well qualified to do so. He helped found the Prince Edward Historical Society and provided leadership in the care of the county's cemeteries, the source of precious records. The cemetery at Burrs and the old U.E. Loyalist Burying Ground at Burrs are exemplary memorials to his efforts.

Later he made scrap-books of the country's people and events, "for each of his children, each grandchild and each great-grandchild" from which his grandson Ross and his wife Allene have lovingly compiled an important and most interesting book.

It is entitled "Historical Sketches of Prince Edward County" by Dr. W. K. Burr. Published by the Picton Publishing Company. 364 pages. Price $12.50. Local book-stores report copies do not remain long on their shelves.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr have thoughtfully arranged Dr. Burr's work in four categories for easy classification: Reminscences, Families, Lives that have Counted and Cemeteries and Churches.

To the question, "Shall we forget those who triumphed over obstacles which seemed almost too great to face, too hard to be endured?" Dr. Burr answered "No!" He delved into family biographies and records with vigor, interest, insight, concern and compassion. He made the past, the pioneers, seem alive again.

As does Gillian Demorest, who, in 1790, came to Prince Edward County, bought land and began building operations. First a cabin, then mills: three grist mills, a saw mill, a chalk mill, a linseed-oil mill and a lath mill.

Thus began the village named Demorestville, where more business was transacted than in the village of Hallowell (Picton).

With an addition of six general stores, four taverns, two schools and three churches, Demorestville was a thriving community when Meyers Creek (now Belleville) was a "small insignificant village."

As for education, schoolmasters taught older boys and girls during winter months in log school-houses. Schoolmistresses instructed younger children in them during summer months. The teachers boarded from house to house.

One teacher, Miss Latchford, who was entertaining and her company much enjoyed, was often at his mother's, Dr. Burr remembered. One day, at dinner, when urged to take a second helping, she replied:

"I thank your generosity,
I have eaten a multiplicity,
It went down with such relaxity.
I can't eat any more.".

"These are memories which never die," said r. Burr.

Speaking of religion, from early childhood, Dr. Burr took a lively interest in the horse-back riding, itinerant, white-tie, ministers of the Gospel. When in his eighties he said, "I see them now as I saw them in 1846."

For the early pioneers, he said, "Religion was most beautiful and attractive. There was a divinity about it which tended to shape the destiny; a holy fragrance which lingered around the sacred spot where they gathered together ...

"Socially, through the week they were like one brotherhood — kind, faithful, obliging. Their homes were always open. Their orchards and gardens were ever free, and their abundance was distributed with out-stretched hands to those who lacked.

"They truly rejoiced with those who rejoiced, and wept with those who wept."

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr of Belleville, place a valuable gift in the hands of all readers of "Historical Sketches of Prince Edward County", and are to be warmly congratulated.

Must Comply

CAMBERRA, Australia (AP) — Foreign Minister Donald Willesee is asking diplomatic missions in Australia to pay local wage scales to their household help and comply with regulations on working conditions. He said he made the appeal after learning that a Filipino maid was being paid only $28 for a 70-hour week at the British consulate-general in Melbourne. The standard rate for housemaids is about $85.

Still Swingers

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Trapezist Raul Valdez and balancing-act performer Eva Zvitaoi preceded a three-ring show by getting married in a double-ring ceremony, then proved they were still swingers by doing a trapeze act for the reception guests. Both are 27.

Doris Clark

Death with Dignity Sought

Dear Doris: I remembered reading in your column about the group that wanted dignified death. A death without using tubes and machines to keep alive, by artificial means, a body where there was no longer any real consciousness.

Could you please send me any information about this?
Vickie.

Dear Vickie: There was indeed a form made up, by someone who thought he had a bright idea, expressing the wishes of the person who signed the form. It was called a Living Will, because it had to do with the wishes of a person while still alive, about whether or not he should be kept that way when there was no hope for him and when he was no longer able to enjoy life — in any sense whatever.

It gave the medical authorities permission to refrain from using the various modern means of keeping a heart beating, circulation going and nourishment being fed into the veins. The action (or lack of it) should be taken in cases of terminal illness in its last stages.

The general idea was, that while our meical fraternity are more than anxious to keep people alive, there are times when this is not even kind or dignifid. There ar times when a person would rather be allowed to slip away into unconsciousness, coma and death.

Some thought was also given to desirability of death at home in one's own bed, when the hospital can serve no further purpose.

There is nothing really legal or binding about this form. It is merely a statement of the wish of the person who signed it. But there are times when it mights have some influence or relatives and medical practitioners.

There is a big question here, which keeps it from seeming to us to be entirely practical, and that is this: "Who is to really say when such measures should be taken? Who is to know for sure that a very sick person is not going to rally, or have a remission of his illness?" Most people feel that they want to keep their loved ones with them as long as they can.

The time when I think such suggestions are valid, are related to long and painful (and definitely terminal) illness of elderly people.

Dear Doris: I've written twice before and you were able to help so I need help again — this time it is about the words of a song.

I need to have these words very badly and maybe one of your readers might be able to supply them. It is not an old song: The name of it is "The French Song"; there was a record of it done by Lucille Star but I can't seem to get the record or music of it The song was sung in both French and English and I so want the English words.
M.N.

Dear M.N: Songs are not as likely to materialize as poems — but maybe someone has it. Have you made enquiries of all the music and record shops in your area? The record stores should be able to at least check catalogues to find out if the record is still available. It is when we are really stuck that we appeal to readers. How about it, readers?

Dear Doris: I received information on how and where to donate your body organs after you die, somehow the address was mislaid. Could you please print the address to write to get the applications or forms for donations?
Interested.

Dear Interested: There is no one address— you are doubtless informed right now about the location of the nearest university to you which has a faculty of medicine. Most medical schools are glad of such generous gestures. Most of them know what their own needs are, so the thing to do is to write to the Professor of Anatomy of the Medical School you choose.

He will send you the necessary forms and, of course, you will need to let your nearest and dearest know what your intentions are.

Women's Publishing House Survives

TORONTO (CP) — Traditional Canadian publishing houses "don't give a damn about women writers" says a co-founder of Canadian Women's Educational Press.

Sandra Foster, who with a group of about 18 other women formed the collective, non-profit publishing house two years ago, said in an interview that other publishers regard her group as a "special issue and one that has survived the fad of women's liberation."

When she and her colleagues attend meetings of the Independent Publishers Association, she said they still feel, even after successfully marketing 10 books, they are being ignored.

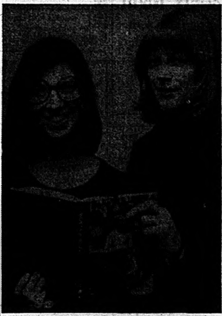
Besides publishing books about the women's movement by Canadian women writers, the collective is in the second and third printings of four non-sexist children's publications.

Since its first book, Women Unite! was produced in 1972, the group has turned out booklets on day-care; a bibliography of the writing of Canadian women and most recently a collection of interviews with Cuban women entitled Cuban Women Now, by Margaret Randall.

"We felt that by publishing this look at Cuban women, Canadians would see the intimate interrelationship of social and political change," said Ms. Foster. For Cuban women, the roots of liberation did not lie in legislation for equal rights, protective labor or paid housework but in overcoming the social and economic conditions surrounding them."

Another staff member Liz Martin said the press work is handled by a commercial company but the typesetting, layout and design are done by the group.

They operate from the third floor of a large house in downtown Toronto. To keep costs down, they have organized their own distribution lists and do their own packing, shipping and selling.



LIZ MARTIN, SANDRA FOSTER

Distribution is difficult, said Ms. Foster, "because many established book dealers don't give us the promotion we need and fail to take us seriously."

Getting books such as Never Done, a history of the struggles of the Canadian pioneer women, into schools has been a matter of luck.

"If we have sympathetic women librarians and teachers on our side, such educational textbooks can do much to teach both male and female students about this side of history," she said.

The group has relied mainly on government grants to keep the operation going but the members said they would prefer to be self-sufficient.

"Publishing in Canada is in itself a very risky business," said Ms. Foster. "When we started out, we knew we couldn't turn a profit, in fact we didn't want to.

"Using the resources of other small publishing houses and printers who empathized with us, we learned a lot about how to run the business."

Just off the presses is the group's most ambitious project, a collection of essays entitled Women at Work—Ontario 1850 to 1930.

"History and political economy courses in school implied that women, alongside immigrants and the working class in general, had no role in Canadian history," said Ms. Foster.

"We concluded that the only way to stimulate research in this area was to do it ourselves."

Ann Landers

Addict's Daughter Should Report Dad

Dear Ann Landers: As the director of the North Carolina Drug Authority, I would like to comment on your advice to Addict's Daughter. The girl's father was a physician.

May I suggest what I believe to be a better answer to her question: "How can I help him?"

First: I would have pointed out to the girl that her father cannot legally prescribe drugs for non-existing patients and divert them to his own use.

Second: An addict is an addict regardless of his profession, education or social background. Addicts manipulate people for their own benefit and take greater advantage of their relatives and friends than of strangers.

Third: Addicts justify in their own minds their use of drugs. Almost without exception, they resist counsel and advice of any kind. I have seen very few habilitation on their own.

Fourth: I would have advised that daughter to report her father's drug problem to the State Board of Medical Examiners. This is a regulatory agency that has the authority to require a physician to submit to treatment and rehabilitation or have his license suspended or revoked.

Your column is widely read. In the interests of all physicians and other medical practitioners who may be drug-dependent, I solicit your support in asking their colleagues to bring the problem to the attention of the appropriate licensing boards when they have knowledge that the problem exists.

Past experience in North Carolina shows that a medical professional who is addicted to drugs and submits to treatment has a 90 per cent cure rate.—F.E. Epps, Raleigh, North Carolina

Dear Mr. Epps: Thanks for your viewpoint, which is an informed and authoritative one and well worth considering.

Personally, I doubt it will work in all cases. Moreover, that 90 per cent cure-rate, if accurate, is extraordinary.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter, who is a sophomore in college, has decided to quit after this term and go to work to put her fiancee through law school.

We are very fond of the young man. Lisa has been going with him for three years, but my husband and I are unhappy about her decision because we believe she is not being fair to herself. Lisa is an unusually bright young woman and was awarded a four-year scholarship. She insists she wants to get married in May and the only way this can be accomplished is if she goes to work and supports the two of them.

My husband has pointed out (to me, not her) that several couples who did it that way are now divorced. It seems the professional man often "outgrows" the wife who made it possible. Later he becomes attracted to a more sophisticated, better-educated woman and dumps the wife, who by that time is 10 years older and has no college education to fall back on. What is your opinion?—Mom and Dad

Dear M. and D.: The decision should be Lisa's, but she would be foolish not to consider all the possibilities. Stay out of it and hope for the best.

You Don't Have To Wait

Two things which are practiularly precious to me about spring are rain (not the kind we had this week, thanks) and the softness of an April breeze With an Aquafine Water Refiner from Moira Schuster, you don't need to stand out in an April rain to feel that soft wetness on your skin. You can have it everyday in your bath or shower, or in your wash. And winter's harshness won't take its toll in dry skin at your house either. So how can you lose? You can have an April day everyday with Aquafine. And don't forget Aquafine's safety features too for well or bay water. Call for your Aquafine water at 962-4504.

The Valentine Boutique

You may not know it, but Jean Smith is a personal friend of St. Valentine and as such she has secret information on what really makes a good Valentine gift. The gifts in her West Wind Boutique on Hwy 7 at Actinolite reflect his knowledge. So where are you going to find just the Valentine gift for him or her? Why, at Jean Smith's of course. And she has marvelous shopping hours for Valentine-seekers. She's open every day of the week. (She should get a pretty nice Valentine for that herself, shouldn't she?) For any gift occasion . . . shower, birthday, anniversary . . . Jean Smith's gifts can match any such occasion.

Free Home Demonstration

Gibbs and Son, the vacuum cleaner specialists at 37 Albion St. are very concerned that you know what to look for when you're shopping for a vacuum cleaner. Is it to do just rugs? Or floors too? Do you have a shag carpet? Do you have a dog or cat or both? These are all factors which should affect your choice of a vacuum cleaner and Gibbs and Son will be glad to help you make that choice a wise one. All you have to do is to call them at 968-5384 and they'll tell you what kind of vacuum cleaner you need and some of the best makes on the market which will fill that need. And they'll also be glad to come to your house and give you a demonstration of the fine vacuum cleaners which they sell too, under no obligation of course.

Renovations Completed

Hud Marcotte of Holiday Car and Truck Rentals, 11 Moira St. W., tells me his office renovations are now completed and he'd like to thank his customers for their patience during this period while he was making these changes. And he'd also like to tell his clients and potential clients of his heavy trucking equipment, that he can also arrange contacts for them with local independent drivers to get those loads where they are supposed to go and very quickly. He can also arrange the rental of any Chrysler car pertty quickly too. One easy phone call can get you on the road. Just call Holiday Car and Truck Rentals at 962-9114.

Doing A Better Job

You can expend a lot of energy cleaning, that's for sure. But if you don't have the proper and helpful products lending you a hand, you may well have wasted a good deal of your efforts. ServiceMaster at their retail outlet at 179 Pinnacle St. (at the rear) can help you out there with their extensive line of home care products that are designed to get the job done. ServiceMaster uses them in their own cleaning operations all over the world, so they have certainly been tried and tested. You also have some advantage in the expert advice you're going to get on the other side of the counter too. And they don't charge you for the advice, just for the ServiceMaster products. If it's cleanable, ServiceMaster can clean it . . . or they can help you do it better.

Carpet Bonanza Still Booming

Wrays' Carpet Bonanza is still booming at their store at 306 Front St. And you should get yourself down there and start making a few noises yourself and save some money on quality carpet in the process. Wrays carry the best in manufacturers and what you are getting on sale, is really 'on sale', not just something brought in for the occasion and not normally seen in the store. Wrays are proud of their carpet selection and equally proud of their carpet installers. This is not a job they farm out, but one performed by their own well-trained employees. So get in on the boom and go down to Wrays this weekend. Make some effort and save some money.

Just The Remedey Remedy

I've had the flu for a week now. I'm tired of it and I hope it's getting pretty tired of me too. If you've had it (and who hasn't), may I suggest a spiritual remedy which should take care of post flu and mid-winter doldrums? A visit to the Cameron Gallery, 1½ miles west of Rednersville on the Rednersville Rd. And, if you'd like to learn a bit more about Mrs. Cameron's talents and get a glimpse at your own too, there are still openings in her new classes at Loyalist College. The Pen and Ink classes are on Tuesday night from 6:30 to 8:30 and the Watercolor Class is from 8:30 to 10:30, also on Tuesday. So for a pick-me-up for any reason, visit the Cameron Gallery open on Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 9 pm. and during the week, by appointment. And start painting yourself!

Still Some Tickets

There are still some tickets left for Lighthouse coming to the Mad Mechanic and at the Four Seasons from Feb. 17 to Feb. 22 inclusive. And, though you undoubtedly figured it out for yourself, the tickets for Friday and Saturday nights are not $600 each as appeared in last week's column (Lighthouse is good but not that good!) but $6. each plus tax. The price of the tickets on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Saturday afternoon are $4 each (plus tax). And don't forget that Four Seasons Lighthouse special on a room and ticket combined . . . just $29.50 for a double room and all the great Four Seasons facilities at your fingertips. For room and ticket reservations, call 968-3411. If you want to see Lighthouse, you have to have a ticket. So get at it.

Murray Had Company

Murray Atkinson of Murray's Food Market on Front St. tells me he had visitors recently from the Food Prices Review Board and the Board of Health, both organizations which are there to protect consumers. Murray thinks this is a great thing because he feels groups such as these and himself have the same goal: a fair and better price for the consumer. He thought you might like to know that government agencies which you support are really on the job doing just what you'd expect them to do. And rest assured, Murray is going to keep up his part of the bargain too.

CP News Roundup

Bad Money Is Sold Italians

TORONTO (CP) — Counterfeit Italian money is being sold to members of the local Italian community planning trips to the homeland, Insp. Gordon Lennox of the Metropolitan Toronto police said Thursday.

The bogus lire notes, being sold on the street at a discount rate to persons known to be going to Italy, have been circulated in all denominations and are a good reproduction, he said.

"Some poor guy will get over there and discover he's got a pocketful of counterfeit money if he tries to buy something," Insp. Lennox said. "If it's passed over there, it's out of our reach . . . so we're trying to warn people now."

Phantom to Fly

HAMILTON (CP) — The Phantom Flyer apparently is to take to the sky again—Feb. 16.

Since last summer, the phantom and accomplices have stolen light airplanes from small airstrips and clubs in Ontario, abandoning them undamaged after a brief joy ride.

This week he called The Spectator and said the flight Feb. 16 will commemorate the birthday of the mother of Major Erich Hartmann—a German flying ace in the Second World War.

Rates Still Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The railways were still charging recent rail freight rate increases late Thursday even though they were ordered Wednesday to cancel the higher tariffs.

Miller Says Asbestos Firm Improvements Recommended

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller said Thursday he was not "minimizing the problem" of asbestos in the Canadian Johns-Manville Co. Ltd. plant in the Toronto area.

"My job is not to protect Johns-Manville . . . (it is) to protect both the men working in that plant and the people who live near that plant," he said.

In an exchange in the legislature with NDP leader Stephen Lewis, he disputed figures that showed 78 per cent of areas tested in the plant were unsafe due to high levels of asbestos dust.

Mr. Lewis told a committee of the legislature earlier this week that at least seven of about 500 plant workers had died of cancers in the last three years.

He also revealed government tests which he said showed only eight of 35 areas tested late last year were considered safe by health ministry recommended standards.

"Data I got on in-plant tests showed they were considerably better than the leader of the NDP had said," the health minister said Thursday. His most recent data showed "a number of the areas are showing considerable improvement."

However, a list of nine specific recommendations for improvements had been turned over to the ministry of labor for enforcement, Mr. Miller said.

Firm Seeks to Drop Use of Perilous Fibre

TORONTO (CP) — An official of Johns-Manville Co. Ltd. says the firm is working to end the use of South African asbestos which has been called dangerous to the health of nearby students and homeowners.

Tom Patterson, a public relations officer, said in an interview that the blue fibre asbestos accounts for between two and seven per cent of the asbestos used in such products as sewer pipe.

"We are still using it in small percentages, but we're attempting to reduce it and the eventual goal is elimination."

Mr. Patterson said blue asbestos is considered superior to the Canadian white asbestos "because it has a long fibre which is valuable in increasing the strength of cement mixtures."

Dr. Vern Tidley, acting director of the occupational health protection branch of the health ministry, said the firm has been aware for many years about the risk of using blue asbestos.

Public Relations Officers Get over $56,000 Annually

TORONTO (CP) — Pat Reid (L—Rainy River) called Thursday for explanations of Ontario government information showing ministry public relations officers earn in excess of $56,000 annually.

The chairman of the legislature's public accounts committee was referring in the house to information provided him last week which showed the government was spending upwards of $10.6 million on information and advertising services for its 26 ministries.

Mr. Reid, who asked the question May 16, also asked Eric Winkler, chairman of management board of cabinet, to justify how 145 public relations officers had failed to provide the answer sooner.

"Whatever they're doing, whatever they're being paid, they're worth it," Mr. Winkler said, but added he would look into the matter.

Earlier this week Mr. Reid said in an interview that the data given him was "nonsensical."

There were large discrepancies between the number of public relations officers employed by each ministry in the figures given him and the staff listings in the government telephone directory, he said.

Ministry budgets for information and advertising services also had little relation to amounts listed in 1973-74 records of public accounts statements.

The figures also failed to show spending on advertising for the ministry of industry and tourism and the budget for the citizen's inquiry branch, Mr. Reid said.

In addition to a $10.6 million total for all ministries, the figure showed Ontario Hydro spent more than $4 million on advertising and public relations.

Five Embassy Workers Listed as CIA Men

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP said Thursday that five employees of the U.S. Embassy or U.S. consulates in Canada are listed in a book called Who's Who in the CIA.

Perrin Beatty (PC—Wellington) said in an interview he wants to find out if the government investigates the background of employees in embassies.

He said the book may not be correct but added that it "strains my credulity" to hear that there is only one Central Intelligence Agency man in Canada—the liaison man in the embassy here—as the government has claimed.

Mr. Beatty made his statement a day after he sent a copy of a letter concerning apparent industrial espionage by the CIA to External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen.

An external affairs spokesman said Thursday that the letter, allegedly written in December by John C. Dougherty, a CIA officer, is being studied with a view to determining what, if any, action should be taken.

The letter asks American firms to engage in industrial espionage of civilian transportation systems in Britain, Canada, France, West Germany, Japan and the Soviet Union.

Mr. Beatty said it apparently seeks information on the Canadian short take-off and landing (STOL) aircraft and on other transportation projects, information that countries could regard as secret.

Mr. MacEachen has said in the past that department checks of news reports concerning the letter indicated that all that was sought was information that already was public. But answering questions in the Commons Thursday he undertook to make further studies.

U.S. Army Doctors Busy Beautifying Officers' Wives

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — United States military doctors are performing hundreds of sex appeal operations each year to provide bigger bosoms and wrinkle-free faces to army, navy and air force wives, a congressman said Wednesday.

Representative Les Aspin, a frequent critic of wasteful military spending, said servicemen were complaining that their health needs were neglected at a time when military doctors were glamorizing the wives of top brass.

The Wisconsin Democrat said that almost 800 operations were performed to enlarge busts and provide face lifts in 1973 by military surgeons.

He said the beautification operations represented about five per cent of all army, six per cent of all navy and nine per cent of all air force plastic surgery operations.

"This is an astonishingly high percentage considering that medical officers are in such short supply and that the basic health needs of our GIs are not being met," said Aspin who serves on the House armed services committee.

The operations were performed throughout the United States and in an army hospital in Lindstuhl, West Germany, he said.

He said the defence department told him that the number of beautification operations was increasing because of a decline in Vietnam casualties and because plastic surgeons in the military need other work to keep themselves occupied.

"It does seem strange that a side effect of the war's end is a boom in beautifying dependent wives at taxpayers' expense," Mr. Aspin said in a statement.

Cosmetic surgery cost civilians between $1,000 and $3,000, but wives of military personnel paid only $3 or $4 for meals each day in military hospitals, he said.

Aspin said statistics show there were more face lifts and more bust enlargements in hospitals where a large number of top officers were stationed.

Full Revision Of Municipal Act Is Urged

TORONTO (CP) — The province should write an updated version of the Municipal Act to bring the act into the 20th century, Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) said Thursday.

The act has been repeatedly amended but never rewritten, he said during discussion on second reading of Bill 182—yet another set of amendments to the act.

Untreated Syphilitics Given $37,500 Damages

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The U.S. attorney-general's office has given formal approval of an out-of-court settlement providing $37,500 for each man who went without treatment for syphilis as part of a government experiment.

More than 600 black men from Macon County, Ala., participated in the U.S. Public Health Service's Tuskegee study which began in 1932 and ended in 1972 when it was brought to light.

Details of the settlement were disclosed last December but were subject to approval from the U.S. attorney-general. Now that approval has been made, a Feb. 17 final hearing in the case has been cancelled.

Plaintiffs in the class action damage suit originally asked for $3 million each. Forty of the survivors of the experiment filed suit in U.S. District Court in 1973, seeking a total of $1.8 billion for the survivors and for the estates of the deceased men. About 100 of the 600 men still are alive.

The settlement calls for $37,500 for each syphilitic participant who still is alive and $15,000 for each non-syphilitic participant still alive. Also, $15,000 for the estate of each deceased syphilitic participant and $5,000 for the estate of each deceased non-syphilitic participant.

The experiment was conducted to test the effects of the disease on the human body.

Alleged Victim Testifies

Blow on Head Leaves Man Unable to Recall Incident

TORONTO (CP) — Delroy Carlton Tomlinson, 29 said Thursday that a blow to his head caused him to lose his memory and he had no recollection of an incident in which he was the alleged victim of a police beating.

Tomlinson told a royal commission on Metropolitan Toronto police practices that most of the material in statements he had given investigators for the police complaints bureau was based on assumptions.

The statements alleged that Tomlinson was beaten by several policemen after a chase along a city street on July 6, 1974.

Published reports of Tomlinson's allegations indicated that he was sideswiped by a police cruiser and that his car struck a pole.

It was also alleged that several policemen pushed the young Jamaican over the hood of his car, after handcuffing him, and severely beat him.

Tomlinson told the commission he could remember drinking the night in question, then going for a drive.

He remembered speeding, but couldn't say what speeds he reached.

"I don't have a recollection of what really happened," he told Mr. Justice Donald Morand of the Ontario Supreme Court of Ontario. "I'm so mixed up, you know, I can't really remember."

Earl Cherniak, commission counsel, produced copies of signed statements turned over to the complaints bureau and commission investigators, but was told the allegations they contained were based largely on what others had told the complainant.

Mr. Tomlinson said his first recollection was leaving hospital about 10 days after the incident. He said he was dizzy for days and weeks and that he was still bothered by continual headaches.

The hearing continues.

Guard Says Blows Struck in Defence

TORONTO (CP) — James Brown, a guard at the Toronto jail, has told the royal commission investigating allegations of guard brutality at the jail that he has struck up to 12 prisoners on separate occasions but only in self defence.

Mr. Brown, a jail employee for four years, said Thursday he has hit prisoners as often as necessary—about two or three times a year—but denied allegations he helped assault a number of prisoners during a disturbance last April.

The guard recalled one incident last year in which a prisoner "went snaky . . . went uncontrollable."

"He started punching me," Mr. Brown said. "I struck him . . . to defend myself."

Mr. Brown said that after the prisoner was manacled and placed in solitary confinement, a report was written indicating that "force was used in the minimum."

Gary Dassy, a former Toronto jail guard whose allegations brought about the hearings, earlier testified he saw Mr. Brown punch and kick two teen-age prisoners who were causing trouble.

Mr. Dassy said one prisoner was pushed down a flight of stairs and was pushed or fell down a second as he was taken to solitary confinement.

On Thursday, Mr. Brown denied the allegations and said that "I wasn't even there."

Donald McKay, 53, a guard, displayed the middle finger of his left hand which is missing the tip. Mr. McKay said the finger—bitten by a prisoner—has become rigid and may have to be amputated.

Mr. McKay said he received the injury last February when he was helping guards push the struggling prisoner into a solitary-confinement cell.

The prisoner, he said, got the finger into his mouth and "he chewed on it for about two minutes before they got him off." Several other guards testified they also have been bitten by prisoners.

Illegal Immigrants May Find Jobs Lacking

OTTAWA (CP) — Illegal immigrants would be cut out of the job market by legislative changes now being considered, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Thursday.

All employers might be required to ask job applicants for "proper identification to establish whether they are here legally or illegally," Mr. Andras said outside the Commons.

"The law now provides that employers can only be prosecuted for knowingly employing an illegal immigrant."

However, employers currently are not required to check the citizenship status of job seekers.

Tax Bill Talk Drags

OTTAWA (CP) — One Conservative amendment to block the government's omnibus income tax bill was ruled out of order Thursday and another was introduced as Commons debate on the bill dragged through its seventh day.

Speaker James Jerome ruled inacceptable an amendment by Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) that proposed stopping the bill at second reading, but which also included approval for some of the tax cuts it proposes.

Mr. Jerome scarcely had made the ruling when another second-reading amendment, not often seen in the Commons, was introduced by Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham).

Mr. Lawrence's amendment, to be considered when debate on the subject resumes Monday, proposed that the bill be rejected on second reading because it does not provide a further five-per-cent personal income tax cut despite "unprecedented government revenues."

'Property Needs Work'

Hughs Says Goal Land Improvement

In his final statement as 1974 chairman of the Moira River Conservation Authority, before being re-elected for 1975, Guy Hughes stressed the need for continued development of the authority's conservation areas.

"Other than the O'Hara Mill and Vanderwater Park areas, we have property that needs work," he said. "Properties in Sheffield and in the Marlbank area come to mind."

Mr. Hughes also urged a continuing program of maintenance of authority property in 1975 and further attention to the Bend Bay dam project for water control in the watershed.

When re-elected, Mr. Hughes concluded a brief speech with the slogan: "Keep up the Drive in '75".

Re-elected Moira Conservation Authority chairman Guy Hughes, vice-chairman Harold Thompson.

Health Unit Predicts Sharp Cost Increases

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Operating costs for the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit will increase at least 30 percent and possibly 40 percent this year.

Health unit business administrator C.R. Cotton told The Intelligencer Thursday, staff enlargements and union contracts account for most of the increase.

The provincial government subsidies 75 per cent of the unit's cost with the remainder picked up by the four member mipicipalities, Belleville, Trenton, Hastings County and Prince Edward County.

The health unit budget has been submitted on for provincial approval which, Mr. Cotton said during an interview, is almost assured.

The budget calls for the additions of two public health inspectors, a dental hygienist, two public health nurses, two registered nurses and a nurse supervisor.

The budget recommends 35 to 40 percent wage increases for inspectors and 30-to 40-per cent increases for nursing staff.

Health unit staff received a 25 per cent pay increase in the last budget, said Mr. Cotton.

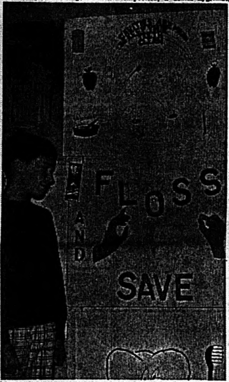
The budget for 1974 totalled $840,000 — a figure which will reach "close to $1 million this year," said the administrator.

Mr. Cotton said he has received "verbal" endorsement of the budget, though formal contracts have not yet been signed. "We've been told we need the extra staff — looks like it (budget) will be approved," he said.

Of the budget's 25 percent paid locally by the health unit participants, Belleville assumes 7.6 per cent. This percentage amounted to $82,000 in 1974.

Hastings County shoulders 9.88 per cent, Prince Edward County 4.4 percent and the remaining 3.09 per cent is paid by Trenton.

Mr. Cotton said the health unit at present is "understaffed." The situation worsened Thursday as board members learned public health inspectors now will be responsible for septic tank inspection and increased inspection of restaurants concerning food handling, said Mr. Cotton.



Top Poster Maker

Winner of the dental health poster contest, Allan Robinson, stands proudly by his first prize effort titled Floss and Save. An enthusiastic poster maker, Allan won second prize in a fire prevention poster contest held last autumn. The dental health poster contest was sponsored by the Hastings - Prince Edward Counties Health Unit to promote Dental Health Week February 2-8.

Member Status Beer Concern

Thurlow Township councillor George Beer was elected chairman of the Quinte Planning Board Thursday night replacing Trenton mayor Robert Patrick.

Councillor Beer, a long-time member of the board, said increased co-operation with other area planning bodies is a priority for the coming year.

His other priorities are "more board discussion of subjects which until now have been passed off as matters of local interest only," and "getting a final answer on the member status of Brighton, Brighton Township and Murray Township".

More than two years ago, the three municipalities on the board's western fringe, claimed Belleville was getting "the lion's share of planning" from board funds.

The controversy led to the three walking out of a meeting and refusing to return.

Since that time, the trio has remained on the board's member list because the province which set the board up in the first place has not authorized the removal of the three municipalities. Membership fees for the three continue to appear in planning board budgets as unpaid.

Mayor Commends Authority

Mayor Robin Jeffrey in a short address to the annual meeting of the Moira River Conservation Authorty Thursday, commended the authority on its accomplishments and said she was particularly pleased to note a sum had been set aside in the 1975 budget to begin a long-term plan for development of the recently acquired Potter Property.

"Also," the mayor said, "we look forward to working closely with the authority on bringing the two ice control dams within the city closer to reality."

Posters Full of Tips On Dental Hygiene

"Keep your teeth alive in '75" admonishes a big white tooth, beside a dancing toothbrush whose message is "Clean teeth are a big relief!"

Over 40 posters, submitted by Grade 5 students in Hastings and Prince Edward county public schools, hang in the upper gallery of Corby Library, recommending good habits for dental health.

A project of the Hasting-Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, the poster contest was held in conjunction with Dental Health Week, February 2-8.

Judging took place Wednesday and first prize of $25 was awarded to Allan Robinson, student at Prince Charles Public School in Belleville. Dee McLean of Batawa won second prize, and Darla Miller of Harmony Public School won third.

Publicizing dental hygiene techniques in the public schools was one dental hygiene techniques in the public schools was one of the goals of the poster contest. This new knowledge is reflected in the posters' information about the need for flossing teeth, preventing plaque, and keeping gums healthy.

Slogans for the contest posters, all created by the participating Grade 5 students, included such as: "Cavities are mean, so keep your teeth Clean!" and "don't let your teeth go to waste, brush with fluoride toothpaste.

The slogans are illustrated with ingenious drawings of marching molars, flashing smiles and deadly, evil decay. The posters will continue on display until Saturday evening.

College Classrooms Become Repair Shops

Loyalist College board of governors Thursday awarded an $80,220 contract to Dalton Engineering and Construction (1974) Ltd. of Toronto to convert part of the Lennox and Addington wing from classrooms to a motor vehicle repair shop.

Board chairman Wilf Wilkinson explained in an interview the present classroom portion was originally designed as a repair shop but the college has maintained a lease on a downtown building until it expires in June.

Reconstruction is scheduled for completion by the September enrolment. The Dalton firm is the company which built the college.

Commodores City's Centennial Band?

If a suggestion from two local musicians is accepted by the committee for the city's centennial year in 1978, residents are in for a year-long dose of musical nostalgia.

Stan Wiggins and Doug Aselstine, speaking for the renowned Commodores, propose that their band be named official dance orchestra for centennial year.

In a deatailed submission to city council, which was referred to the centennial committee, it was noted that The Commodores played their first date in 1928 and 1978 would mark the 50th anniversary of the group.

The band's first dance engagement opened the social season at the Bay of Quinte Country Club in May, 1928. The Belleville group was originally known as Tommy Mason and His Commodores. A few years later the late Bud Haines took over managership of the band and remained in that capacity for the next 30 years. The group is now booked and managed by saxophonist Jim Cathcart.

The depression of the 1930s saw the group playing for a variety of events ranging from card parties to ice cream socials.

During the Second World War and after, The Commodores played for a number of charity drives, donating services to Milk for Britain, the Kinsmen Club Fag Fund, IODE fund-raising dances, the opening drive to raise funds for the Kinsmen swimming pool and the addition to Belleville General Hospital.

With the post war change in musical tastes and dancing preferences, the smooth big band sound and the band's distinctive arrangements declined in popularity.

Today The Commodores play a nostalgic program, sparked by some currently popular tunes and can be heard at a dozen or more larger dances in the Belleville area during the year. Many of the original arrangements used as far back as 1942 are still in the band's book.

In the current version of The Commodores, some of the older members are musical director and arranger Larry Brown, John Mitchell, Jim Belair, Jim Cathcart and Stan Wiggins. Other musicians who played with the band in the lat 50s are Doug Aselstine, Bruce Parsons and Bill Campbell.

Authority Passes $1.5 Million Budget

The 1975 budget of the Moira River Conservation Authority approved at its Thursday annual meeting, is close to the one and one half-million dollar mark at $1,483,925. Water control projects, including ice control dams, account for $852,000.

Most of the total budget figure is accounted for by provincial grants, which total $1,106,800, but municipalities in the Moira watershed are also paying more for membership in the authority this year.

Belleville, for instance, will pay $39,690 this year, compared to $36,092 in 1974. Thurlow's levy is $7,394, up from $5,392 last year. Sidney's share is $3,326, increased from $2,300 in 1974.

Of the 17 municipalities represented on the authority, all but two will pay an increased levy this year. The two exceptions are Deloro and Richmond, which continue to pay a minimum $100.

Northern Earnings Up

Northern Electric Co. Ltd. reports sales in 1974 were close to the $1 billion mark, two years ahead of forecast.

The company has announced record consolidated sales last year of $970,711,000, and increase of 58 per cent over previous record 1973 sales high of $612,821,000.

Despite a loss of $8,405,000 on its microsystems operation, earnings per share were $2.05, compared with $1.35 in 1973.

Trustee Suggests Industry Inspection

John Donelan of Napanee, the Lennox and Addington County representative on the Loyalist College board of governors, called on fellow members to take more interest in industry in the four counties served by the college Thursday.

"We should be tuned to what is taking place in industry," he commented.

Citing Canada Cement La Farge Ltd. in Bath as an example, where employees were upgraded in skills through the college school of technology recently, Mr. Donelan noted, "you may profit to go down there and look at the type of industry in the area."

His suggestion was turned over to the board's management committee for study and later recommendation.

Dental Program Explained

The dental staff of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit will be increased this year to handle in-school fluoride treatment of elementary students. Here dental director Dennis Warwick explains the staff change to new health unit chairman Marmora Reeve J. R. Reeve and past chairman, city alderman Jean Smith.

New Centre Reduces Dropouts

The new technical resource centre in Loyalist College's school of technology has considerably decreased the number of college dropouts.

Ray Turner, school director, outlined the centre's operation to the college board of governors Thursday "where we are able to offer remedial work in mathematics, physics and other technical subjects".

He said the centre's implementation "has made it possible to save most of the students with weak mathematics whom we would have lost just two or three years ago".

"Most of the work is on a self-study basis, although a staff member is always available for personal consultation . . ." he noted.

Mr. Turner explained another aspect is the use of a "very sophisticated computer which can analyse the reasons for lack of proficiency in either Grade 12 or technology mathematics and give meaningful instruction accordingly."

This system will be expanded later this year, "to include electricity, chemistry and metric system orientation. . .," he announced.

In addition, the technology program has "no hard or fast boundaries between the different levels of a given discipline" commented Mr. Turner.

He said it is possible "for a three-year electronics student, finding himself in trouble in the first few weeks of the program, to transfer to the two-year program and carry on."

The controversial issue of an alleged lack of basic literary skill in the secondary school system rose to the forefront of discussion at the Loyalist College board of governors meeting Thursday.

Paul King, dean of faculty and academic services, told members the problem has been aleviated to a degree in the four-county area Loyalist serves because its high-schools have adopted some reading projects outside of the regular curricula.

Calling for a more rigid system in English instruction across Ontario, Mr. King explained the college literary problem is derived from outside the Quinte area where many first-year Loyalist students have received secondary education.

"Other areas may not have such a rigid system as we have here. . .," he noted.

Mr. King said there is "excellent co-operation" between the college and secondary school staff in devising reading projects, a difficult task with the freedom of choice high school students now enjoy in selecting subjects for required credits.

"It is difficult to enforce a rigid system," he commented.

He described the college's remedial reading program included in the timetable of each student deficient in basic literacy. So far the students have accepted the additional work without question, he added.

Mr. King pointed out most college textbooks are written above the secondary school level and unless a student is proficient in English, he will be unable to grasp sufficient understanding of his subject.

"We feel this (remedial reading) will affect the number of dropouts somewhat," he said. "There will be a lower attrition rate."

Cement Plant Workers Back in Classrooms

Two consecutive 10-week upgrading programs are currently under way in the Loyalist College school of technology for employees of Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. in Picton, to prepare them for new equipment installation in the plant later this year.

Ray Turner, school director, told the college board of governors Thursday the first program being operated at present will prepare workers "for the arrival of a new automated kiln. . ."

The programs follow two others successfully completed for both Canada Cement LaFarge Ltd. in Bath, and Northern Electric Co. Ltd. here.

Canada Cement employees were spared loss of jobs or grade levels through their upgrading. They "would otherwise have been overtaken by technological advance when the new automated and computerized cement plant at Bath came on stream, in place of the Point Anne operation," noted Mr. Turner.

Northern Electric's program was less extensive, said Mr. Turner. ". . . we have trained some of their technicians in modern digital techniques".

Cancer Seminar Set

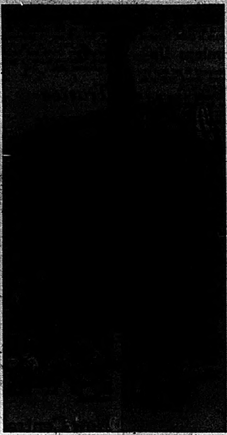
The Canadian Cancer Society, Belleville and District Unit invites the public to attend an education night Wednesday, Feb. 12 at their offices on 42 Bridge St. E. The program starts at 8 p.m. and consists of films and a question and answer period.

Donation Approved

A donation of $25 to the Salvation Army was authorized by Marmora and Lake Townships Council but another request from the St. John's Ambulance Society was turned down on the grounds they charge for their services.

Ready to Play

Some are missing, but many of The Commodores of the early 1950s are still around and musically active. They would like to be named official dance band for Belleville's 1978 centennial and have proposed a series of 13 dances throughout the year based on seasonal themes and events. Their suggestion has been forwarded by city council to the centennial committee for consideration.



Sylvia Burka

Speedskater May Return to Team

TORONTO (CP) — Speedskater Sylvia Burka may be returned to the national team in time for the women's world championships in the Netherlands, Feb. 22-23, says John Hurdis, president of the Canadian Amateur Speedskating Association.

Hurdis said Thursday he has called a meeting of the CASA executive in Red Deer, Alta., this weekend during the Canadian speedskating championships, and the directors at that time "could overrule the decision" earlier this week to drop Sylvia from the national team.

"I'm not saying this will happen, but it's possible," Hurdis added. He said he was having second thoughts about the wisdom of coach Jorrit (Jerry) Jorritsma's decision to drop Miss Burka and two other skaters, Gerry Cassan of Ottawa and Andrew Barron of Edmonton, from the squad.

The three were suspended for disciplinary reasons, according to officials. But Miss Burka said it resulted from a clash over philosphy of the training program expounded by the Dutch-born coach.

Hurdis, who said he was upset by reports the skaters were not allowed to give their version of the incident, said the three have been asked to attend the Red Deer meeting along with Doug Gordon of Winnipeg, international committee chairman.

Earlier, Bob Hodges, a former national team coach, said in Edmonton the decision to drop the players was unjust.

Can't Beat Nordiques

Aeros' Luck All Bad

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Things seem to go right for Quebec Nordiques when they play Houston Aeros.

Robert Guindon's goal with nine minutes remaining in the third period gave Quebec a 4-3 World Hockey Association victory over the Aeros Thursday night.

It was the third win in as many games for the Canadian Division leaders over Houston this season and Aeros coach Bill Dineen felt the referee and a bit of luck helped the Nordiques.

Houston missed a tie in the last two minutes when referee Ron Harris disallowed Andre Hinse's goal. Harris ruled that Quebec goalie Richard Brodeur had covered the puck in the crease long enough. He made the ruling with 1:30 left on the clock and the puck in the back of the goal.

"You could see from the bench that the puck was still loose in the crease," Dineen said. "He (Harris) was out of position on the play, too."

In other WHA games Thursday, Cleveland Crusaders blanked Baltimore Blades 4-0 and Minnesota Fighting Saints and San Diego Mariners tied 2-2.

The winning goal at Houston was a dribbler by Guindon at 10:41 of the final period.

Paul Popiel of the Aeros was draped all over Guindon as he came in on the left wing. Guindon got a weak backhand shot that went right through Houston goalie Wayne Rutledge's pads.

"The first (Quebec) goal was a wierd one, too," Dineen said. "Rutledge sort of swept it into the net when all those people got on top of him. They seem to get those kind. They beat us last year when they scored with nine seconds to go."

Both teams scored two goals in the first period and one each in the second. Gordie Howe and Jim Sherrit scored for the Aeros in the first period and Michel Parizeau and Chris Bordeleau scored for Quebec.

Ted Taylor scored for Houston in the second period and Bordeleau added his second for the Nordiques.

Mike Walton scored a short-handed goal for Minnesota midway in the third period and the Fighting Saints held on through the scoreless overtime for the tie at San Diego.

Walton had earlier been subjected to heckling from the fans, two of whom were ejected from the arena after dousing him with beer before his tying goal.

Wayne Rivers scored his 32nd goal of the season for the Mariners and Rick Sentes added the other San Diego goal. Mike McMahon had the other goal for Minnesota.

Russ Walker scored twice to lead Cleveland against the Blades who suffered their 10th consecutive loss and second consecutive scoreless game.

Coaches and Fans Blamed For Violence in Hockey

By JOHN SHORT
The Canadian Press

Some attempts have been made recently to reduce violence in hockey but spokesman for three Western Canadian leagues agree there is no way to predict what remedies—if any—will work.

Ed Chynoweth of Saskatoon, president of the Western Canada Hockey League (WCHL), lays most of the blame on coaches.

Ed Young of Saskatoon, president og the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League (SJHL), says players are influenced into using violence by the fans.

And Don Drummond of Red Deer, secretary-manager of the Alberta Junior Hockey League, says the way to control such violence is to impress upon the minor league players that fighting and stick swinging will not be tolerated.

Chynoweth said that in his league, 38 games in suspensions have been handed out to players and 29 games to coaches, "and that won't be allowed to continue."

"The coaches, managers and owners must realize the prosperity and popularity of our league is at stake."

Chynoweth fined Patty Ginnell, owner of Victoria Cougars, $1,000 last month for threatening to pull his team from the ice. Ginnell protested but paid up after Chynoweth instructed Kamloops Chiefs not to travel to Victoria for a scheduled game unless Ginnell obeyed the order.

But generally, Chynoweth is pleased with the conduct of his league.

"We haven't had a stick-swinging incident this year. We haven't had an all-out brawl in which both benches emptied.

Penalty totals in the WCHL are higher than in recent years, but Bob Strumm of Saskatoon, league statistician, says it's because almost every club has one or two players drawing the bulk of the minutes.

An example is Jerry Rollins of Winnipeg Clubs, who has 399 minutes in penalties with seven weeks remaining in the regular season. The record, set last season by Ted Olson of Edmonton Oil Kings, is 435 minutes.

Ginnell's Cougars, leaders in the Western Division, hold a big lead in penalties, with New Westminster second, Brandon Wheat Kings third and Kamloops Chiefs fourth.

"There's no doubt the B.C. faction is rougher than the Prairies," said Strumm. "The problem is that some coaches use a player just as a goon. If you could legislate that out of existence, you'd have much of the problem solved."

A spokesman in Ontario says the WCHL is far rougher than the top two eastern leagues, especially the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, where a rule imposing heavier penalties on aggressors has been rigidly enforced.

Tough rules also exist in the WCHL statutes but are not often called.

An Alberta Amateur Hockey Association rule calling for an automatic game misconduct to those involved in fights has received mixed reactions.

"I loved it at first," said Drummond. "Now I hate it."

The league has had several bench-clearing fracases in the last few weeks "but the threat of the game misconduct worked for a while."

In recent games, coach Doug Messier of the league-leading Spruce Grove Mets has been involved twice in scuffles with fans.

The Mets already have set a league record for team penalties and Tony Lecuyer has established an individual penalty record.

"Because the rule worked so well in the beginning, I'm convinced it's a matter of education," said Drummond. "I think players in minor hockey should be convinced it's a no-no to get involved in fights and the benefit would remain with them the rest of the way.

Young said many SJHL fans attand games in hopes of seeing a brawl.

"They go to the pub first and come to the game. If that's what they want to do and if they pay for their tickets, we can't control it, unless they get involved with the players."

As part of his league's crackdown, Young has insisted that referees impose a match penalty for butt-ending or spearing. Eight have been called this season "and most years we don't get more than one."

SJHL players who receive three misconduct penalties in the season are automatically suspended for one game. A player who receives five misconducts—"most of them are for lipping off at officials"—is sent to Young for disciplinary action.

McDonald's Strengthen Grip on First Place

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Gary Milroy's goal with 1:23 to play in the game gave Whitby McDonald's a 5-4 victory Thursday over Cambridge Hornets in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game scheduled.

Play resumes tonight with Napanee Comets in Orillia to meet the Terriers and Brantford Foresters playing host to Barrie Flyers.

With the victory, the McDonald's increased their third-place lead over Orillia to four points. They trail second-place Brantford by 10 points and front-running Barrie by 25.

Whitby took a 3-1 first-period lead, but trailed 3-2 entering the final 20 minutes.

Carl Ahlsten paced the McDonald's with two goals. Milroy, Wayne Weller and Peter Vipond added one each.

Don Vipond scored twice for the Hornets with Steve Ringler and Mike Doersam getting the others.

Not Same Old Bruins But Tough at Home

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins are proving virtually unbeatable at Boston Garden, but their critics are becoming more daring every day.

Centre Phil Esposito, needing just two points to reach the 100 mark in bidding for his sixth consecutive National Hockey League scoring championship, is a favorite target of hecklers.

Now, an opposing coach has come out with the statement that 26-year-old super star Bobby Orr is not the dominating force he once was for the Bruins.

Not Dominating Force?

Charlie Burns, an assistant coach who directed Minnesota in the absence of head coach Jack Gordon, made the assessment of Orr Thursday night after the Bruins continued their mastery at home over the North Stars with a 3-2 victory before 13,858 fans.

"I don't think teams come here with the fear of God any more," said Burns, a long-time NHL player. "I think they feel they're capable of doing things here. I don't think Boston is as feared as it used to be.

"Orr is not the Orr of old. His knees won't let him be. He used to own the game. He still does to a certain extent, but he used to be up and down the ice all night. Now he just seems to pick his spots."

In other NHL games Thursday, New York Rangers beat Philadelphia Flyers 3-1 in a penalty-filled match while Kansas City Scouts defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 and New York Islanders tied Buffalo Sabres 2-2.

Despite Burns' assessment, Orr provided a good show. He set up Bobby Schmautz for the first goal 52 seconds after the opening faceoff. Then, with Minnesota in front 2-1 late in the second period, he stole the puck to help Don Marcotte score his 23rd goal of the season. Greg Sheppard got the winning goal in the third period.

While the Bruins were increasing their home-ice record to 17-0-4 over Minnesota since the North Stars joined the league in 1967, Esposito was blanked. He was a key target of harsh remarks and heckles by some fans.

"I feel so sorry for Phil Esposito," said Bruins coach Don Cherry.

"My heart bleeds for him They're on him continually. It's a damn shame. It's very discouraging."

Target of Hecklers

At Philadelphia, Brad Park broke a 19-game personal scoring slump to score for the Rangers in the third period, breaking a 1-1 tie and Jerry Butler added an insurance score.

The first period took an hour and two minutes to play while referee Wally Harris was busy sorting out the fights. Harris ended up assessing 22 penalties for a total of 94 minutes. The Rangers were assessed 49 minutes and the Flyers 45.

Included among the first-period penalties were three game misconducts, five fighting majors, a pair of double minors and one for playing with a broken stick.

The Flyers' Dave Schultz and Reggie Leach and New York's Steve Vickers were ejected from the game. Schultz faces a one-game suspension if NHL president Clarence Campbell follows up his threat to suspend him one game for every time he incurs a game misconduct.

Schultz was ejected for being the third man in during a fight between team-mate Bob Kelly and Ted Irvine of the Rangers.

Campbell issued his warning to Schultz Dec. 13 after the Philadelphia player was thrown out of a game at Atlanta. This was his fourth game misconduct of the season.

The game at Uniondale, N.Y., was also delayed by three scraps. In the second period, Buffalo's Rene Robert and J. P. Parise of the Islanders were handed double minor penalties and Danny Gare of the Sabres and New York's Garry Howatt served majors after their bout. Islander Bob Nyrstom and Sabres defenceman Jim Schoenfeld received double minors for their third-period scrap.

Parise scored the tying goal on a pass from Bob Stewart late in the third period.

Simon Nolet, Dave Hudson and Gary Coalter scored within a seven-minute span of the second period to lead the Scouts against Toronto.

Petes Crushed By Greyhounds

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds scored six unanswered goals in the first period Thursday and then coasted to an 11-2 victory over Peterborough Petes in the only Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game scheduled.

League play resumes tonight with five games. The Petes are in Sudbury to play the Wolves, Oshawa Generals meet the '67s in Ottawa, Hamilton Fincups entertain St. Catharines Black Hawks; Toronto Marlboros tangle with the Rangers in play host to Kingston Canadians.

Paul Woods, Gary Gill and Ed Smith each scored twice for the Greyhounds, with single goals going to Randy Borbely, Doug Patey, Bruce O'Grady, Cary Farelli and Roman Carlucci.

Gary Purdon and Brad Pirie replied for Peterborough, outshot 42-27.

Eagles' Wins at Home Few and Far Between

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Syracuse Eagles won their first home game in almost a month Thursday night when they edged Richmond Robins 5-4 in an American Hockey League game.

A crowd of 1,552 saw five players share the scoring for the Eagles, who won their first home game since Jan. 12 and their first home game ever under John Hanna, who was appointed coach late last month.

Cal Swenson and Al Rycroft gave the Eagles a 2-0 lead in the first period. Jean-Rene Losier, Ron Dussiaume and Dick Sarrazin were other Syracuse scorers.

Bob Sirois, Andre Peloffy, Doug Ferguson and Ron Anderson scored for Richmond.

In Thursday's only other AHL game, Louis Chiasson scored two goals to lead Nova Scotia Voyageurs to a 4-1 win over Rochester Americans.

The win put Nova Scotia five points behind first-place Providence Reds and three points ahead of Rochester.

Other Nova Scotia goals were scored by Don Howse and Ron Busniuk. Dave Haynes scored for Rochester.

Chiasson's opened the scoring at 4:48 of the first period. It was a gift goal from Dunc Rousseau of Rochester, who laid a perfect pass onto his opponent's stick while trying to clear the puck from behind his own net.

He scored his second goal at 1:02 of the second period after the Voyageurs fired several shots at Rochester goalie Dave Reece.

Tonight's schedule has Hershey Bears at Springfield Kings, Nova Scotia at Providence and New Haven Nighthawks at Rochester.

Goal No. 20 for Hunter In Reid's QHL Victory

Moe Hunter scored once and added two assists to jump into first place in the Quinte Hockey League scoring race Thursday night. Hunter's points came in Reid's 6-1 victory over Belvedere. His total now stands at 33 based on 20 goals and 13 assists in 17 games.

Rick Rosebush of Stinson has the same points total as Hunter, but has 13 goals and 20 assists. Hunter's goal total gives him first place.

Hunter's teammates, Ralph Plane and Carl Boomhower, each picked up a goal and two assists to move into third and fourth place in the scoring race, respectively. Bob Boyle tallied once and drew one assist to take sole possession of seventh place. Jerry Lucas scored the other two Reid's Dairy goals.

Jason Morris scored the only goal for Belvedere Hotel. Ted Waite, the league's fifth highest scorer drew an assist on the goal.

Reid's goaltending duo of Warner Hay and Jerry Bull have accumulated the best goals against average. In 17 league games their average stands at 3.29.

The win kept Reid's one game out of first place behind Cornerstone Builders. The Builders have 23 points and Reid's have 21. Cornerstone defeated Stinson 3-1 in Thursday's other game.

Barry Pyear scored twice and Paul Paddon once for Cornerstone and Kevin Allen replied for Stinson. Norm Pope drew three helpers to bring his sixth place points total to 23.

Six Cats Missing

When the Belleville Bobcats take on the Markham Royals tonight in Markham, it could be a prelude of the opening round of the playoffs. Markham hasn't yet decided whether or not they want to play Belleville or Peterborough in the first round.

What the Royals will see tonight will not be the full force of the Bobcat lineup. They'll be missing six players.

Jim Richardson is expected to be out with a shoulder separation until the second round of the playoffs, Bruce Clark is out of the hospital, but is still suffering from dizzy spells, Bob Thompson has had severe headaches which coach Bob Boyle feels is the result of fisticuffs Thompson came to a week ago, Rick Langstaff will remain on the injury list for at least another month, Paul King is working in Kingston this weekend and Mike Watt is working shiftwork.

As a result, the local junior B's will travel with six players from the Shell juveniles. Roger Chapman and Wayne Clapp will pair up as defencemen, Mike Crawford, Gary Thompson and John Murphy will form a third line for the Cats and Don Thompson will go as the spare goaltender.

Expos Team to Watch

Representatives of Carling O'Keefe Breweries were much in evidence during th Tuesday visit by members of the Montreal Expos baseball organization who paused in the Bay of Quinte area while on tour.

But people like Gordon White, the brewery's regional sales manager from Peterborough, and Paul Ruttan of Stirling, the representative in this area, played down their presence in order that the players and others connected with the baseball club could hold forth, centre stage.

It wasn't difficult to get the impression players Hal Breeden, Larry Lintz, Larry Parrish and Pete MacKanin were less than thrilled with their part in the proceedings.

The caravan had made several stops in Quebec communities and the visit here was the first engagement on an Ontario tour which would see them in Toronto and Oshawa later in the week.

The same old baseball questions. The same rush here ... rush there. That kind of existence isn't likely to make a ball palyer think he's reached the pinnacle of success.

To their credit, Breeden, Lintz, Parrish and MacKanin managed to appear interested in what they were doing, at least while I was an observer.

They have my sympathy.

But to get to the Expos, and 1975, it should be a very interesting season.

And three of the reasons for that outlook were here Tuesday.

Lintz, given the opportunity to play regularly could be worth the price of admission himself.

In 57 attempts in 1974, the 5-foot-9, 140-pound speedster stole 50 bases.

The unassuming 25-year-old should be a cinch to nail down a starting job with Expos.

A switch-hitter with speed to burn, he'll keep Jarry Park fans and those in other National League parks on the edge of their seats each time he reaches base.

There's an interesting battle for third base shaping up. That's where Parrish and MacKanin come in.

Joining Expos, September 6, 1974, Parrish was at third base in 24 of the club's final 27 games. He was promoted from Quebec of the Eastern League.

So accomplished was the 22-year-old during his short stint with Expos, manager Gene Mauch observed: ... "we haven't had third base played like he played it ... if we did, I missed it."

And Parrish came to Expos as an outfielder.

He's a 190-pound, 6-foot-3 fielding whiz with the potential to hit well in the majors. He was an Eastern all-star with Quebec where he hit for a .284 average.

MacKanin is another big guy with his sights set on that third base position.

A 6-foot-2, 190-pound slugger, he had two outstanding seasons with Spokane Indians of the class AAA Pacific Coast League: Indians are a farm club of Texas Rangers.

Pete joined Expos in the off-season, along with pitcher Don Stanhouse in the deal which sent Willie Davis' contract to the Rangers.

MacKanin had brief trials with Rangers in 1973 and again in 1974.

He want to make it big with the Montreal club. And that's good news for Expos.

The future looks bright for Expos.

With the emphasis on youth and speed, the club is headed in the right direction.

Should Parrish or MacKanin come through (better they should both qualify), Tim Foli at shortstop, Lintz at second, and Breeden platooning with Mike Jorgenson at first base, the infield shapes up well defensively. They can all create some excitement at the plate as well. And when Lintz gets loose on those base paths ... look out.

A solid pitching staff, power and speed in the outfield and we're on our way.

Entry fee for adults is 1. There's no charge for the children.

Bob Saxby is the centre of attraction as he puts his 'John Henry' on paper at Thursday' night's meeting with Doug Adams (left) and Dale Duvall. Saxby purchased the name rights to the Ontario Fastball League franchise in Belleville. The team will be called the Belleville McDonald's. Saxby, general manager of the local restaurant, Adams, manager of the team, and Duvall, coach of the team, ironed out all the details of the contract Thursday night.

McDonald's Purchases Name Rights to OFL Franchise

By Mike Bradshaw

Dale Duvall and Doug Adams, the two young owners of the local Ontario Fastball League (OFL) franchise wanted to sell the team's name.

"We needed a break," chuckled Adams.

So he went where everyone gets a break, McDonald's Family Restaurant. Bob Saxby, general manager of the Belleville establishment, has purchased the rights to the team name. Now Belleville's OFL entry is known as the Belleville McDonald's.

"I am pleased with the whole turn of events," said Saxby. "I think it's a worthwhile investment because I'd like to let the out-of-town people in the league know that there is a McDonald's in Belleville."

Whenever there's a major sports function in the city, we always get an influx of people stopping at the restaurant," he said. "With all the people that will be coming to town from other OFL areas I think it will help our business."

For his investment in the team Saxby becomes one of its directors, but holds no financial onus.

"My money is primarily for the purchase of home and away uniforms and other sundry equipment," added Saxby.

Ownership and financial responsibilities remain in the hands of Duvall and Adams, but their expenses have been cut considerably through another form of financial assistance.

The Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund have guaranteed support to the team by picking up the tab for travelling expenses. The Yardmen are paying for all buses to out-of-town games.

The remaining expenses, Adams says, will be taken care of through gate receipts. All games will be played at the Alemite Park which seats about 600 people.

The Belleville McDonald's open their regular season on Saturday, May 17, with an 8:15 p.m. game against Woodstock. On Sunday the 18th, the McDonald's take on Kitchener in another home stand at the Alemite. This one is a double header that begins at 7:30 p.m.

Depending on sponsorships from various advertisers throughout the city, Adams hopes to have a souvenir program compiled for fans. The price and size of the program will depend entirely on the number of advertisers. Adams wants to have it together for the opening home game.

Exhibition home dates to remember for the McDonald's are May 4 against the Oshawa Tony's and May 11 against Newmarket.

Women Press For Equal Pay

NEW YORK (AP) — Professional women tennis players have voted overwhelmingly to reject unequal prize money for men and women players at Wimbledon and have threatened a walkout unless the All-England Club makes an adjustment.

The announcement came Thursday from Jerry Diamond, executive director of the Women's Tennis Association, and Billie Jean King, WTA president, from their headquarters in San Francisco.

If no satisfaction can be obtained, the statement said, the women are prepared to stage a tournament in competition to the Wimbledon event.

Earlier Thursday, Maj. David Mills, secretary of Wimbledon's governing All-England Club, said firmly: "The prize money has been settled and there will be no alteration."

Diamond and Mrs. King said in their statement that the current ratio of prize money is 10 to 7 in favor of the men.

Diamond said 84 women professionals were polled on options to take in case Wimbledon refuses purse parity.

Eighty per cent voted not to play unless prize money adjustments were made now or equality gained on a graduated scale over the next few years," he added. "Only about one of three said she would play but this group included lesser players."

Pinch Being Felt, Slow Start Hurts

By TED WELCH
THE CANADIAN PRESS

For most Ontario winter tourist operators, the winter looks long, but not profitable, as warm temperatures, sunny skies and little snow indicate a lack of business.

"It's a lost year," says Gerald Creber, owner of Casey's fish huts on the south shore of Lake Simcoe. "There's no way to make it up."

Ice fishing there began about two weeks ago, three weeks later than usual. Mr. Creber usually has about 240 fishermen on an average weekend and says that compared with last year, conditions are poor.

Allan's fish huts at Shanty Bay, just north of Barrie, also started late this year—it usually starts near the first of January—but Mrs. F. E. Allan says she has no complaints now.

"We have the same expenses whether we operate two weeks or two months. But the weather is clear and cold now. I'm happy."

The average temperature in December was 34.2 degrees, about five degrees warmer than usual. It was the fourth consecutive year Ontario has had mild weather.

Snowmobile trail operators plagued in December by warm breezes and rain, have established firm trails and business is getting better.

A spokesman for the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve Ltd., about 60 miles north of Haliburton, says conditions at the 100-square-mile facility with its 150 miles of trails have been good all year.

A spokesman for the Ontario ministry of natural resources says its two 15-mile trails, about 10 miles west of Orillia near Coldwater, thawed out considerably this year but are now in good condition.

And "quite good" conditions on the 200 miles of snowmobile trails in the Parry Sound district, where the season usually starts in early January, were reported by a ministry spokesman.

"The season is a little slow starting. But we got 17 inches of snow a week ago . . . We're still having problems with the lake trails."

Business at ski resorts down by about 30 to 40 per cent overall says Ray Atkinson, general manager of the Ontario Ski Resort Association in Barrie.

In some areas, where colder temperatures have allowed snow-making machines to operate and there has been natural snow, operators are experiencing record years, he says. But in other areas, business has been cut in half.

Resorts in the Collingwood area, about 30 miles northwest of Barrie, have been making artificial snow and are in good shape. The hardest-hit resorts are those closest to Metropolitan Toronto, he said.

Defenceman Rejoins Whitby Senior Team

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Bill Murray, who jumped his contract with Whitby McDonalds to join a semi-pro team, has rejoined the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A club.

Murray had been blocked from moving to Des Moines of the International Hockey league.

The Whitby club, assuming Murray was joining Des Moines as one of four pros the IHL teams are allowed to carry, had applied to the OHA for authorization to sign a replacement.

When it was discovered that the defenceman was to continue to play as an amateur, he was denied permission to join Des Moines since no transfer had been arranged.

Mets Sign Koosman

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets announced Thursday the signing of left-hander Jerry Koosman and three others for the 1975 National League baseball season.

Koosman, 31, was the club's top winner last season with a 15-11 record. He had an earned run average of 3.36 and tied with Jon Matlack for most innings pitched with 265.

It was Koosman's first winning season since 1970.

The Mets also signed right-hander Jerry Cram, infielder Jack Heidemann and catcher Luis Rosado.

Guess Who's Leading Desert Classic

Miller Good for Golf Says Mahaffey

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The total domination of pro golf by Johnny Miller is getting to be an old story, but his fellow tourists hold no malice.

"I know it's getting old," said John Mahaffey, who finished second to Miller in the Dean Martin-Tucson Open.

"I know people may be getting tired of it. But what he's doing is good for golf. And it's good . . . for the rest of us . . .

"He's set his standards, his goals so high, that the rest of us are putting our goals up higher, too.

"For example, I was out there today trying to shoot 62."

It didn't happen. He did shoot 67, however, and the front-running Miller followed his opening 64 with a 69 and stretched his in the second round of the $160,- lead to three strokes Thursday 000 Bob Hope [illegible] Golf Classic.

Miller, a total of 49 under par in his sweep of the Tucson and Phoenix Opens, had to scramble for his 69.

Tom Shaw shot the best round of the day—a six-under-par 66—and moved into a tie for second with Mac McLendon at 136. McLendon had another 68.

Mahaffey, along with rookie Bill Rogers, Australian Bruce Crampton, Miller Barber and Tom Jenkins followed at 137. Rogers had a 68, Crampton and Barber 69 and Jenkins a 71. All of the leaders but Shaw, McLendon and Crampton played at Tamarisk, one of four desert courses being used for the first four days of this unique, 90-hole, five-day tournament. Shaw was at Bermuda Dunes, which will be the site of the final round Sunday, McLendon at Indian Wells and Crampton at La Quinta.

Goerge Knudson of Toronto slipped to a 72 for a 141 total. Arnold Palmer also dropped to a 72 for 140.

"I thought everything was going to go in," said Miller, who holed three birdie putts of about 20 feet, once saved par from 15 feet and ran a 70-75 foot effort over the lip of the cup.

"I got ripped off on that one," he said. "It should have gone in."

He played poorly over the front nine—"I was kind of disoriented, like I didn't know where I was," he said—and only his putting got him through the nine in par 36.

Golden State Loses Game Team Thought Was Won

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The officials needed an escort Thursday night after Washington's Phil Chenier hit two free throws after the final buzzer to lift the Bullets to a 98-97 National Basketball Association victory over Golden State in Oakland.

The fans thought the foul—if one was committed—came after the game had ended with the Warriors on top 97-96.

"All I can say is I thought we won the game," said the Warriors' Butch Beard.

Chenier agreed with the officials, who had to be escorted off the court by security guards as the fans threw paper cups and beer on to the floor.

"Sure he hit me, right here" the Washington guard said, pointing to his right forearm.

Rick Barry, who led Golden State with 34 points, stole the ball and fed Jeff Mullins for a three-point play with one minute remaining that put the Tarriors ahead 97-96. But Barry missed two field goal attempts in the final minute and Washington came up with the ball with 11 seconds left.

Chenier led Washington with 31 points, 17 of them in the final quarter.

In other NBA games Thursday, Cleveland defeated Portland 98-90, Atlanta stopped Detroit 111-98, Kansas City-Omaha edged Milwaukee 95-94 and Phoenix downed Seattle 112-105.

Laurie Kreiner In Top Form

ROSSLAND, B.C. (CP) — Laurie Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., won the Can-Am downhill skiing title Thursday with a first-place finish in the first of two downhill events at Red Mountain near Trail, B.C.

Kreiner, 20, returned to the Can-Am circuit from World Cup competition in Europe in time to win downhills at Aspen, Colo., and Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Her win moved her to fifth from seventh in the women's over-all points race, and she has a chance to move higher if her performance is good at Mt. Baldy.

Kreiner went through the 22-gate, 7,200 foot women's course in 85.40 seconds, more than two seconds faster than U.S. skiier Lolly Moss.

Jeanette Zanier, formerly of Rossland now residing in Aspen, was third for the Canadians. Other Canadians in the top 10 were Joan Wilson of Port Hawkesbury, N.S., who finished seventh; and Sarah Satow, of North Vancouver, B.C., who was ninth.

In men's events Thursday, Steve Devin, of Seattle, Wash., moved into sole possession of fourth place in the men's overall standings with a first-place finish in 106.22 seconds. Bob Miller of North Vancouver, B.C., placed second in 107.31 seconds.

Scott Schimelfenig of Leavenworth, Wash., was third followed by Yvon Blackburn of Chicoutimi, Que. American skiiers Jamie Temple, Ned Ganz, Peter Patterson, Kelly Drake and Eric Steinberg took fifth through ninth spots followed by Rob Safrata of Willowdale, Ont.

Peter Dodge of St. Johnsbury, Vermont, and Schimelfenig are tied for first place in the overall men's standings followed by Russell Goodman of Montreal.

The Can-Am series was introduced five years ago to provide a stepping stone to World Cup competition. The downhill events Thursday and today bring the six-week series to a conclusion along with a giant slalom race at Mt. Baldyis Osoyoos, B.C., Sunday.

AGREES TO CONTRACT

CINCINNATI (AP) — Outfielder Pete Rose of Cincinnati Reds agreed Thursday to a contract for 1975, but the National League baseball club declined to discuss its terms. Rose has won six league batting championships and played in seven all-star games. He had threatened to take the case to arbitration after he was asked earlier to take a cut in his $180,000-a-year salary.
